Bad Drivers Need Prison, Fines: Report

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A task force which is studying B.C. driving laws has recommended that people who drive while under suspension be jailed.

In an interim report, the provincial government's Motor Vehicle Task Force also urges that the demerit point system be scrapped and that traffic violators be fined.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom, who set up the task force last July, says he is impressed with its findings.

"I really like this one," he said.

But because the task force still has a lot of work to do before presenting its final report, it is unlikely any of its interim recommendations will be implemented in legislation at the next session of the legislature which starts March 22.

Police in Greater Victoria generally welcomed the proposals.

Saanich police chief Bob Peterson said a return to the fine system is quite desirable and added mandatory jail sentences are a reasonably positive approach.

"There are so many drivers who just aren't paying attention to the penalties," he said.

"By handing out a jail term, particularly if it is mandatory, there will be fewer people driving while under suspension."

Victoria deputy police chief Jim Smith said the fine system used now seems to be largely meaningless.

"Police have been concerned for some time that there have to be heavier penalties . . . the current method is not successful.

"Jail may be the answer. I don't know. We should consider, however, what's it going to do to the jail system. Where are we going to put them all?"

The report recommends a penalty spread for driving offences ranging from mandatory jail terms to eliminating court appearances in some cases.

It says people convicted of driving while under suspension should be jailed and also recommends that drivers who have accumulated numerous points for traffic violations be fined and jailed if they don't pay up.

In urging fines instead of demerit points, it says the existing cumbersome and ineffective procedure for processing traffic offences is totally inappropriate for violators who show a flagrant disrespect for the law.

It All Began With Illegal U-Turn. . .

The following driving history was cited by the Motor Vehicle Task Force as a reason for recommending jail for people who drive under suspension.

It belongs to a 22-year-old Fort St. John man who accumulated 128 penalty points in a two-year stretch beginning with two points for making an illegal U-turn on April 19, 1976.

The man, whose name was not released, was never jailed and went on to earn another 126 points in various B.C. communities over the next 28 months, paying in the process, about $1,500 in fines.

Towards the end of his driving spree, the man was convicted of driving while his licence was suspended no fewer than six times for which he was assessed 60 penalty points.

But each time he disregarded the suspension and popped behind the wheel once more.

Along the way he racked up 24 penalty points for six convictions of driving without due care and attention, 15 points for five speeding convictions, 18 points for seven convictions of making excessive noise (he received no points for the first offence) including five convictions in less than two months in three separate communities.

Four times he was picked up for driving with bald tires and fined a total of $140. No points were assessed.

Driving through a stop sign, without insurance, on the wrong side of the road and failure to produce a driver's licence added more fines and points to his record.

'71 $ Now Worth 54 Cents

OTTAWA (CP) — The 1971 dollar now is worth 54 cents following February cost-of-living increases made public today.

Higher prices for beef and other food helped push the annual rate of inflation to 9.2 per cent in February, up from 8.9 per cent in January, Statistics Canada reported.

The reported Vancouver cost-of-living increase last month was 0.8 per cent or 8.1 per cent on a yearly basis. This compared with Edmonton's price jump of 1.3 per cent and annual inflation rate of 9.2 per cent.

StatsCan said its consumer price index showed a sharp rise of nine tenths of one per cent in the month with food prices accounting for about half that increase.

The federal agency said a basket of food cost 2.5 per cent more in February than it did in January and that same basket of food cost 16.1 per cent more than a year earlier.

The change in its consumer price index, which includes food and other goods and services bought by the average shopper, means it cost $184.40 in February to buy items it cost $182.70 to buy in January.

It would have cost $168.90 to buy the same goods and services a year ago.

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, said Canadians are feeling "the impact of the cheap dollar on prices of imported items," particularly food. The lower value of the dollar means goods bought abroad cost more.

He said he also doubts last November's reduction in the federal sales tax to nine per cent from 12 per cent is being passed on to consumers. The tax is applied at the manufacturing level.

"How can you get this inflation if that sales tax reduction is being passed on?" he said.

He predicted the higher-than-expected inflation will worsen the government spending deficit this year — estimated to be a record $12.1 billion — because of higher payments for such things as family allowances and old age security pen-

Ottawa Junking Postal Austerity

OTTAWA (CP) — With an election looming, the government has decided to extend door-to-door mail delivery to 160,000 new households across the country, Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said today.

Lamontagne acknowledged the cabinet decision was influenced by the pending federal election.

"But the question of 160,000 having service door-to-door, election or not, is a good thing," Lamontagne said at a news conference.

The government froze expansion of door-to-door delivery to new subdivisions in 1975 as an austerity move.

Lamontagne said he has been pushing for expanded door-to-door service since his appointment as postmaster-general a year ago and the cabinet finally lifted the freeze.

Was the election a big factor?

"Well, let's be honest, it didn't harm," said Lamontagne.

The government has reallocated $15 million and 800 additional person-years to the post office to expand delivery service.

The post office first must conduct surveys and consult the Letter Carriers Union of Canada about new routes, Lamontagne said.

Door-to-door delivery in new areas could begin as soon as a month from now in smaller subdivisions.

New suburbs around major centres will be the main targets for door-to-door delivery.

Lamontagne said the post office has reduced its deficit from $717 million fours years ago to a projected $370.9 million in 1979-80 fiscal year.

The expansion of door-to-door delivery is possible in part because of the improved financial picture, Lamontagne said.

When reporters asked about the political reasons, Lamontagne replied sarcastically: "Well, you know well that whatever we do these days is because of the election."

Lamontagne said members of opposition parties, particularly those from Western Canada, have been pressing in the Commons for door-to-door delivery.

"With these new initiatives, the post office will remain a force of unity in our country and an essential link between 23 million Canadians."

The decision, described by one Liberal as "a highly political move" would end a chronic complaint by constituents in newly-constructed residential areas.

Laden Tanker Splits off N.S.

HALIFAX (CP) — Environment department officials estimated today that about a third of the 29,662 to[illegible]f heavy Bunker C oil has leaked from the British tanker Kurdistan which broke in two Thursday night during a storm in the Cabot Strait.

Officials said the bow and stern sections of the broken ship were drifting slowly southeastward.

"No one knows where the spilled oil is . . . but is not seen as a threat," a federal information officer said.

Officials believe the ship, carrying the heavy oil from Port Hawkesbury, N.S., to Sept-Isles, Que., hit a submerged iceberg.

The vessel is owned by Nile Shipping Co. Ltd. of Newcastle, Eng., and under charter to Ultramar.

The Kurdistan's 40 crew members were rescued from two lifeboats Thursday night and the ship's first officer, Capt. Ronnie Bell of Blyth, Eng., trapped on the stern section overnight, was picked up by a Canadian Forces helicopter this morning.

U.S. Law After Father

Extradition proceedings have been initiated against a man who police say fled to the United States with his two children in defiance of a B.C. Supreme Court custody order, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday.

A warrant for the arrest of Peter Ericksen has been out since last July 11, Gardom added.

He said U.S. authorities were asked earlier to find and deport the three because they had entered the country illegally but no extradition proceedings were started then.

The government has said it is reconsidering its policy against extraditing one parent who flees Canada with children in the legal custody of the other parent — a policy it has defended as being in the best interests of the children.

The issue arose after it was disclosed that Lee McFayden of Cawston, had not heard from her two sons Carl, 10, and Craig, 9, for eight months.

RCMP in Cawston charged Ericksen with criminal abduction.

Heroin Bust

Three persons were arrested and about 25 grams of heroin worth $35,000 on the street seized after members of the RCMP drug squad raided a house at 315 Montreal Thursday night.

Two men and a woman were to appear in provincial court today charged with possession of heroin for the purposes of trafficking.

Provincial Park Rates Boosted

Overnight fees charged in provincial parks will go up this summer, the Times has learned.

Parks with top facilities now charge campers $4 per night and this will rise to $5. There are 29 parks in that category throughout B.C.

Rougher parks, with gravel roads and no running water, will increase their fee from $2 to $3 a night. There are 51 such parks in the province.

Parks officials today refused to confirm the fee hikes.

"We have made some recommendations to the minister, but they went in a confidential memo, so he'd have to be the one to confirm it," said the representative.

Parks Minister Jim Chabot was unavailable for comment.

BCRIC Shares Pushed in Schools

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

An aggressive campaign by some Greater Victoria financial institutions to have students buy B.C. Resources Investment Corp. shares has been condemned as exploitation by local school districts.

The lucrative share-signing business — financial institutions receive $5 a head for processing BCRIC share applications — has invaded the public school system and administrators are hopping mad.

Soliciting on school property is prohibited and so are deals between banks, credit unions or other financial institutions and students councils, two district superintendents said today.

An order to principals not to let their schools be exploited as distribution outlets for financial institutions was issued by Greater Victoria schools superintendent Allan Stables.

"It's absolutely against board policy. I wouldn't call it immoral, but it's definitely interfering with education," Stables said.

And school board chairman Carol Pickup said today any deals made are without school board knowledge or consent.

Saanich superintendent Don Smyth said he will launch immediate investigations to determine if any under-the-counter agreements are being made in schools.

Smyth said one bank branch in Sidney asked permission to set up a booth in a school, but was turned down. He said he knows of no deals with student councils.

"But these under-the-counter deals won't be obvious to us until its all over," Smyth said.

A Westcoast Savings Credit Union spokesman said today its drive to collect applications includes Greater Victoria, Saanich and Sooke school districts.

So far the credit union has made a deal with at least one Victoria high school and the student council of Camosun College.

Soliciting on school property is illegal but Grant Hilliard said it's easy to get around the problem by having student councils refer students to them.

Hilliard said Westcoast is not the most aggressive financial institution and that others have ventured into shopping malls, large corporations and the public school system.

"It's very hectic. People are out in the marketplace promoting this share issue," Hilliard said.

Westcoast offers a flat rate for each student referral. The student council will get a lump sum donation after the June 15 share sale deadline.

Hilliard said Westcoast was the first financial institution to offer school student councils donations but the idea was copied by many other firms.

But he added Westcoast,

PM 'Horsewhips' Clark

By PATRICK NAGLE

VANCOUVER (FP) — Using sarcasm, insults and satire, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau Thursday night drew a word picture of opposition leader Joe Clark as a fumblemouth and a weakling for a cheering partisan crowd at a fund-raising dinner here.

The audience of 1,200 had paid $125 a plate for a chicken dinner and a bottle of domestic white wine, the Liberal Party having cut back on the usual lavishness of such events in order to put more money in their treasury.

After going through his standard pitch that Canada needs strong leadership at this crucial period in history, Trudeau homed in like a dive-bomber on Clark's recent policy statements.

"I just do not have confidence that he (Clark) will take a stand until he looks around to see if anyone else is standing," Trudeau said. "Or at least until he is sure the Tory premiers are standing."

The prime minister elicited happy hoots of derision as he mocked Clark by quoting verbatim an off-the-cuff statement the Tory chief had made trying to explain the party's stand on deficit financing.

After mimicking Clark's convoluted statement, including long pauses, false starts, and retractions Trudeau concluded:

"This is the party which says the economy is their issue. I sincerely hope all Canadians will join me in a moment of non-partisan prayer."

Trudeau said Clark would "fade into the background" if there was a confrontation between Ontario and Alberta over energy policy.

The Tories' energy policy was exactly the same as the Liberals except where the provinces disagree, he said.

"What is their policy on pricing?" he asked. "It doesn't exist."

The Prime Minister said one of the lessons of Canadian history was that a strong "national referee" was needed to mediate regional differences.

Trudeau said he would like to tell the crowd about election day.

"I can't announce the date because I haven't talked to the governor-general yet," he said. "I'm sure you would not ask me to downgrade the monarchy."

Earlier Thursday, Trudeau apologized for his displays of temper at the conclusion of a question and answer session with students at the University of British Columbia.

More than a thousand were jammed into the student union building auditorium at the university as the prime minister arrived 10 minutes late.

During almost an hour of give and take Trudeau called one questioner a creep, threw a paper airplane back into the crowd from whence it came and almost walked off the stage at one point when the public address microphone broke down.

The students responded by shouting "boring" at frequent intervals, and by hissing at what they felt were inadequate answers concerning student tax subsidies, but they ended up applauding as the prime minister toughed it out in the face of some hostile and irrelevant questions.

When it was over, Trudeau said: "I'm sorry if I did sound aggressive, I guess it's the lunch I had."

The Prime Minister returned to Ottawa at 10 o'clock this morning.

A high-level U.S. delegation will head for the Middle East today in an last-ditch attempt to persuade Arab leaders to change their minds and support a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

The four-man U.S. delegation will meet with leaders of two moderate Arab states, Saudi Arabia and Jordan, the White House announced today.

The delegation includes President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski and Carter's son, Chip.

(Meanwhile, Washington observers are wondering whether Carter's fat-out-of-the-fire Middle East shuttle really produced a miracle or whether the entire thing was a slickly-manoeuvred public relations trick. See story on Page 41.)

Arab hard-liners today intensified their verbal attacks on the pending Egypt-Israel treaty.

LLEWELLYN

A London theatre director now says his charges that Roddy Llewellyn, an intimate friend of Princess Margaret, committed adultery with his wife are untrue. Michael Kelly's admission was made in a joint statement by lawyers for Kelly and his wife. The director said he was dropping his divorce action against his wife, in which he named Llewellyn as correspondent. The lawyers said the statement was issued "in the hope that it will bring an end to the recent publicity concerning the marriage and avoid further distress to the other persons who have been affected by that publicity."

He was Robert E. Lee for 56 years before he changed his name to Roberto Eduardo Leon last month. The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission says the name change isn't enough to make him a member of a minority. Lee, a $27,857-a-year engineer for Montgomery County, Md., legally changed his name Feb. 21. Then he asked personnel officials for the county to designate him Hispanic so he could get preferential job treatment. But EEOC officials spotted news reports of the name change and the reclassification.

Suddenly, Superman isn't quite as fast as a speeding bullet, and he refuses to leap any more tall buildings with a single bound. So the producers of the movie that made a star of Christopher Reeves in the Man of Steel role are suing him. The action, by Film Trust and International Film Productions, was filed in New York Thursday. It charges Reeves contracted last year to make two Superman movies, but now refuses to finish the sequel.

His gasoline was paid for by the Shah of Iran and his way across international borders smoothed by U.S. President Jimmy Carter, but the snows of northern Ontario were more than his snowmobile could handle, so Lester Wolfe is home in Silverdale, Wash., planning his next attempt to snowmobile 6,700 kilometres. Wolfe, 42, left Pickle Lake, 350 kilometres northwest of Thunder Bay, Ont. in December, planning to ride a snowmobile across northern Canada to Fairbanks, Alaska, in 60 days. He got about 400 kilometres. "I was going good until I got into deep snow," he said. "The engine just wasn't good enough." Wolfe said he was able to make it 50 kilometres to the Round Lake Indian reserve. A DC-3 plane happened to be there delivering fuel and flew the snowmobile back to Pickle Lake. The snowmobile is still there waiting for a bigger engine and next winter. Wolfe, married, with six children, ages 10 to 20, says his family doesn't want him to go back but understands. "They know it's what I want to do so they're behind me," he said. "This is my goal. If it takes a dozen times, I'll just keep trying."

Two stocking-masked men, one of them armed, burst into a San Francisco cocktail party being given for conductor Leonard Slatkin of the New Orleans Philharmonic Symphony and robbed the guests of as much as $100,000 in jewels, cash, cheques and credit cards. Police said one of the 21 victims lost a cheque for $1,000 and others lost jewelry during the holdup Thursday at a home in the city's fashionable Sea Cliff neighborhood.

Pizza deliveryman Lionel Williams was sentenced Thursday to at least 51 years in prison for killing actor Sal Mineo and committing 10 robberies. Judge Bonnie Lee Martin of the California Superior Court said: "The defendant should be committed to state prison for as long as the law allows."

The mass murder-suicide of Jim Jones and his Peoples Temple followers in Guyana last November will be depicted in a movie being filmed in Mexico. Director and co-producer Rene Cardona says Guyana: the Crime of the Century has the largest budget of any Mexican-produced film ever produced and a cast of nearly 1,000. Names have been changed, but Stuart Whitman stars as its Jones-like lead character and Bradford Dillman plays the commune's doctor.

Finally, it may sound a trifle potty, but a man who contends he was injured in the collapse of a portable camp toilet wants $75,000 in damages from the firm that made the utensil. Frank Herhahn of Albuquerque filed suit alleging U.S. Industries Inc., which manufactured the toilet under the Seaway Products brand, was negligent because it failed to warn the user of risks involved if the toilet was used by an adult. He said the advertisement for the toilet said it could be used by "fishermen and vacationers." Herhahn maintains he was injured last May on a camping trip when he was sitting on the toilet and it collapsed. He did not specify what type of injury he suffered.

'Bloody Close' Mid-Air Near Miss Over N.Y.

NEW YORK (Reuter) — British Airways has reported the first known mid-air "near miss" involving a Concorde.

"This was bloody close," a British Airways spokesman said of the incident Thursday.

The London-New York flight, carrying 57 passengers and nine crew, came within 300 metres of a single-engine Cessna here as the Concorde was making a morning approach about 37 kilometres east of Kennedy Airport, said a complaint filed by the Concorde's pilot.

Soon after the complaint was filed, the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration said the Cessna had been in its proper airspace.

Chinese Now Invade Laos In Support of Rightists

BANGKOK (UPI) — Laos today charged two Chinese battalions have crossed the border and pushed four kilometres miles into the country and called the Chinese "devils in saints' clothing."

The official Vientiane Radio broadcast coincided with reports today from Peking quoting Communist Party chairman and prime minister, Hua Guofeng (Hua Kuo-feng), as saying China had completed it withdrawal from Vietnam.

There was no independent confirmation available today of either the Chinese claims its pullout had been completed or of the Laotian invasion reports.

The Chinese "have long worked to overthrow the Laotian government," the broadcast said, and were arming "thousands" of rightist hill tribesmen opposed to the pro-Vietnamese regime.

"Cleverly concealing their nature of devils in saints' clothing," the broadcast said, "they have stubbornly denied and distorted facts, blamed Laos for taking a major anti-China step and openly accused Laos of being instigated by and of following the Soviet Union and Vietnam."

The broadcast said the invasion occurred at two separate places along the rugged jungle frontier and that two Laotian envoys sent to Chinese lines to demand the troops pull out were arrested.

The first Chinese push — apparently unopposed by Laotian or Vietnamese forces in the area — occurred March 7, the same day Laos demanded China pull out its road engineers and aid experts, Vientiane radio said.

The broadcast also charged China was "daily increasing its troops along the frontier, including tanks, armored vehicles, artillery, infantry and cavalry," and demanded China stop.

The official protest charged Chinese infiltrators with gathering and aiding rightist supporters of exiled hill tribe Gen. Vang Pao, who is in the United States, and Kong Le, who is in France.

Intelligence analysts said there was some evidence the Chinese had supplied weapons to hill tribesmen and rightists.

Japan's Kyodo News Agency, in a report from Peking today, said Hua told a visiting Tokyo delegation the troop pullout from Vietnam had ended Thursday night.

Vietnam had no initial argument with the claim and Vietnamese deputy foreign minister Phan Hien told newsmen in Hanoi that Vietnam was ready to open peace talks with Peking a week after the withdrawal.

A pro forma ritual

One does not lightly analyze the Alberta voter for fear of insulting or alienating a province upon which the well-being of the rest of the country depends so heavily. However, Premier Peter Lougheed's overwhelming re-election victory this week is not the clear-cut affair it seems.

The Tories' win does hand Lougheed the endorsement he wanted to show Ottawa that he has the people's support in the province's continuing battle over the price of oil and gas. But Lougheed's ability to conjure up a stunning victory was never once in doubt. All four political parties campaigned like spendthrifts who had suddenly come into an inheritance. However, only the Tories, in their position as government, actually had the power to spend some of it. All the pundits could argue about was how big the Conservative majority would be.

The election resembled more the pro forma rituals of eastern Europe or some machine-dominated U.S. cities than the usual Canadian battle. The Tories simply chewed up the three opposition parties and spat them out. There is more than a grain of truth to the jokes about "King Peter."

The preference of Albertans for swarming together at election time is difficult to explain. Many of them have come from somewhere else in Canada where elections are more evenhanded affairs and Alberta's brand of one-party politics is uncommon.

Whatever the causes — lingering memories of the depression when you had to co-operate with your neighbors; a fortress mentality fed by thoughts that Canada is going to take away its oil and gas — Alberta's voters definitely tend to vote en bloc.

In the campaign, the rest of Canada watched enviously as the goodies were distributed. Less attractive was Lougheed's tendency to make it a war between "us Albertans" and "them" — eastern Canadians who were trying to "change the rules of the game in the third quarter just when we are starting to score some points."

A latent paranoia hovers over Alberta. The sincere pleas from Ottawa to have some consideration for the common good seem only to encourage the province's persecution complex. The richer Albertans get, the more nervous they become.

Lougheed has the undisputed backing of his province and can bargain from a position of strength. The national government in Ottawa is a lame duck that may be replaced by an untried and inexperienced administration. He can afford to lower his guard a little and begin thinking of his country without being accused of betraying the sovereign state of Alberta.

With the province's riches and the determination of its people, Peter Lougheed could help preserve Canada if only he dared to seize the waiting opportunity.

A grain of salt

The statement by developer Hans Hartwig that he is cancelling plans for his $5.5 million building project on the Inner Harbor should be taken with a grain of salt.

Hartwig said this week that he is so exasperated with the run-around he has received from city council in trying to get the project under way that he is simply abandoning the whole idea.

It's hard not to have some sympathy with Hartwig. He's been extricating the Inner Harbor project from one tangle of red tape after another for more than two years now and still can't get the approvals necessary for construction to begin.

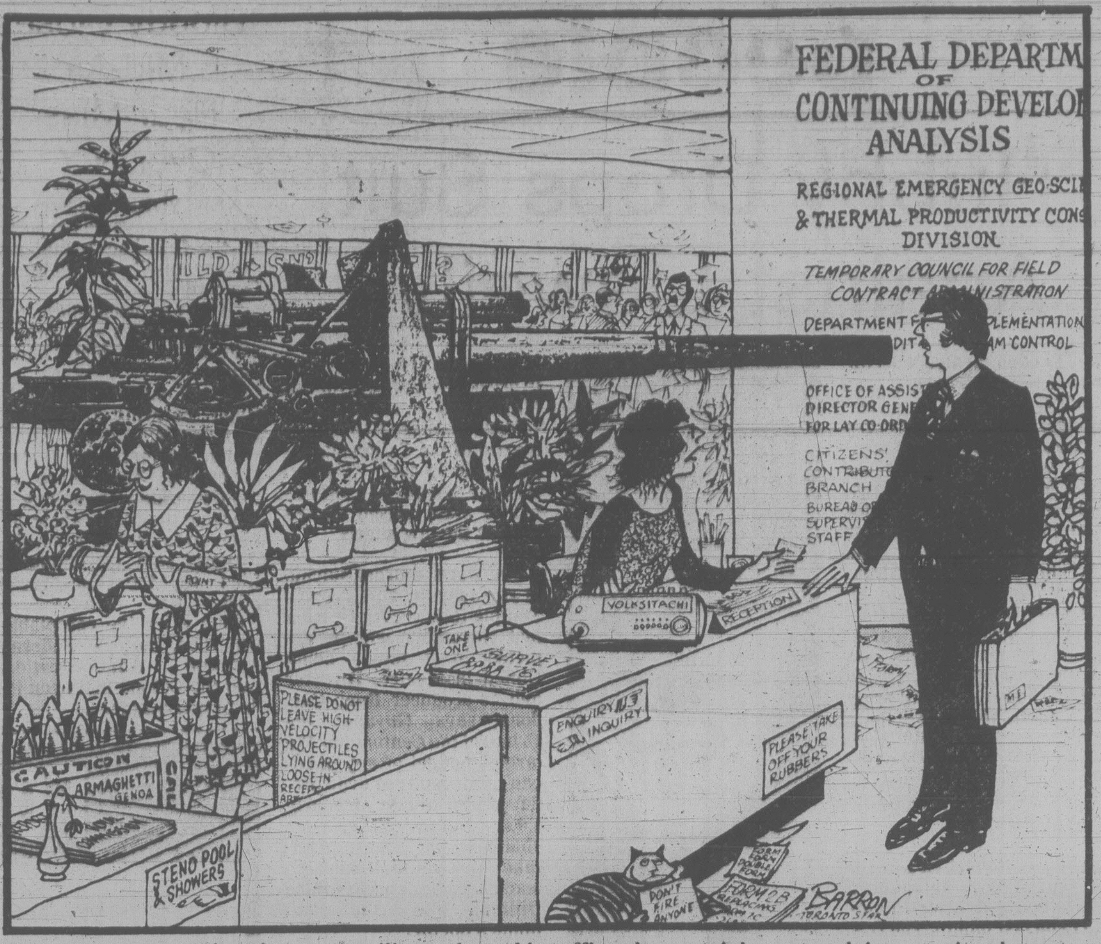
At the same time, however, it seems most unlikely that Hartwig will let the site sit vacant for longer than is necessary. He is stuck paying taxes on a highly valuable piece of commercial land whether he builds on it or not; it would be illogical for him to keep it vacant when it could be bringing in revenue with a development there.

What should be of concern to Victorians is the possibility that the final development will be much less suitable for the site than the one that council and its committees now are dickering over.

For example, under current provincial law, council can control the design of the building on the site but not the density or the land use. Density of the building Hartwig proposes is only 75 per cent of the maximum allowed; he could conceivably end up with a new plan making the site seem much more overcrowded than the current plan does. But any suggestion by council that no building of the maximum density could meet acceptable design standards would undoubtedly be seen as an attempt to control the density indirectly, something council is not allowed to do.

In these circumstances, council really has only two choices. It can decide that a building on that site is totally unacceptable and be prepared to accept the legal and political consequenses of that. Alternatively, and more sensibly, it can settle down and make every effort to reach a speedy and reasonable agreement with Hartwig on the matters needed before final approval is given.

It should not rely on the pipe dream that Hartwig will be willing to leave the site vacant for long.



"... sure, our union is very militant but this office is certainly not relying on it alone to combat public resistance to high government payrolls ... no one is going to be fired around here ..."

CLAUDE ADAMS

What's in a name change?

WASHINGTON — Robert Earl Lee, a retired 56-year-old navy captain, never really doubted that the U.S. is a land of opportunity. He just wanted to stretch the point a bit.

Lee earns $28,000 a year as an engineer with the county government in nearby Rockville, Md. He was a naval academy classmate of Jimmy Carter. He has lived a good comfortable life.

Robert Lee is a white native American. Last month, Lee decided to change his race. So he changed his name to Roberto Eduardo Leon and filled out a form with his employer stating that, henceforth, he wished to be classified as a member of the Spanish-American minority.

Loophole closed by feds

Legal name changes are not unusual in the U.S. Thousands of people do it every year. But the kicker in Lee's case is that, as a "born again" member of a minority group, he figures he is now eligible for preferential treatment in his job.

In short, Lee (or Leon) is convinced that under the country's affirmative action program (which gives ethnics special employment treatment in certain situations) he has a much better chance for promotion.

He may have a case. Says his boss, Eric Mendelsohn: "He has a knack for figuring out loopholes in things. Bob, I mean Roberto, is a highly regarded professional, a little eccentric in some ways. It's nice to have an Hispanic on our staff."

The affirmative action program in Montgomery County defines minorities as "black, Asian American, American Indian, Spanish-surnamed and other." The loophole is in "Spanish-surnamed."

Federal programs were reworded two years ago to close this loophole, by substituting "Hispanic" for "Spanish-surnamed." But the county never followed suit. It was stuck with the legal discrepancy, and Lee took advantage of it.

Leon says his grandfather was of Spanish origin, and that he would like to live in Chile in his old age.

Peter Chen, the country's director of employee relations, concedes that he is prepared to consider Leon as an Hispanic in forms that he must fill out for the federal government.

But the special treatment will end there. "His name change and 25 cents will get him a cup of coffee," Chen said in an interview. "I mean, the guy could change his name to Mao Tse-tung if he wants to, but it won't give him a special edge for promotion."

What Leon overlooked is the fact that affirmative action — a national program to correct historic discrimination against minorities — breaks down if there is not good faith on both sides.

When the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration first announced its "getaway special," some Americans saw an opportunity to put their dogs in orbit or to send a letter to mother via the ionosphere. It sounded like just that kind of scatter-brained project.

After all, here was offering people a chance to send a personal payload into outer space aboard the U.S. space shuttle when it becomes operational in 1981.

But the agency quickly put these ideas to rest by insisting that the shuttle would only rent out space to serious participants. The word was: "Nothing frivolous."

In the past few months, 281 potential customers have lined up to take part in this futuristic venture, with applications to rent a few cubic feet on the spacecraft. Shuttle flights will begin in 1981 and continue through 1992.

No human beings

Among them are service clubs, universities (who are using their rented space to lure top students), corporations (who envisage ads for products "tested in space") and a handful of individuals.

Most of their projects are research-oriented, to test how organic or manufactured materials will function in weightlessness. Some high schools are also taking part. A typical high school project, for example, is to see how bacteria that cause tooth decay proliferate at zero gravity.

The rental charge turned off most frivolous applicants — a freight rate of $10,000 for a maximum of five cubic feet of space.

The payloads, wedged in among satellites and other NASA equipment that will comprise the main cargo, will whiz around the globe for a period of about a week at an orbit of about 160 kilometres up.

On one point NASA is insistent: No human cargo will be accepted.

CRTC tells TV to shape up

OTTAWA — In a dramatic slap in the face to Canadian broadcasters, the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission will announce at the end of this month that it is renewing the licences of both the CBC and the CTV networks for minimum periods of 12 to 18 months rather than for the customary five-year terms.

These short term renewals will be designed to express the CRTC's displeasure, as much at the private CTV network for failing to take seriously its responsibilities for Canadian programming, as at the CBC for failing to respond to the needs of its audiences.

At the same time as it allows the two networks the shortest possible renewals of their licences, the commission will announce that it will undertake a public inquiry, either into the CBC alone or into the private as well as the public networks. Either inquiry would be conducted, as was that in 1977 into charges of separatist bias within the CBC, by a special panel composed both of CRTC members and of outside experts.

'Abysmal performance'

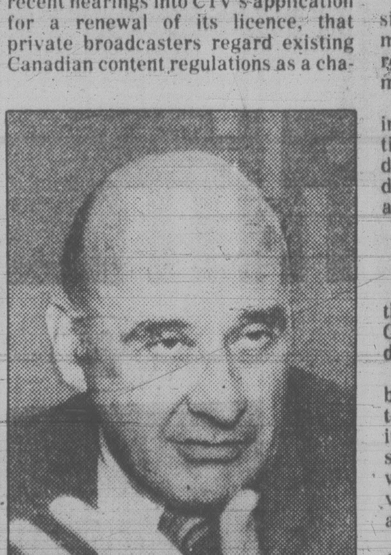
Decisions about short term tactics rather than about long term goals will determine whether the CRTC limits its inquiry to the CBC alone or launches itself into the first full scale study broadcasting since the 1965 study by the Fowler commission.

In the case of CTV, the commission may decide to treat that network separately, and immediately, by attaching stringent new Canadian content requirements to the renewal of its licence.

Within the commission, "hawks" argue that CTV's Canadian content performance has been so abysmal that no delay in taking action, by way of conditions attached to the renewal of the network's licence, is justified; "doves" argue that a full scale study is needed to examine possible new types of content regulation, such as, for example the Australian system under which broadcasters are given content bonus points for priority programs such as drama.

Two factors seem to have pushed the CRTC to a militancy that could make or break the commission itself. If broadcasters ignore its new directives, the CRTC would have exhausted its alternatives other than either to withdraw a network's licence, a step that is virtually impossible politically, or to recommend its own dismemberment because it is powerless to regulate the broadcasting industry.

One cause of militancy is the conviction developed among a majority of CRTC members, and triggered by the recent hearings into CTV's application for a renewal of its licence, that private broadcasters regard existing Canadian content regulations as a charade to distract the public's attention from automatic licence renewals.



PIERRE CAMU
... CRTC chairman takes offensive

CTV, for example, since its last licence renewal in 1976, has slashed Canadian content to one-half hour a week from two hours a week during the key 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. time slot. The network's drama assignments for Canadian actors have dropped from 3,129 in the three years before to 333 since its last licence renewal. Except for news and public affairs, Canadian content requirements are met essentially by repeats, by heavy programming in the low-viewing summer period, and by neutered co-productions for U.S. networks like Police Surgeon and The New Avengers.

Militancy (perhaps in this instance a better word would be desperation) has been inspired within the CRTC as well by the finding, contained in a statistical report made public this week, that the CBC's share of the tv audience in English Canada has collapsed, from 47 per cent to 24 per cent, during the decade 1967-77.

"If the CBC is to remain indispensible to Canadians," the CRTC comments in the concluding chapter of its report, "new and imaginative steps must be taken immediately."

As telling is the CRTC's succeeding comment that in direct contradiction of the arguments of CBC president Al Johnson, "It is extremely doubtful that more money alone is the answer".

CRTC wants choices

It's premature to speculate about the new directions toward which the CRTC may try to prod and pull Canadian broadcasters.

One hint was dropped a week ago by commissioner Roy Faibish when he told Global TV that its decision to shift its night newscast from 10 p.m. to the same 11 p.m. slot as the other networks, and so reduce the choice of viewers, had "put your licence in jeopardy."

The same theme of choice, even if for limited audiences, is sounded in this week's statistical report. "Real communication may be the opposite of mass diffusion of programing," states the report. "The range of viewers reached is much more relevant and important that the numerical size of any particular audience."

To make an uninformed guess — as opposed to the infored guess upon which the initial paragraphs of this column are based — the CRTC is groping its way toward a policy of using stick and carrot to get Canadian broadcasters to produce specifically Canadian programs that will appeal to specific Canadian audiences, no matter their size. All that's certain is that the CRTC has at last decided to open up to public view the present charade in which the commission itself, since it protects existing licence-holders from competition, plays as large a part as any broadcaster.

A letter to Premier Bill Bennett:

Recently I received your letter outlining the procurement of the five free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. It thrills me very much to have the opportunity not only to receive the five free shares but the greater advantage of being able to purchase an additional 5,000 shares. Thank you very much.

Unfortunately, when I spoke to my bank manager, she advised me that the free shares could not be used as collateral for purchasing the additional shares. It seems this is bank policy.

Surely, Mr. Bennett, you could make some provisions for those British Columbians such as myself who do not have the financial ability to purchase additional shares at this time. Perhaps a fund could be established lending prospective purchasers the money at bank interest but holding the shares as collateral.

How else is one able to exercise his democratic right in purchasing the stock at its lowest price when he is unable to gain financing? Or is this offering of shares merely an exercise for placing the shares of BCRIC into the hands of the wealthy at below market value? Because I assure you I am not rich! — Nickolas J. Antoniak.

A farmer's life

Re: your editorial on Feb. 12 Poor Farmer? I hope you are not so naive as to think that what you wrote is the truth!

Where you state there are two people who want in for each farmer that gets out it should be that 10 want to get in but none actually can.

A small businessman works from 8 a.m. til maybe 6 p.m. and can easily grow most of his fruit and vegetables in his backyard if he is so inclined. Farmers, both big and small, usually work from dawn or earlier until dark or later during the growing season.

I have heard of sheep farmers who move their bed to the barn during lambing season. Just now we are on 24 hour watch with a very pregnant cow. Our neighbors have closed circuit television to watch their dairy herd, but just the same he has to wake up and check every couple of hours and if all is okay try and get back to sleep — if all is not he gets dressed and heads for the barn.

A beef rancher can supply his own beef and that's about all. A hog farmer can't eat pork and pork products three meals a day, and a chicken farmer needs more than eggs to survive on. A vegetable farmer may be vegetarian, but his wife and family may need some milk, eggs, fruit, meat etc. Also, all food produced for sale and consumed at home is classed as part of a farmer's income for Tax purposes!

A businessman can hire his wife as sales clerk, bookkeeper etc. and pay her wages, thus taking the money from one pocket to the other and keeping it in the family. A farmer cannot pay his wife wages, though she works beside him in he fields and barns and does the bookkeeping during the evening.

The portion of mortgage payments that is tax deductible is only the interest, not the entire mortgage payment, as you imply. The interest on the farm home is not deductible either, only money borrowed for the actual farm enterprise rates this special treatment.

Perhaps half the farmers do run their farms as hobby farms, but I'd be willing to bet most of them don't farm because they want to. They have to, in order to keep going until harvest time and then the harvest money must be used to buy next season's seed, fertilizer, sprays, young stock etc.

As far as adding the capital appreciation — I'd like to see you try to live on that money and raise a family etc. You can't say: "Charge my family's food, clothing, education etc. until I sell my farm." It just doesn't work that way!

Anyone who bought property several years ago and has looked after their home should add capital appreciation to their investment, and with the wages they have received that should have been able to buy lots of RRSPs and with six weeks or more holidays each year, have their smaller retirement home all ready to move into when the time comes. At retirement time the farmer has his farm and that's all. — Gladys Raper, 6278 Welch Road.

There's difference

What is the difference? The Inuit and Indians hunt the seals as well as the white men. The difference is religion. The "uncivilized" people live their religion in harmony with the universe, with their Great Spirit. They hunt to eat, to keep alive. They give the seals time to grow big enough to give them meat as well as fur. The white men kill for profit. They kill at the time of birth. They cannot see the divine beauty of birth. Are the seals not God's creatures as well as we human beings are?

We cannot serve two masters. — Henry Schmidt, 765 Arden Road.

Bully for our side!

By DENNIS BRAITHWAITE
Toronto Star

Drying Up The Streets was the best American drama the CBC has put on in years.

It had violence, sex (hetero, homo, miscegenational), drugs, child pornography and implied racism. It showed us what really goes on in the awful world of massage parlors, topless bars, heroin addiction an prostitution.

It was skilfully written, produced, directed and acted.

Only trouble was, this kind of thing has been done so many times on the American networks — Little Ladies Of The Night, Go Ask Alice, the recent Taxi Driver — that it has become a cliche.

The runaway teenager meets that newest of film stereotypes, the black pimp in the white sombrero, is drugged or otherwise induced into becoming a hooker, engages the sympathies of an older man (cop, social worker, or in this case, dried-out drug addict, played by Don Francks) and is either rescued from her life of hell or is not. (This time she was).

The CBC version — vaguely, but not necessarily set in Toronto, was different from its predecessors only in degree. It used rougher language and showed us a little more raw violence than the American commercial networks like to get into. Bully for our side!

Since such sordid events happen in Canadian cities as well as American, the CBC play could be said to have relevance to a certain kind of life as it is lived in this country.

All that leaves us with is the gloomy realization that we're not really any different from the Yanks, after all. Any rotten thing they can do, we can do rottener.

Where, then, is the "distinctive Canadian culture" that we subsidize public bodies like the CBC to protect and foster? Drying Up The Streets could, and probably will, be shown on an American station and be taken by its audience as one more revelation of the underside of life in a big U.S. city.

There was nothing specifically Canadian, or tangenitally, for that matter, about it.

Then, what's the point? Why spend all that money and creative energy on something the Americans do as well, or better, instead of simply buying the American product, at a fraction of the cost?

Giving Canadian actors and creators employment is part of the CBC's mandate, too, of course. Then why not engage their talents in producing something that is unmistakably Canadian, if that is possible?

If there is nothing about Toronto's Yonge Street underworld that is the least bit different from its counterparts in New York or Los Angeles, couldn't the play at least have made some point about this sort of thing taking place in Toronto the Good?

Why was none of the political controversy surrounding the Yonge St. Strip worked into the script? Ralph Thomas, the producer, made his reputation with CBC "docudramas"; a little local documentation would have improved the melodrama immensely by giving it some weight.

lf6. What was this, after all, but an ambitious Canadian imitation of the by now commonplace American drug-prostitution film — or its cleaned-up version seen every week on series like Kojak?

There wasn't an ounce of originality in the whole 90 minutes, let alone a smidgin of that peculiarly Canadian social and cultural ambience that makes us unique in all the world.

Or am I just being naive?

Bad news for the policitians

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — The bad news for politicians as they gear up for a national election is that most of the people out there don't like or trust them.

The conclusion emerges irresistibly from in-depth interviews with about 2,500 voters after the last election, now reported and analyzed in Political Choice in Canada, published by McGraw-Hill Ryerson. . . .

"Perhaps the most striking impression to be gained from the data . . . is the overwhelmingly negative feelings Canadians have toward politics in this country," report the political scientists who designed the survey and analysed the results, John Pammett and Jane Jenson of Carleton University in Ottawa, and Harold Clarke and Lawrence LeDuc of the University of Windsor.

"Politicians tend to be seen by Canadians as 'terrible,' as 'crooked,' as 'doing a bad job, as 'out for themselves,' as 'wasting the money we pay in taxes,' as 'serving the big interests,' and as 'generally ineffectual,' " say the authors.

Asked to write on a map of Canada the phrase which best described politics in Canada, 50 per cent wrote negative comments, 30 per cent neutral and only 20 per cent positive.

Voters, of course, respond to different incentives. One of the cliches of Canadian politics is that regional interests are dominant in deciding which party will get the most support. This study questions that idea, suggesting it is "unlikely that regional consciousness will provide a major explanatory variable in the definition of Canadian party politics and in the explanation of Canadian electoral behavior . . ."

Looking at issues, the researchers argue that to have an important effect on voting, an issue must be salient — that is, prominent — linked to one party, and be seen by the electorate as having one solution, rather than a variety of possible solutions. Using these measures, the researchers probed the issues of foreign investment, bilingualism, majority government and inflation — and decided that none had "a critical and widespread effect in the 1974 election."

The good news for politicians on the eve of the campaign is that while most people don't like or trust them and the issues aren't clear or perhaps even decisive, the election is still to be won and lost in the minds of marginal voters.

"The Liberal party has won most of the Canadian federal elections held in this century," say the authors . . . "The implication of our analysis, however, is that the pattern of Liberal dominance is more apparent than real. The composition of the electorate changes substantially at each election with infusions of newly eligible voters and mobilization of different groups of transient voters. In addition, there is a substantial amount of vote-switching from one election to the next. Since many of these switchers, transients, and new voters are motivated by the issues, party leaders, and local candidates associated with a particular election, the possibilities for dramatic election reverses, such as the Conservative victories in 1957 and 1958, are always present."

So go to it, candidates, in 1979, and we'll figure out later what happened to voter opinion, and why.

Are we blind to the problems of drink?

By JILL TWEEDIE
Manchester Guardian

Drunks are not a figure of fun for me — they are among the most deeply boring people on earth, because they are so utterly predictable. I remember a friend with, thank heavens, many other saving graces, whose behavior after four whiskeys was always exactly the same: six verses of Green Grow the Rushes O, one chorus of Knocked 'Em in the Old Kent Road, a short burst of tears as he recalled his ghastly mother and crash, he hit the floor for the rest of the evening. Even under the panic and fear aroused by violent drunks lies the yawning chasm of boredom — he'll break three dishes, boot the cat across the floor, swear at me for five minutes and then start hitting me.

In wives, drunks may arouse some sympathy; in children, very little but fear and hate. One girl told me how she came home from school one day, opened the front door and saw down the corridor the swinging feet of her alcoholic father, hanged. "Oh, I felt so happy," she said. "I went belting down the road to find my mother and tell her we were alright now."

At age 20 I discovered I could drink strong men under the table and never turn a carefully backcombed hair. It was then that I first rejected the idea of male superiority — it is extremely difficult to feel inferior when you are merrily compos mentis and your male companion has stretched his snoring length upon the floor. But that, in itself, says a lot about our general attitude to alcohol. Drink was a test of manhood, the man who couldn't carry his drink was to be despised and I, who could, was full of empty pride. No wonder the attempt to down a lot of fermented liquid is one of the first initiation rites of male adolescents and no wonder many parents smile secretly to themselves at their young son's staggers, however much they may upbraid him in public.

Oddly neglected

Of course we all know and deplore the effect alcohol can have on some, but then, we argue, all good things can be abused and turned from a blessing to a cross. Moderation is the key and if some do not practise moderation, then they must pay the penalty and not expect us, the moderate, to deprive ourselves of a seemly pleasure. And yet, in a decade that has put governmental health warnings on cigarettes and is about to make seat belts compulsory, drink hazards seem oddly neglected. No one ever battered the living daylights out of their wives and kids, caused another's death, went to prison or lost job after job through being a two-pack a day man or forgetting to fasten a seat belt. Evidently, we are blind to the problems of drink.

But a new report from the Royal College of Psychiatrists could open our eyes. The statistics on the effects of drink and drink-related offences, not to mention the millions of pounds that alcohol's misuse costs us, are staggering in themselves and rising all the time. The report emphasizes that, without any scaremongering, we already have cause for serious concern and if adolescents continue to drink more (as they are), women join men in consumption (as we are) and we all join the Frenchmen's levels in the boozy Common Market, then the future poses "threats which are potentially appalling."

The report suggests, among other things, that governments should shoulder their responsibilities and think very carefully before they ease licensing laws or lower the price of drink (both measures are directly co-related to alcohol consumption). My own first reaction was negative — surely we don't want more governmental interference in our private lives, however messy? On the other hand, when it is a question of governmental spending, it is us who foot the bill and that bill, in terms of hospital beds, prison space, social security payments and general public damage, is already measured in hundreds of millions of pounds, never mind the drain on the energies of police and medics that are badly needed for other contingencies. We should make our decisions in the full awareness that our much-reviled licensing laws and the high price of alcohol do, in the end, actually save us money.

Change habits

But it is clear that a change in our own personal attitudes to drink could eventually save us even more. Television playwrights could think of something else for their characters to do when at a loose end than pouring drinks. Owners of companies (as the psychiatrists recommend) could devise ways of lessening their employees' pressure to drink. Parents can teach their children the civilized techniques of drinking — a well-lined stomach to start with, for instance — and arm them with acceptable excuses for avoiding too much — at a pinch, something medical, "I've got this ulcer, you know." And we ourselves could refrain from pouring drinks down the throats of visitors who have visibly had too much and make sure we always have a good supply of soft drinks to hand.

And I do think a really intensive profile of Jews and drinking should be undertaken. The psychiatrists mention the Camberwell survey that found "no Jewish person in the two heaviest drinking categories" but the reasons are obscure and puzzling. After all, Jews have many of the drunkenness indicators the report mentions: many are prosperous businessmen, ambitious and under stress, many have been poor and alienated from society, depression (at least in popular myth) is a Jewish disease, drink is used in Jewish religious rituals and Jews are spread through many different cultures with many different attitudes to drink. Why then, are they so relatively immune from drunkenness?

In praise of private schools

By MICHELE LANDSBERG
Toronto Star

Do people send their children to private schools for the snob value of a crested blazer and the smell of privilege which breathes from the ivy?

Bah humbug, I say. As a left-leaning parent with two children in private school (and one in public) I know that in most cases the accusation of social-climbing elitism is a wilted cliche, as out of date as spats and top hats.

Last Sunday I picked up The City magazine and found yet another evocation of a private school — Bishop Strachan this time — as a high-class hatchery for the debs of the Establishment.

I can't speak for Bishop Strachan, but I suspect that the parents of nearly 62,000 private school students in Ontario (and the enrolment has nearly doubled in the last decade) aren't paying all that money for some country-club cachet.

Private schools, I've learned, are the "dirty secret" of the progressive middle-classes; we one-time reformers, who once fought to make all public classrooms stimulating, compassionate and challenging, meet each other in the ivied halls and smile ironically.

Once, when my two oldest children were in a progressive local public school, I poured every ounce of my spare energy into working to make the schools better. I wrote the school newsletter, chaired the parent council, lobbied the school board on behalf of our enlightened programs, and spent hours (along with other volunteer mothers) in the classroom. I fought especially hard for the needs of the less privileged.

It took me a couple of years, and a move to a more traditional public school, to realize that my own children were being cheated. Bored, regimented and under-challenged, they were learning to loathe the educational process which held them back.

The final insult came when the "gifted consultants" were called in to suggest a program for my 9-year-old. "Well, we could put him in Grade 8," shrugged the principal listlessly. "Maybe he'd like to sign up for chess lessons at Saturday classes?" proffered the consultant. "Sorry. But you understand that we have to use all our resources for the underprivileged."

I did and do understand that. The school system is pinched hard for money and staff. What extras there are should go to those who need them most, including the gifted who can't afford private schools. What did surprise me was the abuse I received when I finally found a private school where my son's giftedness was valued, not seen as a dreadful burden. "We're all pretty disgusted with you," a school trustee told me.

In my circles, you see, Upper Canada College is seen as a blue-blood sanctuary for moneyed jocks, a gentleman's club where rich kids are cemented firmly into the Family Compact.

But what I found there were small and demanding classes; bright, sensitive and caring teachers; an in-depth curriculum and a warm humanity. It wasn't in "snobby" private schools that I met defensive, buck-passing principals and indifferent bureaucrats.

We've watched our bright and happy boy flourish and be accepted whereas by Grade 3 of public school he had already come to the conclusion that "maybe I better pretend to be like the other kids and not care about learning."

My daughter in public school looks on longingly as her brother moves from one intellectually absorbing task to another. They're in the same grade; last year, while he excitedly read Julius Caesar, she was assigned Willard and True Grit, two junky novels.

Her teacher (in a class of 23) refused to assign any English compositions because "there's no time to mark them," her brother's daily writing assignments came back to him with half a page each of closely reasoned, literate analysis by the teacher, with insights and suggestions which leapfrogged him ahead in writing skills.

Snobbery? No. Yet I know that this column puts me out on a limb. Defensive parents and teachers will accuse me of everything from elitism to hypocrisy because I was driven to buy what my child desperately needed.

Far better that they should direct their ire to the province, which is starving our schools into mass mediocrity — and any time those parents on the battle lines want my support, they've got it. Meanwhile, don't blame us private school parents if we're willin to work double time to buy something better for our kids.

Thru-jets

Only Western has them from Vancouver to Las Vegas, Phoenix, Palm Springs.

Now Western is the most convenient way to fly to Las Vegas, Palm Springs and Phoenix.

Because we can fly you there without a change of plane. Which means less worry about your luggage (we offer pre-clearance of Customs in Vancouver). And no running from one airline to another in the terminal.

There's delicious dining on all our flights to these cities. Along with complimentary beverages for adults.

So next trip to the sun, Western's the one!

Western Airlines
Hawaii/Alaska/Western USA/Florida/Canada/Mexico

Your Travel Agent knows—just say you want to fly Western's thru-jets to Las Vegas, Palm Springs or Phoenix.

Price of Hides Pinches

TORONTO (CP) — Rising prices and short supplies of cattle hides are expected to force shoe prices higher this fall, a Canadian tannery executive says.

With the construction of four new tanneries in the Soviet Union, demand for hides has increased although world beef production is down, Peter Dunham, past president of the Tanners Asociation of Canada said.

"When the Soviet Union comes in to buy, it's a huge order and everyone scrambles to supply them," added Dunham, president and general manager of the Beardmore tannery in Acton, Ont., a wholly-owned division of Canada Packers Ltd.

Brazil and Argentina, suppliers of the Soviet Union in the past, have taken their leather off international markets to strengthen their own manufacturing industries.

In addition, processors in China, Hong Kong, Japan, Israel and South Korea, who account for 50 per cent of U.S. exports, are undercutting competitors because of lower labor costs.

With the price of the industry's light native cow hides rising from 52 cents (U.S.) last year to $1.09 a pound, tanners are relying on a continuing demand for natural products over synthetics to maintain liquidity, Dunham said.

Since almost 80 per cent of Canada's leather goes into footwear, he said most Canadian shoe manufacturers "have accepted the proliferation of the high price as a way of life."

Shares Sold

TORONTO (CP) — HCI Holdings Ltd. says it has sold its interest of about 10 per cent in Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. for $20.9 million to an unidentified buyer.

HCI earned about $3 million or $3.20 a share on the sale. The shares were sold for $20 each.

Test Case for Right-to-Work?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A national right-to-work organization has taken up the cause of a municipal employee in Pitt Meadows, who says he is victimized because of his religious convictions.

The 1,500-member Committee for Justice and Liberty Foundation said John Vroom, 29, has been unjustly treated by his union and management while employed by the Fraser Valley community.

Vroom, an $18,000-a-year design technician, said Christian principles dictate that he should not be a member of Local 622 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE).

Membership in CUPE is compulsory for Pitt Meadows employees in Vroom's bargaining unit.

Vroom is a former member of another CUPE local in nearby Mission.

He currently is a member of the Christian Labor Association of Canada, an independent Canadian union representing 5,500 workers across the country.

Vroom applied for exemption from union membership under a section of the British Columbia Labor Code intended to guarantee religious freedom, but the Labor Relations Board rejected his application for a hearing.

The board ruled that Vroom is ineligible for a hearing because it was not satisfied that his religious beliefs made him in "conscientious conflict with all trade unions."

Vroom has been allowed to continue work with Pitt Meadows pending his appeal of the board's decision.

The committee, which is helping Vroom in his appeal, said he should be allowed to work for the community and his union dues should be sent to charity, an option allowed by the Christian Labor Association.

"I believe that all my time at work must reflect my faith in the Lord," Vroom said in a recent interview.

"I feel everything in my life has to be like that."

Right-to-work laws allow employees the opportunity to choose whether they will belong to a union and whether union dues will be deducted from their salaries.

A board spokesman said a decision in favor of Vroom could erode union security if the decision expanded the terms of religious freedoms defined in the Labor Code.

Nishga Plan To Plead Before World Opinion

OTTAWA (CP) — Nishga Indians of British Columbia are planning an international campaign to embarrass the federal and provincial governments into negotiating their land claim.

"We have had a long history of struggle with the governments of this country over our claim," Chief Rod Robinson said Thursday.

"An international campaign may re-awaken the governments' interest in resolving our claim," Robinson said.

Bill McKay, vice-president of the Nishga Tribal Council, said the tribe has become the innocent victim of federal-B.C. government bickering over responsibility for the tribe's claim.

Their statements were part of a presentation by native leaders from the Yukon and Northwest Territories to MPs, church leaders and other interested parties.

It marked the start of a 14-day cross-country speaking tour sponsored by Project North, an inter-church group interested in native rights and northern development.

The Nishga tribal council represents 3,500 Indians in the Nass River Valley.

In 1973, they were involved in a controversial Supreme Court decision that set the stage for land claims from other native groups based on aboriginal rights.

Strikers Claim SFU Feeling Heat

BURNABY (CP) — The union representing 650 striking clerical and administrative workers at Simon Fraser University said Thursday the institution is beginning to feel the pinch from the walkout that began a week ago.

The striking Association of University and College Employees (AUCE) said in a statement that the university has begun to threaten faculty and students with reprisals if they refuse to cross picket lines.

The union referred to a memo from the university's director of professional programs which said faculty who refused to cross picket lines and held classes off campus would not be paid.

AUCE said the memo also said students who do not attend teacher training classes "must inform the department at which time they will automatically lose credit for the course" and might be forced to re-apply.

But a spokesman for professional programs who asked not to be named said the memo was not intended to threaten students, merely to make sure the department knows who has actually dropped the course, the spokesman said.

Those who inform the department they are not crossing picket lines will be allowed automatically to re-enter the program at the end of the strike.

Meanwhile, the provincial labor relations board reserved decision until today on an application by the Construction Labor Relations Association CLRA) to restrict picketing at the university.

A CLRA application for a cease-and-desist order was filed on behalf of Cana Construction of Richmond, which is building a $9 million science centre at SFU. Construction workers, members of various unions in the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, have not crossed the AUCE picket lines.

AUCE representatives told the board that the construction work would be advantageous to the university and usurp their bargaining lever.

$1.2M Tabbed For Forestry

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Jack Horner announced Thursday the government will increase incentives to the British Columbia forestry industry by $1.2 million during the next two years.

The federal government will increase its 1979 contribution to the co-operative overseas market development program, which promotes the export of B.C. lumber and wood products, to $1.1 million from its previous commitment of $763,000.

The 1980 allocation has been increased to $1.3 million from $182,000.

The program is financed jointly by the federal and British Columbia governments, and B.C. Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has announced increased provincial support for the program.

Last month, Robert Andras, chairman of the board of economic development ministers, announced a $235 million subsidy to the forestry industry to improve its plants and equipment.

Oyster Sales Faulted; Firm Fined $400

NANAIMO (CP) — Drummond Bros. Fisheries Ltd. and owner William Drummond were fined $400 Wednesday after pleading guilty to charges of selling oysters without registering with the British Columbia Oyster Board and selling below the board's set price.

The company earlier refused to join the board complaining its rate was too high. Wilf Antonichuk, a company director, said Drummond Bros. would join the oyster board if compelled, but said it wanted direction from the court.

Camp-Kill Denied

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — An employee at Woodlands School for the mentally retarded says government restraint policies threaten a vital summer holiday program for patients.

However, administrators have denied the charge.

The employee, who requested anonymity, said the program which provides a summer vacation camp in Golden Ears provincial park in Maple Ridge for up to 250 Woodlands residents, is essential.

Wildcat Stopped

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board has granted Balco Industries Ltd, a cease-and-desist order against striking union members at the company's wood products plant near here.

About 400 members of the International Woodworkers of America, Local 1-417 staged a wildcat strike this weekto protest against the demotion of an employee in the plywood manufacturing section of the plant in nearby Heffley Creek.

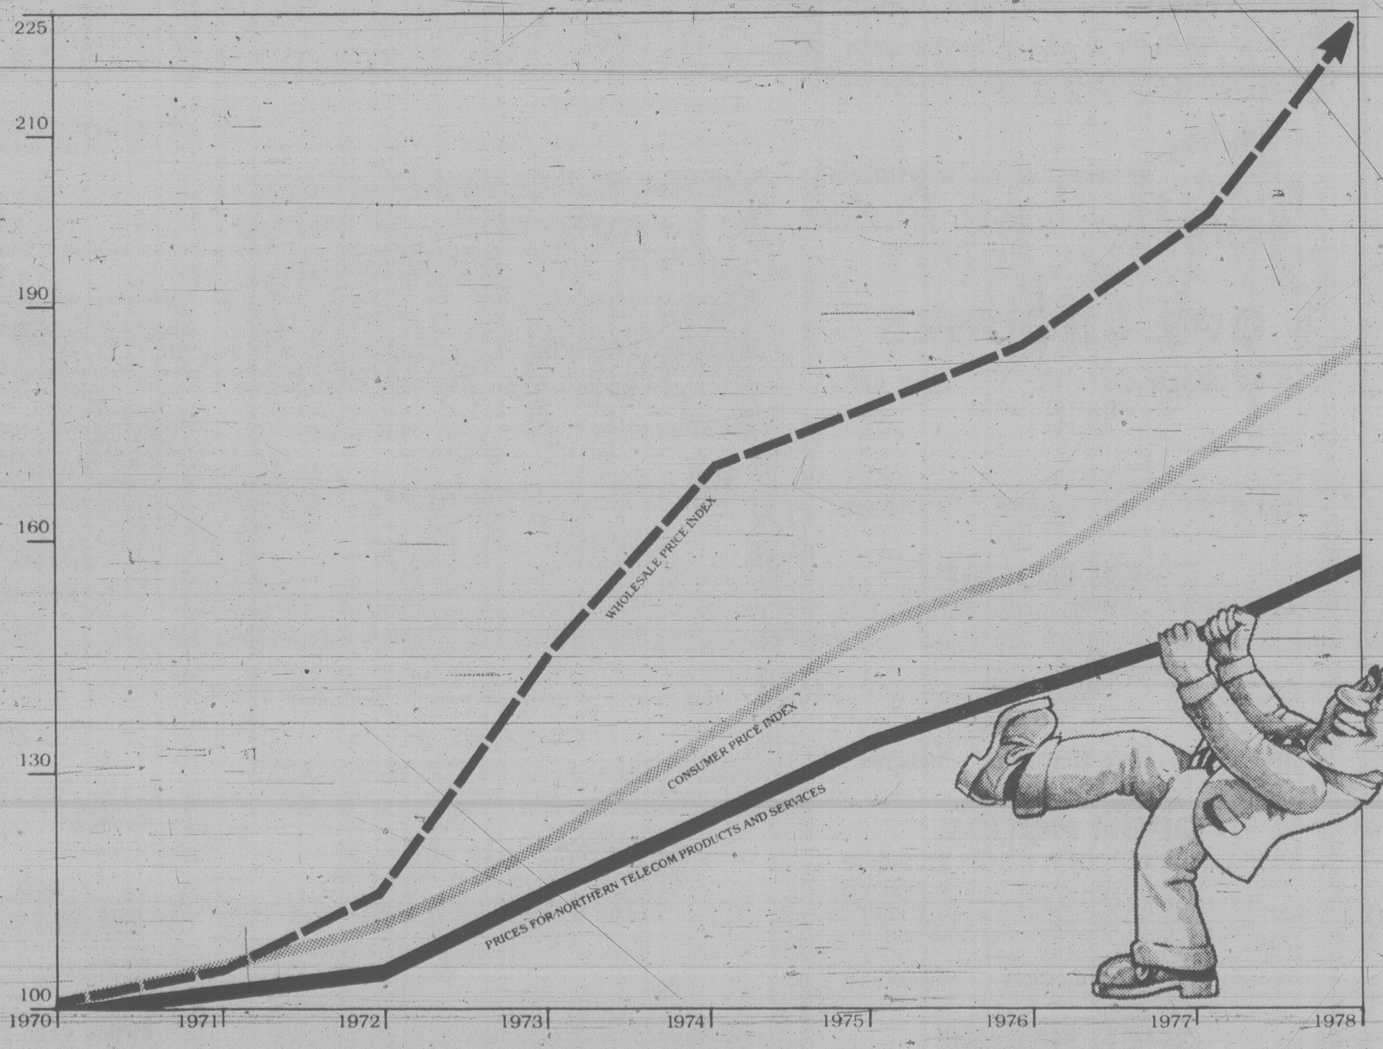
A lot of Canadians insist there has to be some way to keep prices in line.
We've got a track record that says they're right.



We all know how it works. Prices go up. Wages go up. Prices go up again. It's called inflation. And if you think something should be done about it, we couldn't agree with you more.

At Northern Telecom, we've made it our business to keep price increases in line. And we're succeeding.

Since 1970, wholesale prices in Canada have risen at an average annual rate of 10.6 percent. Northern Telecom price increases have been held at an average of only 5.8 percent a year – little more than half.

We have consistently delivered improved, technologically advanced products below the level of inflation – products that provide our customers with a greater return for their money.

The secret lies in a corporate-wide commitment to improving productivity. Over the past seven years, we've improved the productivity of Northern Telecom manufacturing operations at a rate more than twice that of the Canadian manufacturing industry as a whole.

As Canada's largest supplier of telecommunications equipment, we work closely with telephone companies across the country to determine the real needs of the market and to search out the most cost-efficient ways to supply those needs.

We've concentrated on developing a continuous stream of innovative systems that have solved communications problems in Canada and have helped us also to penetrate foreign markets. In turn, our success in offshore markets has enabled us to lower unit costs to telephone companies here at home.

The real winner, of course, is the Canadian telephone subscriber. Our ability to provide superior equipment at price increases substantially below the level of inflation has made a significant contribution to the Canadian telecommunications industry's record of operating one of the world's most efficient and lowest-cost telecommunications systems.

At Northern Telecom, we're proud of that track record. And we're determined to maintain it.

Mining Town Bankrupt By June, Officials Say

STEWART (CP) — Municipal officials in this northwestern British Columbia mining community say the town will be bankrupt by June if the provincial government does not come through with financial assistance.

The population of the community has dwindled to a meagre 500 from 2,500 two years ago, following the closure of the Granduc Copper Mine last year.

Town representatives now plan to bring their case to Victoria to ask Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm for $300,000 to keep the town going until the mine reopens in late 1980.

Failing that, they will seek permission for the community to defer for two years repayment of loans for a recreational centre which was started when the town was thriving.

If those proposals are rejected, Mayor Ian McLeod said: "We'll just shut 'er down."

The financial problems stem from declines in assessed property values to $12 million from $44 million in 1977 when the mine was in full operation.

Granduc's owners, Newmont Mining, of New York, closed the mine and recently sold it to Esso Minerals Ltd., a subsidiary of the giant Exxon Corp. Esso has said it will reopen the mine.

"There is a lesson to be learned here," the mayor said.

"When the Yankees pick up their marbles and go home, it hurts."

McLeod is confident, however, that the town will prosper once an estimated 320 workers begin mine production again.

There is also a good possibility that a logging sawmill operation will begin here in two years, he added.

Meanwhile, the town needs $150,000 a year to fund municipal services, McLeod said.

$4M Interim Grant To Ft. Nelson Line

The provincial government has approved an interim grant of $4 million to the B.C. Railway to cover part of the operating losses incurred by keeping open the Fort Nelson extension.

The final amount of the 1978 grant has not been determined, the economic development ministry said Thursday in a press release.

The Social Credit government last year rejected a royal commission recommendation to shut down the $190 million line between Fort St. John and Fort Nelson.

The commissioners said the decision to keep the line open would cost B.C. taxpayers $90 million during the next five years to provide transport for two sawmills employing fewer than 700 people.

Hard-Sell Ads to Remain?

B.C.'s new approach to lottery advertising won't bring much change in the hard-sell television commercials emanating from the Western Lottery Foundation.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis admitted Thursday B.C.'s desire for softer sell ads won't automatically bring about the demise of the hard-sell commercials currently on television.

In fact, B.C. has not run its own ads since last December. All lottery ads this year have been produced by the foundation and so far there is no indication they will be changed.

But Curtis hopes that with B.C. leading the way, the other three western provinces will agree to have the foundation tone down its ads promoting the sale of Provincial and Western Express lottery tickets.

In the meantime, soon after the new fiscal year starts April 1, B.C. will place its own ads on television emphasizing the uses to which lottery profits are spent.

"Our emphasis will be on the benefits the people of the province receive from lottery profits," the minister said.

Asked if the government isn't in fact changing the ads to promote the nice things it's doing in an election year, Curtis replied that not everything a government does is based solely on an election.

He said when he was recently given the responsibility for the lotteries he felt the ads were too hard-sell and would have changed them even if it was the first three months of government.

The new ads have not yet been produced so Curtis says he does not know whether they will carry the B.C. government emblem.

Instead of promoting all the different ways a person can win a million dollars, British Columbians will see ads emphasizing health care research, special community projects, and sports and cultural activities supported by lottery funds.

But if the other three provinces vote to stick with the current ad campaign, British Columbians will also see those hard-sell ads because they are distributed by the lottery foundation.

Boat Motors Thief's Target

Saanich police are warning boat owners to be on the lookout for a thief with a penchant for stealing outboard motors from boats parked in driveways.

The warning came after six small engines in the six-to-eight horsepower range were taken this week.

A spokesman suggested owners remove the engines and store them in their homes when not using them because even engines chained to boats haven't been safe.

Esquimalt had a couple of small engine thefts about six weeks ago but police aren't sure whether the incidents are related.

Vandals Eyed in Spill

Saanich police are investigating a spill from a furnace oil truck parked at the Esso station at Douglas and Tolmie late Thursday night.

Police suspect vandals opened a valve on the truck. A police officer on patrol noticed the leak while passing by shortly before midnight.

Police aren't sure how much oil escaped but believe it was about 100 gallons.

The oil drained through a storm sewer and was detected this morning being discharged with the effluent into the Gorge near B.C. Forest Products.

Saanich firemen flushed out the system and today are telling companies to ensure tanks on trucks are properly sealed when not in use.

Greenbelters Eye Park, Farm

The Saanich Greenbelt Association wants Saanich to buy two major pieces of real estate — Mount Douglas Park and the Pendray Farm property.

The 365-acre park is owned by the city of Victoria, although Saanich has shared in its maintenance costs for many years.

Association president Dr. Hal Knight told the group's meeting Thursday it is important that Saanich acquire the property to exercise proper control over its use, and ensure it remains in as natural a state as possible.

Members agreed that Saanich should also be asked to purchase the 68-acre Pendray property in the Blenkinsop Valley, for watershed, agricultural and conservation purposes.

Hospitalized To Be Guests

Veterans from local hospitals will be the guests of honor when members of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans of Canada meet at 2 p.m. Saturday at 1001 Wharf Street. Members are also asked to bring a guest.

The Corporation of the District of Saanich
COMMUNITY PLAN

The Lands, Planning and Housing Committee is holding a series of three special meetings to review the draft Community Plan. Residents of Saanich are invited to submit oral and/or written submissions in response to specific proposals. The relevant sections of the draft plan will be available for inspection at the offices of the Municipal Clerk and the Municipal Planner during normal office hours.

The third meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m., in the Council Chamber, Saanich Municipal Hall, 770 Vernon Avenue, on TUESDAY, March 27, 1979. Topics for discussion are:

—Implementation Techniques
—Structure Map

Should an additional meeting be required to complete the agenda, it will be held at 7:30 p.m., in the Council Chamber on March 28, 1979.

VOLVO

1979 VOLVO 242 'GT'

2-Door sports sedan with factory sunroof. Finished in Metallic Silver with accent stripes. Black corduroy upholstery with orange trim. The 5-speed overdrive transmission and 2.1 litre fuel injected motor, coupled with competition suspension, alloy wheels with Pirelli CN36 high speed radials, produce sports car handling. Functional front spoiler, Quartz iodine headlights plus driving lights complete the package.

Road & Track, March 1979, had these comments to make:

The 242GT is actually a very representative car of the last of the Seventies: it's not powered by any sort of unusually thirsty engine; it does have suspension refinements that make it more entertaining to drive, and it is a leader in occupant safety aspects, like downsized cars that haven't been downsized, because they have been the logical size all along. The efficient use of space is commendable and should be studied by some other carmakers. Then there's the big plus factor, Volvo's reputation for reliability. All in all, it's an excellent combination.

Jenn-Air's Grill-Range puts the sizzling, outdoor flavor you love into steaks, chops, chicken…

Any meat you prepare on a Jenn-Air tastes better because Jenn-Air's exclusive Char-Flavor grill cooks juicy, outdoor flavor into every bite. Permanent "Flavor Rocks" turn natural juices into curls of smoke that delicately bathe the meat as it grills. Smoke and odors are then quietly whisked away by the powerful built-in surface ventilation system. The result is meat that is golden brown on the outside, tender, hot and juicy on the inside. And, a kitchen that remains clean and fresh! Jenn-Air lets you do a lot more than grilling, too, with an array of deluxe accessories. Love the taste of meat grilled to char-flavored perfection? You deserve a Jenn-Air Grill-Range.

'Larger Port But Limited'

OTTAWA (CP) — A limited expansion of port facilities at Roberts Bank near Vancouver to handle coal-only exports would be environmentally acceptable, Environment Minister Len Marchand said today.

The limited expansion can be carried out with minimum disruption to the environment, Marchand said as he released an environmental assessment panel study.

The panel studied a National Harbors Board proposal to expand the present 20-hectare coal-handling facility at Roberts Bank to 110 hectares and handle sulphur, potash, grain and bulk liquids.

A 40-hectare addition to the existing port site consisting of two terminals and a narrow ship channel without a turning basin would not endanger the tidal marshes and flats which are important breeding and feeding grounds for Fraser River salmon and birds.

Marchand said he has passed on his recommendations to Transport Minister Otto Lang who is in charge of the National Harbors Board. Cabinet will have the final decision if there is any disagreement.

Marchand said his department can use provisions in the Fisheries Act which make it illegal to pollute aquatic habitat to block expansion of Roberts Bank.

Marchand said the assessment panel found there is ample capacity in existing ports to handle grain, sulphur and potash. A reduced Roberts Bank expansion could handle all the coal exports.

Before any development is allowed, government and the railways have to find some way of coping with the increased volumes of coal dust which will be deposited by additional coal trains running between the mines in the Interior and Roberts Bank.

New Law Trips Fish Buyers

Fish buyers who neglect to fill out slips recording catches they purchase from fishermen on the fishing grounds may be unwittingly breaking a new law that went into effect only last Thursday.

Gordon Halsey, director of marine resources branch for the provincial ministry of environment, said Thursday an order-in-council now makes it mandatory for buyers to fill out and sign all fish slips.

The law also requires them to file the slips with the federal director of fisheries each week.

The requirement, intiated for conservation reasons, is also expected to help the federal tax department which Wednesday indicated there is a growing problem in monitoring the multi-million dollar cash flow between buyers and fishermen on the fish grounds.

Halsey said while fish buying companies and processors have been advised of the new law, he suspects a number of buyers on the grounds may be unaware of it.

Until the order-in-council was passed there was no law requiring buyers to record purchases though Halsey says most fish buyers have generally followed the practice on a voluntary basis.

Fisheries officers have been concerned in recent years over their ability to monitor the annual catches.

Halsey said last year an estimated 6,000 tons of herring roe was never recorded on sales slips.

"Without an accurate record of the catch it is exceedingly difficult to determine what the escapement is," he said. "It constituted a real threat to the resource."

Halsey said his branch is working on another order-in-council to crack down on salmon fishermen who sell their catches directly to the consumer.

"The Fraser River run has got us really worried," he said. "There are some who guess as much as 25 per cent of the run may be going unreported."

In other areas federal and provincial authorities have agreed to restrain investment in the salmon processing sector.

A limit to the number that can be engaged in the industry will likely be set.

"But we're still a long way from working out a formula," Halsey says.

He said there is no thought being given to limit the number of herring roe processors which has nearly doubled in the past year, causing concern to the established firms in the industry.

. . . And Red Faces Over 'Racist' Fish Licence Forms

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal fisheries department form which requires persons to be categorized as either white or colored will be changed, regulations officer C. C. Young said Thursday.

Young said the wording on the form used to process alleged violations of commercial fishing licence regulations was unfortunate.

"What can I say? We've been informed about the problem and we're in the process of changing the form."

Young said there are special provisions for Indians in the regulations but the wording on the form did not supply the information

Rent Tabbed Weekend Cons

The B.C. corrections branch is looking into an Ontario jail rule that makes prisoners serving intermittent sentences pay for their keep.

The branch has asked the Ontario officials for the legal authority that allows them to charge weekend prisoners $5 a day for room and board. It jumps to $6 a day next month.

"If there is a legal base it may be worthwhile pursuing," a spokesman for the branch told the Times.

He said there is no immediate plan to implement the program here.

"All we're saying is it's an interesting concept to look at."

He said ministry lawyers are of the opinion provinces can charge prisoners fees since the responsibility for administration of sentences is left to the provinces under the British North America Act.

The Ontario Criminal Lawyers Association, however, contends the practice intrudes into federal jurisdiction in criminal law, while a law professor at Queens University argues the fee is really a fine.

The issue has yet to be challenged in the courts.

Gordon Walker, minister of correction services in Ontario says the fee is simply a charge for services rendered.

"We're convinced that we have overwhelming public support," he says.

Since the practice started last summer, the Ontario government has collected about $200,000.

It is also collecting hundreds of thousands of dollars more from prisoners on temporary passes who leave jail during the day to work and return each evening. They are charged $35 a week room and board.

B.C., like most other provinces has a similar program, except here such inmates pay $6 a day.

Since it started in 1974 the inmates have paid $233,000 in room and board, $84,000 in restitution and fines, $704,000 in family maintenance payments, $275,000 in debts, and $647,000 in income tax.

PERSIAN RUG SALE
(Late arrival of Shipment #A.B. 6055 From Vancouver Home Show—
First Public Viewing and Sale)

IF: There is a Persian rug on the floor. What does that tell you about its owner? Probably that he is well off. Also, he'll be a secure person because a Persian Rug is a good saleable item in these inflation ridden times. It is easier to sell expensive Oriental carpets today in a sluggish economy than it was in the 1950's and 60's although the average price of an authentic Oriental carpet has greatly increased in recent years. An Oriental rug is an excellent hedge against inflation because its value increases constantly. The reason for this is the increased wealth and industrialization of Mid-East countries. Weavers and master artists are leaving their traditional work and are entering industrial employment. In addition the Shah of Iran had introduced compulsory education thereby effectively eliminating the employment of children in rug weaving, says Ejaz Khan of Bokhara Carpet Palace Ltd. Mr. Kahn will be dislaying an excellent selection of Persian carpets & rugs that will appeal to the discriminating and budget conscious home decorator and art lovers, offered to you at Bargain Prices. Mr. Khan invites you to come and investigate the opportunities provided by Oriental carpets, to make an investment that safeguards your money and provides you with luxury as it appreciates.

Textile Gouge Probe Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue Minister Tony Abbott said today the government is investigating allegations by clothing makers that textile factories have been taking advantage of import quotas and the lower value of the dollar to jack up prices.

Ed Broadbent, leader of the New Democratic party, pressed Abbott in the Commons to say what he was doing about the allegations, contained in a brief to Abbott three weeks ago by an organization of Canadian clothing makers.

The clothing makers had complained that the higher prices for the fabric they buy from domestic suppliers would have to be passed along to consumers.

Broadbent said the latest consumer price index released today showed clothing prices were up 1.1 per cent in February and this single month increase translated to an annual rate of 13 per cent.

"This is not an easy problem to deal with," Abbott said.

He said that although the allegations had been contained in a brief from Canadian clothing manufacturers, the government could not act without checking the facts.

Clothing makers say they alreauy are forced to pay more for imported fabric because of the lower value of the Canadian dollar.

New Salmon Rules 'A Band-Aid'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Proposed federal regulations restricting salmon fishing by B.C.'s 1,500-boat fishing fleet are a Band-aid approach to a serious problem facing the industry, a union spokesman said today.

Jack Nichol said in an interview the problem is one of allocating a declining number of fish to a growing number of fishermen.

"There is too much gear to catch too few fish," said Nichol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

He said the federal fisheries department botched its licensing program, allowing too many boats on the fishing grounds.

"Now they are saying 'so you've got the gear, now we are not going to allow you to catch fish.' "

The proposed new regulations will restrict fishermen to either gillnetting or trolling during the salmon season and among other things they: ban the use of barbed and treble hooks for a specified period, limit the number of fishing lines on trollers and the depth of nets on seiners and give the government the authority to close fishing grounds with immature salmon.

The regulations will be discussed at a meeting April 12 of the Pacific Region Fisheries Management Advisory Council.

The union has been asked to submit its opinion of the regulations by April 11.

Fisheries official Les Storey said Tuesday the government hopes to implement the regulations by the start of the salmon season this year.

Though the B.C. salmon is far from extinct, the government regards the lack of adequate conservation measures as "a serious situation," he said.

"Salmon stocks on the West Coast have been declining steadily since 1900," Storey said. "Industrial development has damaged spawning and breeding areas, resulting in depleted annual runs, and overfishing has also taken its toll."

Technical development in fishing equipment and running gear has also contributed to declining stocks though fishing licence regulations have restricted the number of vessels involved, he said.

"In 1900, the yearly salmon catch by the B.C. fleet was around 300 million pounds of fish," Storey said. "Today, it is less than half that figure. But the fleet is still capable of catching twice the annual yield."

Nichol said it is isn't just a question of conservation but rather one of proper allocation.

"So we've got to do more than simply go to the council meeting and give our position," he said.

"There has to be a real analysis by the department of what they are doing.

"They have to sit down and look at where the industry is going."

For example, he said, it appears the fisheries department has done no work on what economic impact on the fishermen will result from the regulation to limit boats to either gillnetters or trollers.

He said the reason the fishermen switched to the double-gear operation was out of "sheer bloody economic necessity."

Now the government is going to come in and eliminate $10 million worth of gear without any compensation to the fishermen, Nichol said.

He said another regulation imposing a 26-inch limit on chinooks caught in Georgia Strait will reduce the fleet's catch of that type of salmon by 80 per cent.

Sports fishermen on the other hand can keep chinooks 18 inches and over.

"At least there should be one standard regulation for all."

Farm Force Dips

GENEVA (CP) — Three million farmers are leaving the fields of the industrialized world each year, says a recent report by the International Labor Organization, a Geneva-based United Nations agency.

Ottawa Bumps Airport Taxes

The federal airport tax — used to help finance construction of terminals — will rise to a maximum of $15 from $8 effective April 1, airline companies said today.

At the present time the tax amounts to eight per cent of the airline ticket price, up to a maximum tax of $8.

On April 1 the following rates go into effect. For trips within Canada the tax will be 15 per cent of the ticket price up to a maximum tax of $15.

For trips to the United States, the rate will become 7.5 per cent up to a maximum of $12 Canadian. It had been a maximum of $8. In addition to the $12, airlines must collect an American tax of $3 U.S. for the return portion of the trip.

For other international flights the rate goes to a flat $12, up from $8.

Because of the maximum limits, the tax increase will have a sharper impact on short-haul routes.

For example the price return between Victoria and Vancouver is $54. The present airport tax at eight per cent is $4.32. The new tax of 15 per cent in April will become $8.10.

YAMAHA YPB 2 TURNTABLE

We've noted that good basic audio performance depends on far from basic technological refinement. And that's just what is offered in the YPB 2, developed from the time tested belt drive format into a turntable to equal the performance of many so-called sophisticated direct-drives. For ease in operating the YPB 2 has oil dampened cueing and is semi automatic. It also has a full 5 year parts and labor warranty. And to top it off we are offering this turntable complete with a Shure M 70 B for only . . .

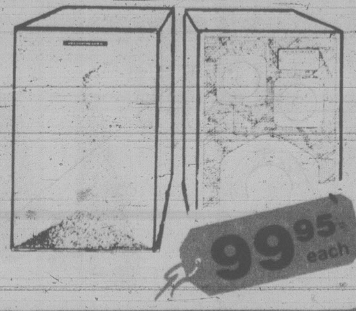
marantz HD 440 SPEAKERS

We sound better.



You can't hear these loudspeakers. Because the Marantz HD 440 bookshelf systems are designed to let you hear the music instead. There's none of the coloration that marks inferior designs — and can lead to listening fatigue. And what a speaker complement for a compact, modestly-priced system. 8-inch woofer, 3½-inch midrange and 3½-inch tweeter. All specified and built by Marantz to the same high standards as their most expensive loudspeakers.

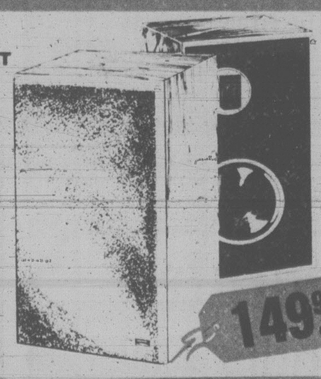
ESS SOUND AS CLEAR AS LIGHT

LS8 E



The low frequency transducer used in the LS8 E utilize a magnetic circuit that critically damps the drivers moving assembly to make possible a flat frequency over an extended range. Frequency response characteristics have been chosen that create a seamless transition between the woofer and the high definition "Power Rung" HEIL air motion transformer. The result: Clean crisp bass without obscuring the clarity of the Heil Midrange/tweeter.

THE JBL L50 SPEAKERS

GET IT ALL

The L 50 is JBL's lowest-priced 3 way loudspeaker. It comes from the same technology as their state of the art system, the L 212. Yet it only costs a fraction of the price. It's an efficient system with a 10" woofer that stays clean and accurate at every volume level. It's alignment yields precise stereo imaging. So you get front and back, as well as left and right. No other loudspeaker in this price range can do so much. Come hear the L 50 and see what it's like to be close to perfect.

Major Scandal Growing from a Tiny Fraud at NBC

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It began four months ago as an NBC in-house inquiry into an apparent small-scale misappropriation of funds. Now the network says as much as $1 million may have been stolen in the last 10 years.

Federal prosecutors are investigating the allegations in Washington and a federal prosecutor in New York City say that the FBI will be called in to investigate there.

The network decided last week that the improprieties were too widespread for its own legal staff to handle and brought in outside counsel and auditors to help. Six NBC employees have left the network as a result of the inquiry.

The scandal involves the alleged misappropriation of funds in NBC's unit managers department. Unit managers are expense-account executives who travel with news and sports production teams. They carry cash — in bags, satchels or suitcases — to pay expenses incidental to the production of a program.

The internal investigation found that several persons in the unit managers department apparently directe expense funds to themselve for personal use, then co vered up by completin false expense vouchers.

It's Straight As All the Way for Spelling. . .

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — The most successful producer in television is Aaron Spelling who provided viewers with the astonishing total of 161 hours of prime-time shows during the 1978-79 season.

Seven weekly series account for all but but 10 of the hours: Family, Charlie's Angels, Starsky & Hutch, Fantasy Island, The Love Boat, Vega$ and the new Friends. The other 10 hours involve five TV movies.

At the moment he has the hottest hand in television, which also makes him one of the most influential men in the industry. His shows are copied by other producers...usually without success.

Spelling's tastes and moral standards either reflect public mores or contribute to establishing them or both.

He is a white-haired, pipe-smoker of slight physique, a native of Dallas who attended Southern Methodist University and the Sorbonne. He was an actor and writer, sometimes starving at both, when he came to Hollywood some 25 years ago.

Spelling is of moderate liberal bent, unprepossessing and pragmatic. He dislikes pretense and the hollow sounds of philosophic discourse on the intellectual and cultural merits of television.

Philosophically, Spelling says, "Success in TV production is knowing what the audience really wants to see, then providing it — trying to please 50 million viewers instead of 500 critics.

"One news show about oil shortages, inflation and crime can depress you for an entire weekend. People want to escape, especially when they see what is left of their paycheques. They watch a lot of TV because that's all they can afford.

"They want glamour and beauty and fun. And that's what I've tried to provide with the excitement of the Love Boat setting, the beautiful, well-dressed women of Charlie's Angels and viewers can imagine all their fantasies coming true on Fantasy Island."

Asked why he thought he was more successful than other producers, Spelling was at a loss. But he did relate an anecdote that illustrated his meticulous attention to detail.

He visited the set of his new TV movie, Casino, starring Mike Connors as the operator of a gambling ship. Spelling saw Connors and Barry Sullivan were both wearing gray suits in the scene. He had Sullivan change his wardrobe.

Spelling also relies on his own judgment, going over each and every script with his writer's eyes, seeking ways to improve dialogue and plot.

He's convinced movies are a director's medium and that TV is the province of the creative producer who must run the show.

Spelling has succeeded at the most difficult of all TV formats, anthology. Both Love Boat and Fantasy Island have permanent casts but most of the action involves guest stars, principally oldtimers no longer in great demand.

"We've used more than 475 guest stars in those shows," Spelling said with pride. "Most of our guests are pure gold, people like Bob Cummings, Ray Bolger, Rhonda Flemming, Cyd Charisse, Van Johnson and Arlene Dahl. There are hundreds of others. They should be working all the time."

Another talent that sets Spelling apart from other producers is an unerring eye for casting. He made stars of Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Jaclyn Smith, Kate Jackson, Cheryl Ladd, David Soul, Paul Michael Glaser and Kristy McNichol among others.

Almost inevitably the unknowns he casts end up criticizing Spelling and his shows for lacking depth and meaning. Jaclyn Smith is almost the lone exception. Ingratitude is part of the Hollywood game and Spelling shrugs it off.

LOOKING slightly more nattily-dressed that he appeared in the Colombo TV series, actor Peter Falk demonstrates a little shoftshoe routine as he arrives at opening of International Film Exposition in Los Angeles.

Conseil de la radiodiffusion et des télécommunications canadiennes

Public Announcement

Ottawa, 9 March, 1979

The Commission has received an application from the CBC for a temporary network licence to distribute the Proceedings of the House of Commons on a national basis.

The initial intention of the CBC is to distribute the service via satellite to 15 major cities across Canada; Victoria, Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Regina, Winnipeg, Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal, Quebec City, Moncton, Fredericton, Charlottetown, Halifax, and St. John's.

The Commission has issued a temporary network licence to the CBC for a period not exceeding 30 days commencing 1:35 p.m., 12 March, 1979

The license is subject to the following conditions.

(a) that any licensee of the Commission, i.e. cable, radio and/or television, may be a participant in the temporary network; and

(b) that, as the network originator, the CBC may not deny any licensee from participating therein; and

(c) that the CBC immediately inform the Commission of those licensees participating in the network service; and

(d) that only the Proceedings of the House of Commons be carried.

Cable licensees will be permitted to carry the service on the following basis and in accordance with procedures previously established in Public Announcements dated 4 November, 1977 and 20 February, 1978.

1. Cable licensees presently authorized to provide a special programming channel(s) need only advise the Commission of their intention to distribute this programming and submit full details of the method of feed proposed for the service
2. Cable television licensees not presently authorized to provide a special programming channel(s) are required to apply for the provision of such a channel outlining the proposed method of feed for the service
3. Cable systems lacking sufficient channel space to establish a special programming channel(s) will be permitted to carry only the Question Period on the community channel and must notify the Commission of such carriage

Marlene Still Weeping at Memories of Hemingway

BONN (UPI) — Marlene Dietrich had love affairs on and off the screen but she says she never had a true romance with the man she fell in love with at first sight — Ernest Hemingway.

She writes in her memoirs now appearing in the West German magazine Stern that she still cries when she thinks of him and cannot understand why he killed himself.

Miss Dietrich, now 74, said she was in love with Hemingway from the first moment she saw him on a ship sailing from Europe to the United States after the Spanish Civil War.

"Radiant beams of light seemed to emanate from his powerful body," she said.

"Despite what people might say, I loved him 'platonically.' He was my 'rock of Gibralter.' The years without him have vanished like smoke and each new year is more painful than the past."

Why didn't she have a love affair with him?

"All my life physical love always was accompanied by love and only love. That is why I never had ties 'here today and there tomorrow.' My love for Hemingway was no fleeting thing. But we simply never were long enough together in the same city — and so it never happened.

"Either he had a beautiful girl tagging along or I was otherwise engaged when he was free. And when I was free he wasn't."

Her love was so platonic that she says during the Second World War she acted as an intermediary and helped persuade Mary Welsh, Hemingway's last wife, to marry him.

Foreign Film Tax Mooted

TORONTO (CP) — Taxes on foreign films screened in Canada would be used to assist the Canadian film industry if a New Democratic Party policy was implemented.

In addition to the tax, the NDP would limit the number of foreign films shown in Canada to 90 per cent, R. Cyril Symes, NDP member of Parliament for Sault Ste. Marie, said Thursday.

Taxes levied on rentals paid to foreign distributors would be given to the Canadian Film Development Corporation to increase its financing of Canadian feature films. In addition, a major Canadian theatre chain would be purchased by the CFDC.

Rebuttal Stage for Marvin Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Marvin's lawyers are under orders to rest their case, and Michelle Triola Marvin's lawyer says rebuttal testimony will attempt to show "what a loving, caring, giving lady she was."

Marvin's lawyers were told by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall Thursday they are being held to an earlier promise to end their case today.

The actor's presentation was to conclude with some final details of his finances during the six years he and Miss Marvin lived together. Testimony has shown he earned $3.6 million during that period. Miss Marvin is suing for half.

The defence claims the actor owes Miss Marvin nothing. Lawyers presented 36 witnesses in four weeks of testimony.

Miss Marvin's lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson, said he will call 18 to 20 witnesses in rebuttal.

Jacquelyn Muinch, the last witness Thursday, said she was a neighbor of the Marvins when they lived at Malibu, Calif. She said Miss Marvin told her they had gotten married, but that she maintained an apartment in Beverly Hills while they were living together.

Miss Marvin shouted: "They're lying. I don't even know her!" She left the courtroom weeping.

Marvin's lawyers said the existence of another residence in Miss Marvin's name showed she didn't really believe her romance with the actor would last.

Gov't Finds Taker For Wine, Antiques

When the Lights are Low
ONE PENNY

Peeping Bob de Cotret turns handle on penny peep show

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has finally found a restaurant to go with $50,000 worth of French wines which has been aging behind locked and guarded doors for two years while it sought someone to lease the building.

The restaurant will also be filled with close to $50,000 in antiques — including a $6,000 music box and a $90 penny slot machine complete with an old-fashioned dirty movie — which the government purchased in Britain in 1976.

The antiques are gathering dust in the basement, some propped against the concrete walls, some scattered throughout otherwise-empty rooms.

What Robert de Cotret (PC — Ottawa Centre), who took reporters on a tour Thursday of the empty five-storey heritage building, wants to know is:

"What is the government doing buying things like $50,000 of wine with public funds before even having anybody signed up to open the place?"

He also wants to know why it took so long to lease the "big white elephant" he estimates is costing taxpayers about $60,000 a month to maintain?

Dave McIntosh, spokesman for the National Capital Commission, says it's complicated and he can't discuss it because it's all part of a law suit the government is involved in concerning the building — located in the city's old market area.

The building — which the government estimates has cost about $5 million — has been ready to lease for two years, de Cotret said, with no takers.

McIntosh said the government reached agreement with Canterbury Foods, Toronto-based subsidiary of General Foods Ltd. of the United States, about two months ago to lease the building.

"They're putting in a restaurant, a lounge bar and an English pub and they say they'll be opening within a few months," he said.

He admitted there had been a long delay in leasing the building. But he blamed that on the law suit, which started in February, 1977.

McIntosh said he presumes Canterbury Foods will purchase the wine and the antiques. The deal is worth about $1 million.

Much to his chagrin, de Cotret couldn't show reporters the vintage wine as part of his tour. It's locked behind two large doors secured with three padlocks. Not even the lone security guard for the building had a key:

But it appeared the wine was there. A thermometer adorned one of the doors and under it were strict instructions to keep the temperature between 54 and 62 degrees fahrenheit — a comfortable range for wines.

"Setting can go below 54 degrees but not below 40," the orders read. The guard entered the temperature on a log sheet every two hours.

The matter was first raised in the Commons nearly two years ago.

At that time, Andre Ouellet, minister responible for the National Capital Commission, said a firm called By York Developments Ltd. had sued the commission for $4,130,000 in damages for "alleged wrongful termination of alleged management agreement."

Marchand Lauds B.C. Land Freeze

OTTAWA (CP) — A British Columbia law to preserve agricultural land is proving effective and is a significant step toward solving national concern about vanishing farmland, Environment Minister Len Marchand said Thursday.

The study looked at the B.C. Land Commission Act, passed in 1973 to protect agricultural land. The land involved was designated by the Canada Land Inventory service of the environment department.

About 11.5 million acres, 4.9 per cent of the province's land area, is involved.

A survey of 800 landowners in the 12 designated areas showed more than 80 per-cent agreement in principle with agriculture preservation.

The study says the province's farm land is being increasingly utilized as a result of the law.

Air Canada to Retaliate If U.K. Closes Heathrow

LONDON (CP) — Claude Taylor, president of Air Canada, said Thursday the main leverage the Canadian government has in the Gatwick Airport dispute lies in the rights of British Airways to operate in Canada.

Taylor spent the day at the Rolls-Royce factory at Derby. The company is in the running for "hundreds of millions of dollars" in engine orders as part of Air Canada's fleet renewal and expansion program during the next 10 years, Taylor said.

"There are leverage points we may or may not have to use — it's all up to the Canadian government now," Taylor said on his return. He flies back to Montreal today.

Engine orders form part of Air Canada's $3-billion equipment expenditures planned over the next 10 years.

Taylor reiterated that Air Canada will not accede to the British government's demand that it move from the crowded Heathrow airport — to the one-runway Gatwick Airport, 40 kilometres south of London.

He said the dispute now is out of Air Canada's hands and in the hands of the Canadian government "which is backing us to the hilt."

At a luncheon Wednesday, Taylor told reporters the British insistence on the move might have a bearing — all other factors being equal — on whether British companies share in Air Canada's equipment orders.

As far as bilateral relations are concerned, he said, "there are leverage points we may or may not have to use."

High among these, he said, is British Airways' desire to move into the western Canada passenger market.

"I wouldn't want to go any stronger than that," Taylor said.

RCMP Involved In Persecuting Peter Treu?

QUEBEC (CP) — Alexander Peter Treu, the former air defence engineer recently acquitted of violating the Official Secrets Act, is pressing federal authorities for information on possible RCMP involvement in casting him in the role of a Chinese spy, his lawyer said Thursday.

The federal McDonald inquiry into RCMP wrongdoing has already pledged to "check into all the circunstances surrounding the prosecution brought against Mr. Treu," says a letter from the commission to lawyer Michel Chabot.

But as Chabot made the letter public, he also confirmed that Treu had been "indirectly threatened" with a second prosecution unless he keeps his mouth shut about the mysterious affair.

"I don't like this way of proceeding," the lawyer said. "If they have proof, let them go ahead and file charges."

Chabot said he had personally received the threat, which had contained an "indirect allusion" to the unproven allegation that Treu has tried to sell classified NATO defence information to the Chinese. But he declined to name the person who made the threat, adding: "I don't think it was made on behalf of the Government of Canada."

The threat was made "recently" — in the weeks following a Feb. 20 ruling by the Quebec Court of Appeal that overturned a lower court conviction of Treu on charges of illegally retaining and carelessly handling classified papers on the NATO air defence line in Europe.

Chabot, flanked by Treu at a meeting with a small group of reporters, also revealed his legal strategy in claiming $150,000 in damages from Ottawa.

In a March 2 letter to Justice Minister Marc Lalonde, Chabot threatened to launch court action unless the government takes steps to settle within a standard 90-day legal delay.

Pressed in the Commons recently, Lalonde steadfastly refused to consider the request saying it would open the door to suits from virtually anyone who was prosecuted unsuccessfully.

Chabot conceded that it would be difficult to sue the government for bringing the charges. This would involve the difficult task of proving that the prosecution, started in 1976 after a two-year RCMP investigation, was malicious and unfounded.

But the lawyer noted that the action would be brought conjointly against the government and a senior civil servant in the supply and services department who lifted Treu's longstanding security clearance at a time when he was working with the classified NATO papers.

Treu alleges that Stanley Jenkins, then director of industrial security at the department, was negligent in failing to act on an application for renewal of the clearance, failing to inform him that the clearance had been withdrawn and leading Treu to believe falsely that he still had the clearance.

During the secret trial in Montreal sessions court, the key Crown evidence was Treu's lack of a security clearance. But the reasons why it was withdrawn outside his knowledge while he was working on classified NATO contracts remains a mystery, despite Treu's theory of "bureaucratic bungling."

NOTHING DAMPENED these toddlers' enthusiasm for going for a stroll in the park, even though flood waters were almost up to their knees. But then, it was much the same at their homes in Halton Hills, Ont., where the Credit River overflowed its banks and flooded numerous basements overnight. Angie Fowler took a break from mopping up to take her own and her neighbor's children for the outing.

Horner Hits Back

OTTAWA (CP) — For two years now, former prime minister John Diefenbaker has been needling Jack Horner about his decision to bolt the Progressive Conservative party for a place in Trudeau's cabinet.

On Thursday, he was at it again, telling the Commons that Horner's conversion "made Saul's look like an amateur performance," a reference to Saint Paul's decision to change his name and become a Christian.

While Liberal MPs howled with glee, Horner reminded Diefenbaker that he was a strong supporter of the Conservatives when it was led by the former prime minister.

"But when the Conservative party rudely dumped him, I began to lose interest."

Postal Workers Balk At Automation Move

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) says it may not consent to the move to a new $25-million automated mail processing plant scheduled to open here May 26.

Darrell Tingley, the union's national director for the Atlantic region, told a news conference Thursday that unless the post office implements a list of union proposals governing working conditions at the new facility, union members will not give the written consent necessary for relocation.

The dispute involves technological change at the new Halifax Metro Post Office.

Tingley said the post office is proceeding with technological changes without adhering to the provisions in the CUPW national contract safeguarding the rights of workers.

He also accused post office management of bypassing the union and "trying to consult the membership on an individual basis."

In a 17-page letter to L. F. Reid, director of the Nova Scotia postal district, Tingley outlined the union's requirements.

The union is demanding that shifts not be changed; that the transfer follow seniority; that transferred workers be paid an additional 30 cents an hour; that they be given regular eye and ear examinations; that CUPW's safety committee have access to gauges monitoring toxic gases, humidity and temperature; that employees be given six months training for new positions and that those who fail the training be returned to their previous jobs.

CUPW is not opposed to technological change if the rights of the employees and conditions of their contract are upheld, he said.

If the rights are not upheld, the union executive may recommend that the employees not give the written consent required when moving to a mechanized plant from a non-mechanized one.

IT TAKES TIME — about 900 hours so far — to build a model of a ship the way Manlio Spessot is doing it. He figures the time he has spent on the boat so far has taken him only one-third of the way to completion, but the 46-year-old Ontario Science Centre master craftsman will have some extra time to spend on his model this weekend, when he will be working on it at the Canadian Spring Boat Show. The two-foot model is a replica of the Canadian brigantine Raven.

New Inflation Board Chairman Vows It's Not Just a Voter Lure

RENOUF
. . . a deperate need

OTTAWA (CP) — Harold Renouf, chairman of the government's new inflation monitoring agency, says he is doing his best to ignore political controversy and put the National Commission on Inflation to work.

Fully aware that NCI is being called a cynical Liberal election goody by government critics, he said in an interview Thursday: "That's natural; we are in highly political times."

But he does not feel the credibility or effectiveness of NCI is threatened. Listening to people across the country, he has become convinced they are confused and concerned about rising prices and profits and that there is a desperate need for explanations.

"I try to see things from the point of view of the Canadian people rather than paying attention to the political maneouvring of parties in their pre-election skirmishing.

Renouf will not say exactly when he expects the new agency to be in full operation. His only prediction is that it will be weeks, not months.

Nor can he say what his budget to carry out the government's 15-month mandate will be. He and several officials borrowed from the Anti-Inflation Board and the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity — the two price watchdogs which preceded NCI — now are estimating how much money to request from the government.

Renouf says he has not been given explicit guides, but Finance Minister Jean Chretien has told him to keep his staff to 100. This limits the size of wages and salaries, the agency's largest expense.

When Renouf accepted his three-year appointment as chairman of the AIB on May 1, 1977, he had a staff of 913. He says it will require a major shift in gears to run an organization of 100, but anticipates no problem making the transition. When he was a chartered accountant and management consultant in the private sector, Renouf accepted small contracts as readily as large ones.

But the limited size and lifespan of the new agency will force Renouf to select priorities, avoid long-range projects and decide quickly how much of its energy NCI can afford to spend studying underlying causes of inflation and how much will have to be directed into day-to-day price monitoring.

He hopes to pick up a number of the projects and plans developed by CSIP.

"I don't intend to re-invent the wheel."

But some of CSIP's projects will have to be shelved because of manpower limitations, others will be dropped because they do not fit within NCI's terms of reference and some will be rejected because there is no chance of completing them before June 30, 1980.

If the Progressive Conservatives win the next election, NCI will be disbanded long before 1980. The party's finance critic Sinclair Stevens has said the new agency would be scrapped shortly after a Conservative government was formed.

Renouf says it would be a shirking of his responsibility to let this threat play any part in the timetable of NCI

No First Aid: Mourning Dad

MONTREAL (CP) — Glen Applebee, the 16-year-old hockey player who died Thursday after breaking his neck in a game a week ago, would have had better than a 50-50 chance of living if someone at the arena knew basic first aid, says his father.

Glen lapsed into a coma after crashing into the boards during the intercity midget league game at suburban St. Laurent arena, and never regained consciousness.

"The neurosurgeon at the hospital told me that if Glen had received oxygen within three minutes of his injury he would have had a 60-per- cent chance of surviving," Gerald Applebee said Thursday in an interview.

"It's a freak accident and I don't hold anyone responsible, but with what the doctor told me, you can understand I can't help wondering what would have happened if someone could have done something," the father said.

Yet he mused: "Probably it's for the best he died. I wouldn't want to see him a vegetable."

Applebee was in the stands when his son was hurt.

Gordon, brother of the dead player, added: "We just would like to say that we wish every area had a competent person on duty to handle emergency situations like the one that happened with my brother."

Brian McKeown, an executive of the minor hockey association in which Applebee was playing, agreed arenas should be better prepared for emergencies.

"I don't know of any arenas in this region that have adequate first aid facilities or personnel on duty to cope with accidents," he said. "Parents give us their children and we have to share some of the responsibility."

Bus Owner Blamed In 40-Death Crash

BOLDUC
. . . criminally responsible

QUEBEC (CP) — A provincial coroner has found a bus owner criminally responsible in Canada's worst-ever highway accident which killed 40 people last August.

In a 45-page verdict released Thursday, Coroner J. Armand Drouin also criticized the provincial highway department, noting it has only enough inspectors to check annually half the province's school buses and "less than 10 per cent of all other buses."

The braking system on the 1956 model bus, which plunged into a lake drowning mostly handicapped people and volunteers returning from a theatre outing, "constituted an evident danger," the coroner said.

Since owner Gilles Bolduc himself performed the mechanical maintenance on it, he had to have been aware that the braking system on the bus was defective, said Drouin, who held the inquest last December in Granby, Que.

Evidence showed "a total absence of braking on the front wheels of the bus, excessive wear of the brake linings and water, oil and grease in the air reservoir."

Bolduc "took a risk in allowing the bus onto the road and he accepted the consequences of the risk," the coroner said.

Meanwhile, Crown prosecutor Yves Lagace of Granby said he would decide today whether charges, if any, will be laid against Bolduc.

Drouin also decided that driver Denis Martel was not criminally responsible for the accident near Eastman, 100 kilometres east of Montreal.

Martel knew the bus he was driving lacked a parking brake, but "tests carried out by experts show that this brake alone could not have stopped the bus on the Eastman hill."

Gov't Forced PQ Probe: Starnes

OTTAWA (CP) — Government instructions in the late 1960s made it inevitable that the RCMP security service would find itself looking into the Parti Quebecois, retired director-general John Starnes of the security service has told a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing.

"In effect the government had decided by late 1969 that separatism should be considered a subversive movement," Starnes testified at a closed session last Nov. 15.

"There was no way in which, if you were dealing with the problem of separatism in Quebec, you could avoid dealing with the Parti Quebecois."

Starnes said there was no way the security service would have investigated separatism "without government direction." The service had "bent over backwards to avoid becoming entangled in a fight between the Liberal Party and the Parti Quebecois."

Starnes authorized Operation Ham, in which the security service broke into a building after midnight Jan. 9, 1973, took computer tapes containing Parti Quebecois membership lists, copied them and returned them before dawn.

Starnes said he took pains to ensure that no cabinet minister knew of the operation.

His heavily-edited testimony was made public by the commission Thursday. The commission's normal daily transcript runs to about 200 pages but only 98 pages of the Nov. 15 transcript were released. The rest was kept secret for national security reasons, a commission lawyer said.

Prime Minister Trudeau and his cabinet had been "well-aware of our continuing interest in the separatist movement," Starnes said. He said Trudeau complimented him on a "damn good piece of work" in 1970, referring to a letter written by Starnes earlier in the year that included a 21-page list under the general heading Organizations Which Are Likely to Promote Violent Confrontation With Authority.

The Parti Quebecois was the first group on the list, but it was listed "not as a subversive organization but simply as the Parti Quebecois," Starnes said.

Jet Fighter Record Spotty

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Recent reports indicate General Dynamics, a contender for Canada's $2.3-billion fighter plane contract, has a "pretty appalling record" in fulfiling commitments with European buyers of the F-16 fighter, says New Democratic Party MP Stuart Leggatt.

But Defence Minister Barney Danson told the MP for New Westminster Thursday that Canada is negotiating firm guarantees with substantial penalties if General Dynamics fails to meet them.

Leggatt said at a Commons defence committee meeting the European buyers of the F-16 — Holland, Belgium, Denmark and Norway — are getting much less in industrial benefits than they were guaranteed by General Dynamics.

He said a recent Public Broadcasting System report in the United States indicated Holland was getting fewer jobs for Dutch industry than originally promised. And the aircraft price had almost doubled.

Danson replied there have been "some time lags and delays in negotiating contracts with a number of European countries and industry."

The minister and his deputy minister, C.R. Nixon, said Canada is negotiating contracts which set substantial financial penalties.

General Dynamics and McDonnell Douglas, manufacturer of the F-18A fighter, are the two finalists for Canada's fighter contract. The government wants 130 to 150 fighters for $2.3 billion in 1977 dollars.

The contract provides for increases in inflation and the government now estimates the overall cost when the final planes are delivered in 1986 or 1987 will be $3.6 billion.

Earlier Thursday, Danson reiterated the cabinet is unlikely to select the winning plane until late summer or early fall. Government officials have said the final contract is unlikely to be signed until October, a couple of months after the cabinet selection.

Danson indicated one of General Dynamics' problems in Europe is the ability of European industry to handle some of the aircraft component contracts.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the U.S. defence department has taken steps to limit possible damage to the image of the U.S. arms industry abroad from the television documentry on the F-16 jet fighter sales to four European countries.

The one-hour program is being aired this week in West Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, and Sweden. It has stirred a reaction in NATO defence circles.

Last week, the Pentagon dispatched a five-page cable to U.S. embassies inEurope asserting that the documentary was "slanted and inaccurate." The cable provided "information (that) will be of assistance in correcting the distorted impressions that may be created.

The American embassy in Brussels issued the Pentagon's rebuttal material in a press release Monday, hours before the program — entitled "F-16; Sale of the Century," was presented on a Belgian channel.

A March 9 report from the General Accounting Office has added to the Pentagon's sensitivity to criticism of the F-16, which is being built by General Dynamics for the Air Force.

The GAO report said a January 1978 data sheet on the plane provided to Congress failed to mention major deficiences found during operational testing.

In April 1978, GAO reported that the rate of loss for the F-16 due to malfunction of the single Pratt and Whitney F-100 engine is "currently estimated by the Air Force to be three times higher than that called for."

The F-16 is a high performance fighter-bomber intended as succesor to the U.S. Air Force's F-4 Phantom and for Phantoms and F-104 Starfighters in use by the European allies. General Dynamics won out over Sweden's Saab, France's Dassault and the U.S.'s Northrop in selling the F-16 to a consortium of NATO buyers made up of Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium.

Captive Market Booming

MONTREAL (CP) — The domestic market for kidnap and ransom insurance "is just developing," an insurance executive said here Thursday.

Pierre O'Gleman of American Home Assurance Co. told a meeting of corporate insurance administrators that the demand for such policies is continuing to grow, although bank extortion cases have fallen off in recent years.

O'Gleman would not reveal how many such policies his firm has outstanding, nor what kind of premiums are charged. He did say, however, that the extent of coverage is usually in the $1 million to $4 million range.

Seal Hunters Half Way To Full Quotas

ST. ANTHONY, Nfld. (CP) — Canadian and Norwegian sealing ships had passed the halfway point in their combined harp-seal quota of 77,000 by nightfall Thursday, and some vessels were preparing to head for the hooded seals.

Six of the seven Canadian vessels hunting in the drifting icepack north of Newfoundland reported 26,537 pelts on board. Total Canadian quota is 57,000.

The four Norwegian vessels had 11,751 pelts stowed below decks. Their total quota is 20,000.

Leader of the Canadian fleet by Thursday night was the Arctic Explorer with 6,798. The best Norwegian catch was 4,240 reported by the Polarstar.

Strong southerly winds had driven the ice which surrounds the fleet 10 nautical miles north of their position Wednesday.

The heavy ice was keeping the seventh Canadian vessel, Prince Andrew, away from the seals.

All vessels and the Canadian scientific ship Hudson were in the same general area about 160 nautical miles north of here, or 57 nautical miles from the nearest land at Spotted Island on the Labrador coast.

The four members of the Greenpeace Foundation still here were preparing to leave the area today after a protest action generally regarded as nothing more than a token of their opposition to the hunt.

Three other Greenpeace members, including Ed Chavies of Boston, who marked a seal pup with green dye on Wednesday, had left earlier. Federal officials still had made no decision about whether Chavies would be charged under regulations that forbid anyone except a licensed hunter from touching a seal.

Weather permitting, the Greenpeace chartered plane was to swing north along the Labrador coast to scout possible locations for a base for next year's protest.

Health Insurance Cuts 'Blackmail'

Canadian Press

The federal government's threats to cut health insurance payments to the provinces if medical plans cease to be universal amount to fiscal blackmail and clear intimidation, say spokesmen for two provincial medical associations.

Dr. Robert Clark, executive director of the Alberta Medical Association, said in an interview this week that Prime Minister Trudeau was trying to intimidate the provinces "in the hopes they'll intimidate the doctors to stay in the (medical care) system."

Last week in the Commons, Trudeau said the federal government would have to review its payments towards medical care if provinces undermine the universal aspect.

And Monique Begin, federal health minister, said earlier this week that the government was prepared to cut off the payments if universality has been undermined.

"Threats don't accomplish much," said Clark, adding that fundamental problems exist with Canada's health care system.

About 2,000 of Ontario's 11,700 doctors have withdrawn from the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP), while 130 of Manitoba's 1,170 physicians have dropped out of that province's medical care plan.

Doctors who opt out of those plans bill their patients directly at a higher rate than they would get under provincial fee schedules. Patients then collect a portion of the payments from the plans.

Most Ontario doctors who have opted out charge fees recommended by the Ontario Medical Association.

Luxury Loto Under Study, Iona Admits

OTTAWA (CP) — Sports Minister Iona Campagnolo confirmed Thursday that Loto Canada is considering the feasibility of introducing a "luxury loto" with tickets priced higher than $10.

But a Loto Canada official said there are no plans for a new game any time soon.

"Our research department is constantly looking at new variations," said Richard Gaul, director of corporate relations for the federal lottery corporation.

"But we have no immediate plans to launch any new games," he said in an interview. He would not say what price tickets or what types of prizes the research department was considering.

Mrs. Campagnolo told the Commons that Loto Canada is looking at a new lottery with higher-priced tickets.

sions that are tied to inflation.

Statistics Canada said beef cuts were up an average 10.8 per cent in early February and there were also higher prices for fresh fruits and vegetables, dairy products and for most cereal and bakery products.

There was a slight decline in chicken and sugar prices.

The consumer price index, which measures the cost of a constant basket of consumer goods and services each month, also showed there were higher prices for housing, new cars, clothing, tobacco, magazines, auto insurance and electricity.

StatsCan said that inflation has eroded the purchasing power of the dollar to the extent that a 1971 dollar now will purchase only 54 cents worth of goods.

The continued increase in the cost of living underlines a statement Thursday by Finance Minister Jean Chretien that inflation is "still Problem No. 1 in Canada."

Chretien said there is little more the government can do to keep prices under control now that wage and price controls have been abandoned.

Chretien has been predicting the rate of inflation would be only about seven per cent this year.

Jail for Drivers too much work to the Motor Vehicles Branch which is required to suspend the driver's licences of those who do not pay the penalties.

"This category of ICBC bad-debt suspensions has created a tremendous backlog and has diverted attention from suspensions based on bad-driving records."

A return to the fine system from the point system would have public support, the study suggests.

It says the point system has no immediate impact on drivers, frustrates police and allows dangerous drivers to remain on the road.

"Because of their proven bad-driving habits — leading to their disproportionate involvement in vehicle accidents — these drivers are extreme hazards and are also demonstrating their flagrant disregard for the law," the report says.

At the other end of the scale, the report recommends the court referee system be expanded to hear traffic ticket disputes — eliminating court appearances for minor violations.

Traffic offences currently occupy 30 per cent of the provincial court workload and use of a referee system would allow the courts to concentrate on serious criminal cases, the report says.

The committee calls for expanding the police computer information system to provide a more effective means of identifying bad drivers at the roadside.

"After all, we are a financial institution, not Avon," he said.

Hilliard said the endorsement deal is cleared first with the school principal.

The credit union, now working on the Sooke school district, hopes to sign up more schools.

A Bank of Commerce spokesman said it made some initial inquiries at schools but nothing came of the idea and the bank is not involved with the schools in the shares selling.

Hope for the Heart from Rib Cage of a Calf

City Researchers Work on New Valve

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A gossamer wisp of animal tissue is the latest hope for heart surgeons seeking the perfect implant valve.

And a trio of Victoria researchers are doing the original work of proving the artificial valve before it can be used as a human transplant.

Heart specialist Dr. Richard Brownlee, chief of cardiac surgery at Royal Jubilee Hospital, is the medical expert working with two young men from University of Victoria — physics PhD David Walker and physics research assistant Larry Scotten, an electronics specialist who has done shock wave research with UVic's Dr. John Dewey.

"It became a project when Brownlee proposed a new heart valve design, Dewey heard of it and suggested using Scotten and the university's fast research camera.

Scotten and Walker had no previous medical or biological experience. Their background is fluid dynamics, which of course is an important factor in circulation of the blood.

In a small research lab at Jubilee, Scotten and Walker built an artificial heart-pump. Through its optically clear plastic parts they can follow a saline solution representing blood flowing back and forth through an orifice where the action of their valve may be observed.

Using the ultra-fast movie camera the researchers can film this action and project it later at slow-motion speed.

The result is like watching the movement of a jellyfish pulsing through the water, its fragile membrane contracting and expanding rhythmically.

But instead of substanceless jelly, Scotten has used a fragment of pericardium from the rib cage of a calf. Cured by a process much like tanning leather, the soft, thin tissue was cut into two hemispherical pieces and stitched into a stiffened dacron ring which in turn may be sewn surgically into a blood vessel.

To demonstrate the valve, the pump pulses fluid in one direction so that the two slightly overlapping edges of pericardium open like the lips of a goldfish, allowing a clear flow. When the pulse ends and direction is reversed, the two pieces come quickly together and block the flow.

The slow-motion film shows the edges of pericardium flap away from and then toward each other from two opposite hinge points on the ring.

When the valve is open, the free edges wave like bedsheets in the wind. But when they snap together, the seal between them is tight as a zipper.

"It's a marvel that it even operates," Scotten said in describing the valve as a veil of tissue draped inside a ring. "You would wonder how it would ever close, but it does."

Brownlee can hardly wait for animal research to begin, when working valves can be implanted in living creatures to prove the first step toward extending human lives by transplant.

It is expected three or four more years of making and monitoring the new valve will be necessary before it can be considered for human use.

Brownlee described the development last month at a meeting in Brazil of the International Congress on Artificial Organs, where surgeons and researchers from the world over received the news with interest.

He said the great advances in this kind of medical technology have occurred in the past decade, and that from here on "refinement of procedures already available is the likely direction."

Brownlee cited the use of heart valves from domestic pigs in successful human transplant operations. A pig valve has three sections, compared with the two he and his colleagues came up with.

So part of the work being done at the Jubilee lab is testing existing artificial heart valves, for which the apparatus set up by Scotten and Walker was designed. They are evaluating valves on behalf of several U.S. labs, comparing them with each other and with their own models, rewarded by the gift of valves that would otherwise cost about $1,000 each.

The trio has spent $35,000-$40,000 in four years, a relatively small investment for the value of research obtained, or compared with the cost of nuclear medicine.

Most financing is by the B.C. Heart Foundation, with Jubilee providing accommodation and services and the university providing some equipment and computer time.

Brownlee said researchers in the heart field are usually aware of work being done elsewhere and what advances are being made, a result of professional ties and research publications. Abstracts of Scotten's and Walker's work have been presented to organizations like the cardiovascular society, congress of applied mechanics and the society for artificial organs.

At the Brazil meeting Brownlee met for the first time members of a New York group he knew had been working along similar lines.

"It's surprising how close we are," he said of an evaluation of three commercially-made valves. "It reinforces our work."

"It's comforting, too," Walker added:

Artificial valves were first implanted 20 years ago and perhaps 50 different models designed and used to prolong and save lives. But the search for the better valve continues because none does the exact job of the natural valve.

"We tend to be overly critical of them. That's our job," Walker said.

It is also a stimulating challenge, Scotten finds:

"What's interesting is how excited people are who are working in this area."

TOWN TALK

"Right in the middle of the Muppet show on Channel 2 Wednesday night that ominous notice flashes on screen: CBC News Bulletin.

What was coming — war in the Middle East? A nuclear disaster?

Nice-looking lady comes on. Her lips are moving but there's no sound. And then ". . . . heed's Conservatives have taken 35 seats and are leading in 31."

Sign flashes on again: This has been a CBC News Bulletin.

And lady's voice over: "Sorry, I really screwed that up didn't I?"

HARTWIG

Will Victoria developer Hans Hartwig really scrap his plans for a $5.5 million building on Wharf Street at the foot of Yates?

Hartwig says he will, because of the red tape he's snarled in at city hall, but one observer there says the cancellation threat is really just a bluff.

"He loves a fight," said the observer. "I'll bet he's already got his tank in second gear."

Curiosity led Doug Elliot of Vanderhoof to inscribe a 1971 Canadian 25-cent piece with this cryptic message:

Small reward.

And on the reverse:

Send to Box 396 Vanderhoof V0J 3M0.

That was 1½ years ago, and he had nearly forgotten until last month when he got a letter from the Times, enclosing the quarter which had been found in the printers' coffee fund.

Elliot said he scratched the lettering on with an electric stylus, thinking it would be interesting to see if the quarter came back and where it had been.

"Until I received your letter I had almost completely forgotten about it. I wonder how many others came across it before it came into your hands?"

He said he'd take it with him on holiday to Jamaica, spend it and wait for it to turn up again.

Meanwhile, we're still waiting for the "small reward."

Former Victorian Margaret "Robbie" Robinson reports to Town Talk from Cashmere, Wash., she has been swamped with mail from friends here since people learned she had been named Citizen of the Year by the Cashmere Chamber of Commerce.

Robbie, a registered nurse who was educated in Kamloops, North Vancouver and Victoria and was a supervisor at Glengarry Hospital from 1967 to 1969, exchanged her 41-year nursing career for a job with the Cashmere Valley Record as a columnist eight years ago.

She says "thanks" to all the old friends who have written her.

Saanich alderman Geoff Vantreight and the artificial daffodils he wears in his lapel and hands out to promote his farming activities are a familiar sight.

Now he's getting a little competition from the Mayor Mel Couvelier.

The mayor now sports a large button on his jacket when he does his political rounds.

The button, however, does not promote the clothing stores he owns but bears the Saanich crest.

Originally purchased for use by municipal employees, Couvelier considers them good public relations.

The Metric Commission's choice of metrage to replace mileage is an unlikely word to catch on with the public, says reader Doris Godfrey.

Her choice is much simpler — kliks.

She says she's not the originator of the expression. Her son-in-law said that when he was serving in Vietnam the word was in vogue.

The changeover may take some getting used to, Imagine asking someone how many kliks he gets to the gallon. And what about the Mile-Zero sign at Beacon Hill Park. Klik . . . zero. You must admit it has a ring to it though.

Brochure Dies After Bad Spell

The Visitors Information Centre has yanked the last 1,000 of its 15,000 tourist brochures because of a number of spelling errors.

About 14,000 of the brochures, called Greater Victoria and Southern Vancouver Island, have already been distributed widely in the U.S.

Errors include spelling of place names such as Bentwood for Brentwood and Juna de Fuca for Juan de Fuca.

The errors arose when the brochure was put out in a rush against the pressure of deadlines and in a dispute with the firm hired to do the job, Littleton Lawson and Associates.

VIC marketing director Lorraine Cooper said she would have to take responsiblity for the errors in the brochure despite the fact the VIC paid Littleton Lawson to edit it.

She said copy prepared by the advertising firm was not suitable and much of it had to be rewritten against a deadline. There was little time left for proofreading, although she assumed Littleton Lawson would be doing an editing job.

A company spokesman, Peter Lawson, said his firm became exasperated after several rewrites and just sent the material through as presented.

He said neither his company nor the VIC could have been pleased with the final result.

In any case, new brochures prepared with the help of the Department of Tourism will be out within two months and, hopefully, both Brentwood and Juan de Fuca will be restored to their proper spellings.

ARRESTINGLY ELEGANT pair of Saanich police officers, Sgt. Carl Bolger and Constable Claudia Winter, model the new dress uniform which has just been issued to officers on the force. Four years' research went into the design of the new uniform, which will make its debut at tonight's Saanich Police Ball at the University of Victoria. Uniforms' cost of about $150 each is partially offset by policemen agreeing to forego their regular clothing issue this year. Plainclothes officers who receive an annual allowance for clothes purchases will pay a nominal $35 toward the dress rig.

No Cheers For Senior Mortgages

A new mortgage idea giving retired people an annual income, but an increasing debt, likely won't catch on because older people hate to owe money, Silver Threads executive director Pauline Barker said today.

She said debts and health are the two main worries of the senior citizens she counsels.

"Health is the main reason for selling the family home, not money. People move to an apartment when they are no longer strong enough to look after the house or garden. This mortgage plan will not help them at all."

The proposal, put forward by Metropolitan Trust, and expected to be offered by a number of trust companies, offers annual payments for 10 years.

At the end of the 10 years the payments stop and the couple owe for the cash, plus interest, in the form of a first mortgage on the house.

Metroplitan gave this example. A couple with clear title to a house worth $80,000 would be entitled to a first mortgage of $59,100. The couple would get annual payments of $3,000 for 10 years, for a total of $30,000. But they would owe $59,100 because of the interest charges.

Behind the plan is the idea that the couple should spend the value of their home, rather than have the money spent by the children.

If the couple died at the end of the 10-year period, the children would have to deduct $59,100 from the selling price because of the mortgage, rather than getting the full amount.

Mrs. Barker said this idea is contrary to the nature of most retired people.

"They save all their life for their children and they want the money to go to them. The last thing they want to leave behind is a debt."

The mounting debt would be a worry to them at a time when they no longer want to have concerns of that kind.

"I don't want to sound so negative but this plan does not seem to fit the thinking of most of the people I counsel."

By the time they are retired, most people have paid for their home and they want the security of knowing there are no debts.

They want to stay in their homes as long as possible and they leave only when they are no longer able to tend the garden and do the repairs.

"Some people can't even change a lightbulb for themselves and when it gets that bad they have to think about moving to an apartment where these things are done for them.

"Moving from the family home is a real trauma and I counsel people to stay in their home as long as they can manage. Moving into an apartment is one more sign for them that they are getting old."

But it is health, not money, that is the deciding factor here.

Money is a problem only when it comes to paying for repairs for things they used to be able to do for themselves when younger.

Rather than having an annual mortgage payment in the form of cash (and the debt that goes with it) what senior citizens need is low-priced help around the house.

"There used to be some good services under the Opportunities for Youth program. What we need are more services for older people rather than special mortgage programs."

CREDIT UNION CAUGHT 'BIT OFF GUARD'

Day One: Good Action on Free Shares

The response Thursday to the first day of the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. free share offer was more than one financial house bargained for.

"We were astonished at the initial response," said chief executive officer Rodger Lutz of West Coast Savings Credit Union. "It caught us a bit off guard."

Other institutions reported moderate to strong client reaction.

Between 10 a.m. and noon, West Coast branches took in more than 700 applications, but the system was running well, Lutz said.

Most of the action was at the Hillside and Blanshard branch with Sooke branch the next busiest.

West Coast hired extra staff using federal employment grants for the two-month application period, and will rehire staff for the actual share distribution in September.

Harry Steele, manager of the Bank of B.C. main branch, said the response was as strong as expected with about 200 applications.

"What surprised me was that there were people buying shares," Steele said.

He hadn't expected sales, at a pre-market price of $6, to begin until the free distribution was taken up or at least well advanced.

Canada Trust said they had some sales and that the free share applications were going well.

"There was no great rush," said regional manager Roger Hemeon of the Royal Bank of Canada.

He said the bank may have outside sales through shopping mall booths staffed by bank personnel but this decision has not been made.

At the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce there was good volume handled today and Thursday as a lot of people passed through the main branch.

Some additional sales were made but manager Ken Travers does not expect demand to develop until later in the campaign.

A Bank of Nova Scotia teller said hardly anyone asked for shares Thursday.

"People probably stayed home to avoid opening day rush."

Ask the Times

Q. I understand there is a method of calculating the outside temperature by which one counts the number of times a cricket chirps per minute, then using an arithmetical formula. If such is the case, do you know the formula? E.L.M.

A. We are informed by an entomologist that such is the case and the research to explain why and how this is known would be available in scientific papers somewhere. He did not know the formula and suggests you try to locate a library with an index of academic journals that might lead to the subject. It might be pointed out that crickets exist in many varieties, only about two of which are common to Canada. The one on which the chirp research was done is thought to have been from a warmer climate where temperatures are unlikely to be extreme. It is believed that temperature is a factor in mating, to which the chirps relate.

Planners Wreck School Budgets: Trustee

Greater Victoria school board's planning committee wants municipalities to stop approving housing developments that bring more children into already overcrowded schools.

The committee Wednesday asked the school board to take a strong stand on future developments in the municipalities within the district.

The recommendation was made by committee chairman Trustee Win Mott.

The board needs a clear-cut policy describing types of development and where they should take place, Mott said.

He wants school planners to play a watchdog role over municipal councils — making sure school conditions are considered when they deal with proposed developments, and informing the board when its policy is about to be violated.

Councils should be told the exact capacity of each school in their municipalities, Mott said.

They should be informed the board opposes development that increases school- age population in areas where schools are at capacity or already overcrowded, while there are under-used schools in the district.

The councils and the public should be advised ahead of time about education-related capital costs of proposed developments.

He said the board has the right to play an active part in municipal planning because new development by the municipalities — Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, and Esquimalt — costs the school system considerable money.

The recommendation was supported by Trustee Martin Levin who said it's time the district stopped tailoring development to suit the education needs of municipalities and took control of its own future.

"The motion serves notice to every municipality they better take into consideration when planning new developments the impact on the school district.

"They can't assume the school district will run after them and serve their needs," Levin said.

The policy will implicate municipalities in the problems of escalating school budgets, which are partly the result of unequal distribution of student populations, Levin said.

Trustee Susan Brice questioned the effectiveness of the board getting heavily involved in municipal planning decisions.

"The idea that municipal planning and growth hinges that significantly on school population is naive," she said.

Existing school facilities are only a small part of the complex web of considerations municipalities face when planning new development, Brice said.

Regional Revamp On Way: Minister

COURTENAY (CP) — Legislation designed to make major changes in the structures of regional districts and the way they operate likely will be introduced in late summer or early fall, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Thursday.

Vander Zalm said planning is one of the most frequent complaints he hears about regional districts, and the increasing size of the districts is also of great concern.

He said regional districts have too much power and can't possibly be responsive to the public.

Vander Zalm said he was interested in the county system of government used in Oregon and Washington state.

Hobie Fleet Prepping for Big One

A hint of things to come will be seen Sunday when members of the Victoria Hobie Fleet 261 hold a sailathon out of Sidney's Tulista Park, starting at 9 a.m.

These fast-moving craft are fascinating to watch even though you may not have been bitten wuth the "rag-hauling" bug.

The Hobie enthusiasts have been collecting pledges — so much per hour — as a means of raising money for their Race the Best International Regatta, which will take place in waters off the Esquimalt Lagoon on the Easter weekend.

Hobie Cat racing takes place all over the world with more than 80,000 boats taking part in some 1,500 regattas each year. The Easter sailout will mark the first time such a regatta has been held in Victoria and it promises to be a dandy.

Brian McLeod and Mark Philbrook expect about 150 boats and some of North America's top Hobie sailors to take part.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Coming from Hawaii will be Dean Froome, who is almost legendary for his heavy weather sailing. He came third in the Hobie 16 worlds, held in Texas last year and will be racing 16s here. In 1976 he won the Hobie 16 worlds in Hawaii and became Hobie 14 world champion the following year in the Canary Islands.

Wayne Schafer of Dana Point, Calif. will also be here. Some say he is the best all-weather sailor around. Wayne placed second in two U.S. Hobie 14 national competitions and won the title in both 1971 and 1976.

Paul Ulibarri, well-known on the world's ocean-racing circuit, will be here from Seattle.

Brian is one of those who will be competing against Paul while Mark, Keith Battersby and Bill Egeland will be testing their skills against Dean. Local sailors Urs Ruegsegger and Rick Dash will be among those in Wayne's class.

If you're in the Sidney area on the weekend you may want to take in Thunderbird Yacht Sales's floating boat show at the Westport Marina which started Thursday and goes on through Sunday.

The show, which is open st noon each day, features both power and sail, including Bill Garden's Buccaneer 305 and the three-quarter-tonner Buccaneer 335. In the three-quarter worlds held here last year the Buccaneer 335 Rhapsody was fifth over-all and the highest-placing production boat.

Also out at Sidney the Canoe Bay Sailing Club has another six-mile series race set for Saturday. The race will get under way at 1 p.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf.

Forty-six CBSC boats took part in a 12-miler to D'Arcy Shoals and back on Sunday, the winner being Louis Lindholm's Annie Cadby.

Shorewatchers in the Oak Bay area will also have plenty to watch this weekend when the Royal Victoria Yacht Club holds its invitational T.H.R.A.S.H. (Thank Heavens Racing and Spring Here) Regatta. The best vantage point is probably Cattle Point.

More than 80 boats are expected to take part with racing beginning 11 a.m. on Saturday and 10 a.m. on Sunday. There will be a three-race series for Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boats and one-design racing for six-metres, Solings, Stars, Viking 33s, Cal 20s, Thunderbirds and other classes.

Because of the weather, the club's Laser sailors had to settle for one race on Saturday, which was won by Bob Britten with Andy Burton and Rupert Holmes-Smith finishing right behind him.

The race completed the E series which was won by Jim Allen, who edged Barry Wright and Doug Gray. The top juniors in the series were Mike Turner, Dave Hingley and Kim Hellwig.

Soren Isbrand is feeling pretty good these days, having won the Turkey Head Sailing Association's C series in Danish Pastry. Runners-up are Gary Cooney's Hocus and JackFoster's Sherlock.

Hocus won and Sherlock came second in the first of two THSA races sailed on Sunday.

SOFTBALL REGISTRATION

Final registration for players interested in competing in Saanich Softball Association leagues will be accepeted Saturday at Hampton Park between noon and 3 p.m. Boys and girls between eight to 19 years are invited. Additonal information may be obtained by telephoning 479-2946.

BIRD SPARKS INDIANA WIN

By The Associated Press

Top-ranked Indiana State, led by a 29-point effort from player-of-the-year Larry Bird, rolled to its 31st consecutive victory of the season, routing No. 16 Oklahoma 93-72 on Thursday night and advancing to the championship game of the NCAA midwest regional basketball tournament.

The Sycamores' opponent in Saturday's final will be No. 5 Arkansas, a 73-62 winner over No. 13 Louisville in the other midwest semi-final game.

In the west regional semi-finals at Provo, Utah, No. 6 DePaul defeated No. 10 Marquette, 62-56. No. 2 UCLA cruised to a 99-81 victory over No. 12 San Francisco. UCLA will meet DePaul in the west regional championship game on Saturday.

The other regional semi-finals will be played tonight. In the east regional at Greensboro, N.C., it will be No. 8 Syracuse against No. 14 Penn, and No. 17 St. John's against No. 18 Rutgers. In the mideast regional at Indianapolis, No. 19 Toledo plays No. 4 Notre Dame and No. 7 Louisiana State meets No. 3 Michigan State.

The regional winners advance to next week's U.S. national semi-finals at Salt Lake City.

In the National Invitation Tournament, No. 15 Purdue and unranked Alabama posted quarter-final victories. Purdue downed Old Dominion 67-59 and Alabama outlasted Texas A and M 72-68.

HIGH SIGN on goal is given by Victoria's George Fritz after Cougar defenceman Scott Lang connected during first period of Thursday's Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena. Cougars went on to score 7-3 victory over Lethbridge Broncos. (AP wirephoto).

24th Straight For Panthers

VANCOUVER — Parkland Panthers continued to chew up the opposition Thursday and advanced to the semi-finals of the British Columbia "AA" high school boys' basketball championship at Pacific Coliseum.

But Panthers, who have won their past 24 games in exhibition, league and post-season play, found the chewing a little tougher than in past encounters before disposing of Mennonite Educational Institute Eagles 69-65 in a quarter-final tussle.

Panthers now face Richmond Colts, who upset top-ranked West Vancouver Highlanders 80-74, at 9 tonight.

Burnaby South Rebels meet Gladstone Gladiators of Vancouver in the other semi-final at 7:15.

Burnaby South, the Lower Mainland champion, defeated Delta 74-59 and Gladstone downed Magee also of Vancouver, 66-54.

Eagles refused to be intimidated by Parkland's reputation, despite being on the wrong end of a 41-31 count at half time.

They regrouped during the intermission and came out scrapping.

Greg Wiltjer set the pace for Parkland with 25 points and was part of the cause of some light treading by Panthers after the break. Wiltjer, who partnered Quinn Groenhyde in some standout defensive work in the first half, picked up two fouls in the opening quarter and had to be careful the rest of the way.

Groenhyde backed Wiltjer's offensive thrust with 18 points.

Eagles picked up momentum after the break and their outside shooting, which was foiled in the first half, began to connect. In addition, they started to double-team the Wiltjer-Groenhyde duo.

This strategy paid off and the Mennonite squad closed the gap to within two points late in the contest but Parkland managed to hang on for the win.

Ken Klassen sparked Eagles with 20 points.

Burnaby South was led by Prian Craig with 24 points.

Guard Alan Tait led the way with 34 points in Richmond's win over West Vancouver. Doug Vicic of West Vancouver picked up 28 points.

Gladstone was paced with 44 points from Tony Marchese in its win over Magee. Magee's top scorer was Bill Nicol with 19 points.

In consolation play Thursday, Nanaimo Islanders crushed Mission 82-50, Duchess Park of Prince George tripped Mt. Douglas Rams 72-57, KLO of Kelowna defeated Mount Baker of Cranbrook 61-42 and Caledonia of Terrace edged Penticton, 49-43.

Espo Blasts Sink Boston

By Canadian Press

Phil Esposito still has a warm spot in his heart for Boston Bruins. He just has a funny way of showing it.

The 37-year-old centre, whose 672 career goals are second only to Gordie Howe's 786 in the history of the National Hockey League, got 453 of those over 8½ seasons with the Bruins.

But he turned on his former clubmates Thursday night, scoring four goals to pace New York Rangers to a 7-4 victory over the Bruins at Boston Garden.

"Sure, I have feelings for the Bruins," he said. "You don't spend that much of your life in a place without having feelings for them. But it's part of the business. My job is to perform as well as I can for the Rangers. The 'B' will always be in my mind, but I'm a New York Ranger and I'm proud to be a New York Ranger."

And the Rangers, as a result of Espo's outburst, are only two points behind the Bruins in the race for the third-best overall record in the NHL.

Montreal Canadiens and New York Islanders are tied for the top spot with 98 points — thanks to the Islanders' 6-2 triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs behind Bryan Trottier's three goals.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia Flyers edged Atlanta Flames 5-4, while Buffalo Sabres downed Vancouver Canucks, 4-2.

It was Esposito's fifth four-goal game of his career and stretched his own NHL record to 31 three-goal-or-more games.

Ric Seiling scored Buffalo's winning goal early in the third period and set up an insurance scored by Don Luce as the Sabres extended their unbeaten streak to six games and stretched Vancouver's losing string to seven. Seiling broke a 2-2 tie just 33 seconds into the final period when he cut across to convert a pass from Luce, who was behind the Vancouver net. Ron Sedlbauer scored his 37th goal of the season for the Canucks. (Summaries on page 33)

Can't Hold Denat Back

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

You're not supposed to be able to keep them down on the farm once they've seen gay Paris, but in Brent Denat's case, you can't hold him in Victoria once he's signed the letter of intent that will keep him in Michigan for four years.

The hometown boy made good in his debut with Victoria Cougars, but no one is looking for Denat to stick with the Western Hockey League team beyond the end of the season. For the same reason he hasn't been brought up from the farm before.

Called up from Nanaimo after the Clippers bowed out of the B.C. Junior League playoffs, Denat scored two goals and picked up a pair of assists to help the Cougars to Thursday's 7-3 victory over Lethbridge Broncos at Memorial Arena.

There was zip in his skating and checking and some of the scoring talents that enabled Denat to score 57 goals and 73 assists with Clippers during the past season. Only 18, and with another season of junior eligiblity ahead of him, but don't expect him back for the 1979-80 campaign.

Three Michigan colleges are wooing the Victoria native and Denat has decided to accept the four-year scholarship from Michigan Tech.

His scholastic leanings were known, and that's why Denat hasn't played in the WHL before. Players signing a standard major junior league contract are ineligible to accept scholarships from an American school.

Nothing to sign for the rest of the season. Denat qualifies to play for the Cougars for the rest of the season, including playoffs, on his Nanaimo card without jeopardizing his scholarship.

On the strength of Thursday's performance, Denat's presence could help. There's the scoring factor but Victoria coach Jack Shupe also welcomes the "manouevring room" that Denat, Len Dawes and Ryan McAdams give the Cougars for the stretch run and into the playoffs.

"They might shake up some of the guys who aren't putting out," said Shupe.

Thursday, Shupe benched winger Randy Irving to make room for Dawes and Denat.

Dawes saw his share of ice time but didn't look as impressive as he did in an earlier three-game trial with the Cougars. Nonetheless he didn't look out of place with a defence that had its problems.

But for the work of Victoria netminder Steve Amiss in the first two periods, the Broncos might have made a game of it. The Broncos took five clear-cut runs at Amiss in the first two periods, one by Dave Snopek and two each by Gord Williams and Duane Sutter. None of the breakaways resulted in goals.

Williams still scored a pair and Snopek got the other as Lethbridge out-shot Victoria 46-43.

In addition to Denat, Barry Pederson, playing a strong game, also scored twice while Scott Lang, Gary Lupul, with his 52nd of the season, and Geordie Robertson added Victoria's singles. Lupul, a going concern, failed to get another point that would have pushed his season's total to 100.

With the victory, the second-place Cougars moved three points ahead of New Westminster Bruins and get a chance to pad the margin then they visit Seattle tonight. The battle for second, however, may well be determined Saturday when the Bruins and Cougars meet at Memorial Arena for the final time this season.

The setback, combined with Billings Bighorns' 5-2 victory over Regina Pats, darkened Lethbridge's hopes of a first-place finish in the Central Division. The Broncos now trail the Bighorns by seven points and still have to face New Westminster and Seattle on their West Coast swing.

Fish Admits To Pressure

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Darren Fish is feeling the pressure of giving Canada its fourth straight world's junior men's curling title.

"Last month all I could think of was the Canadian" junior championship, said the 18-year-old Edmonton skip. "But now the world championship is only two games away."

If he wins, Fish would follow the footsteps of Paul Gowsell of Calgary, the 1976 and 1978 champion, and 1977 winner Bill Jenkins of Charlottetown.

Thursday, Fish downed Sweden's Tony Eng 9-7 in an extra-end game and Italy's Massimo Alvera 6-4 to finish first in the round robin with an 8-1 record.

Fish plays Scotland's Andrew McQuistin in one semi-final tonight, while the U.S. rink of Don Barcome meets Norway's Sjur Loen in the other.

McQuistin came back from two straight losses Wednesday to take France's Claude Feige 6-5 and Switzerland's Eric Francois Rudolf 5-3 to finish fourth with a 6-3 record.

Barcome took Italy 6-3 and then cruised to a 9-4 win over Denmark's Tommy Stjerne to take second spot with a 7-2 record.

Loen lost 6-5 to Stjerne in the afternoon but came back to beat France 7-5 at night. Loen finished the round robin with with the same record as that of Scotland but placed third by virtue of a 8-7 win over McQuistin Wednesday.

Although Fish finished at top of the standings, he said it might have been better to have placed second so he could be meeting Norway instead of Scotland tonight.

"I think in Scotland we'll be playing the better team — we had our best game againt them in the round robin."

Thursday night, the Italians jumped ahead early and were only a point behind Fish going into the final end.

However, Alvera made a strange call on his rock in the 10th end, choosing to take out Fish's counter although Fish had the last rock. He made the hit but left Fish with an unguarded stone to take out.

Later, the 20-year-old Italian skip said he opted for the takeout because "the only hope was that Fish would miss."

Saskatchewan Takes Junior Women's Title

Times News Services

Saskatchewan won the Canadian junior women's curling championship at Yorkton, Sask., Thursday night when Denise Wilson of Saskatoon beat Wendy McCullough of Kingston, Ont., 7-5 in the 11th and final round.

Manitoba had a chance to force a playoff but blew it when Wanda Kirby of Snow Lake lost 8-4 to Marie-Anne Vautour, Canada Winter Games champion from Riverview, N.B.

Wilson, third Judy Walker, second Dianne Choquette and lead Shannon Olafson met for the first time last fall.

Manitoba and Ontario finished with seven victories and three losses apiece to share second place.

Sandra Knights of Calgary, whose Alberta rink had been tied for the lead going into Thursday's final two rounds, lost twice and had to settle for a share of fourth place with British Columbia at 6-4.

In Lloydminster, Alta., Dick Austin of Esquimalt moved into a first-place tie in the Canadian Legion Dominion championship by winning two games.

Austin's foursome defeated Quebec 8-5 and Saskatchewan 7-6. That gave Austin a 6-2 record and a tie with Quebec.

Newfoundland, Ontario and Alberta are tied for third with 5-3 marks.

In Edmonton, Alberta won two games to remain the only undefeated rink at the Canadian police championship.

The Alberta rink, skipped by Harvey Gregorash of Calgary, defeated Nova Scotia 9-8 and Dave Wilson of British Columbia 8-6.

The Canadian senior women's championship begins at Vernon Saturday night with the Flora Martin rink of Victoria Curling Club representing B.C.

Playing with Martin are third Elsie Humphrey, second Verle McKeown and lead Edna Messum.

The Canadian mixed championship begins at Prince George with two draws Sunday.

Ivan Carlisle of Port Alberni replaced Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver as the B.C. representative when Sparkes' wife Lindsay won the Canadian women's championship, eliminated Sparkes from the national mixed.

Lindsay and her women's rink third Dawn Knowles were members of Sparkes' mixed foursome, but are playing in the world women's championship next week in Perth, Scotland.

Playing with Carlisle are third Eleanor Gulstene, second Wayne Beskau and lead Trudy Beskau.

Whitecaps Show U.K. Stars Here

Some exciting new players could be in the lineup when Vancouver Whitecaps pay a visit Wednesday for the annual Victoria Cup match against the Vancouver Island Soccer League Selects at Royal Athletic Park.

Game time is 7 p.m.

Newly signed with the North American League club are Ray Lewington, a young fullback from Chelsea; Roger Kenyon, a veteran midfielder from Everton who has played for the English national side several times; and Trevor Waymork, another English international who comes to Vancouver from Ipswich.

Waymork, who holds the Ipswich lifetime scoring record, should form a deadly combination with returning star Kevin Hector.

Other returnees to Whitecaps, who were the biggest success story of the last NASL season, are goalkeeper Phil Parkes, Derek Possee, John Craven, Buzz Parsons, Jon Sammels, Peter Danniels, brothers Sam and Bob Lenarduzzi and former Victorian Bob Bolitho.

Whitecaps hold a 3-1 record in the annual match which supplies funds for the Lions Club Telethon.

Coach Brian Robinson of Selects will pick his starting lineup later.

Meanwhile, Island League clubs will be embroiled in Jackson Cup quarter-final matches at the weekend.

Victoria Athletics meet Nanaimo United at Royal Athletic Park, Saturday.

On Sunday, Victoria West tackles Metro Toyota at Heywood Avenue, Gorge meets Oak Bay at Hampton Park, and Prospect Lake travels to Nanaimo to play Nanaimo City. All matches are at 2:15 p.m.

Players named to Selects:

Goaltenders: Steve Akam (Oak Bay), Grant Darley (Victoria Athletics).

Backs: Ray Telford (Nanaimo United), Steve Carroll (Victoria Athletics), Brock Coupar (Cosmopolitan Royals), Dan Lomas (UVic Vikings), Kim Blank (Victoria Athletics), Tim Achtizner (Victoria West).

Midfield: Mark Robb (Victoria Athletics), Drew Porter (Cosmopolitan Royals), John Nash (Oak Bay), Steve Moss (Victoria West), Steve Forslund (Victoria West).

Forwards: Bob Mackie (Cosmopolitan Royals), Howie Kirk (Gorge), Gary Cleaver (Duncan), Garnet Moen (Victoria West).

Island Teams at Home For Five Cup Matches

Vancouver Island squads will have home-field advantage in five matches of the Provincial Cup interdistrict youth soccer playoffs this weekend.

Matches are scheduled in all seven divisions and the feature match is likely to be a second-division quarter-final tussle between Gorge FC and Delta Peace Arch Panthers at 2 p.m. Sunday in Hyacinth Park.

Schedule:

SATURDAY

Quarter-final

Second division: Victoria Gorge FC vs. Delta Peace Arch Panthers, Hyacinth Park, Victoria. 2 p.m.

Selwood Signed

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens have acquired defenceman Brad Selwood and signed him to a National Hockey League contract.

Jets Wary of New Merger Talks

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets are wary about a last-minute proposal from the National Hockey League to keep talk of league expansion alive.

"First, we want to see it," Jets spokesman Marc Cloutier said Thursday. "Then, it should be dealt with at the bargaining table, not through the media."

"We feel there have been too many quotes in the paper and too many people getting hurt. Nobody's winning."

Cloutier said he was referring to sharp criticism of Molson Breweries of Canada Ltd. and Frank Griffiths, chairman of the board of Vancouver Canucks.

The Canucks and the Molson-owned Montreal Canadiens were two of five NHL clubs which voted last week against admitting Winnipeg and three other World Hockey Association teams to the league next season.

Some sports commentators called for an immediate boycott of Molson's products. Western Broadcasting Ltd., which has the major interest in the Canucks, also came in for scattered criticism.

Cloutier and general manager John Ferguson say the Jets are cautious about media speculation on a new proposal which NHL governors will discuss in Chicago March 22.

Radio station CKNW of New Westminster, B.C., reported Wednesday, without naming its source, that the major points of the plan included giving NHL teams rights to many WHA players, excluding the four WHA teams from national television revenue for five years, and charging each team $6 million for NHL admission.

Ferguson said the Jets want further consideration of all three points.

Reports indicate WHA teams would be allowed to protect only two goaltenders and two skaters from among the players to which the NHL claims rights.

"That has to be a negotiable item," said Ferguson. "I think we could live with keeping five skaters and two goaltenders."

The list of Jets players claimed by NHL teams includes goaltenders Joe Daley and Markus Mattson and skaters Bobby Hull, Terry Ruskowski, Kent Nilsson, Morris Lukowich and Lyle Moffatt.

A proposal to have all NHL teams share in the television revenues from Hockey Night in Canada could be even more contentious an issue than player rights.

Salmon Returns Up, Steelhead Still Fair

Salmon fishing is starting to pick up tempo and steelheaders continue to connect in several rivers around Vancouver Island.

Bluebacks and small chinooks to eight pounds form a fifty-fifty catch off Sooke in the vicinity of Secretary Island.

Green and white or blue and white hootchies, either trolled alone or rigged over a minnow, are picking up the best catches close to the bottom.

Becher Bay fishermen are landing chinooks to 20 pounds along with a few blues between Bedford and Church islands as well as in the 20-fathom hole between Beechey Head and Aldridge Point. Again, hootchies are the top producer.

Waters between Christopher Point and Church are yielding chinooks to 21 pounds for fishermen venturing out of Pedder Bay. Fish with strip or minnow about 290 feet down. Blues to two pounds have been taken on spinning gear in the same area.

Blues form the main catch off Oak Bay with concentrations noted on Constance Bank as well as near Trial Island and The Gap. Fish with spoons and hootchies just under the surface.

Fishing action is still slow off Sidney but Deep Cove reports a few chinooks to six pounds have been landed on silver hootchies and minnows trolled at the 250-foot depth off Moses Point and Wain Rock.

Action is picking up in the middle part of Saanich Inlet with numerous blues and a few chinooks to 18 pounds showing off Indian Bay, Senanus Island and Bamberton.

Use hootchies (green and white or blue and white), Flashtails, Krippled-K's or strip for best results. In the early morning or late evening, try 100 to 150 feet of line and a planer.

Blueback fishing turned hot Sunday in Finlayson Arm with concentrations off McKenzie Bay and Stone House. Most were taken on shallow lines using green and white or red and white hootchies or bucktails. Fishermen using plugs are picking up a few chinooks on 250 feet of line and two pounds of weight.

Further up-Island, a few small chinooks are showing through Sansum Narrows and around Chemainus but a brief flurry of activity off Ladysmith appears to have died out.

Nanaimo fishermen are landing chinooks to 10 pounnds at about the 170-foot depth off Snake Island and Five Fingers.

The only other bright spot for saltchuck fishermen is near Campbell River, where they're taking a few chinooks to 21 pounds and blues between Cape Mudge and Duncan Bay and off Willow Point.

The favored method has been by trolling purple and white bucktails at a slow speed with about four ounces of weight.

Steelheaders have hit it lucky in the San Juan River-Harris Creek system and a few steelies are still coming out of the Cowichan River.

The Nanaimo River is yielding some good catches of these sea-run rainbows and a few are coming from the Englishman River and the lower reaches of the Somass River.

Both the Oyster and Tsolum are producing fair catches and some good returns were reported from the Quinsam, Campbell and Kokish systems.

Although its still a little early, trout anglers are starting to pick up a few catches in both Cowichan and Shawnigan lakes.

NIBBLES: Ron Ptolemy of the Fish and Wildlife Branch has announced a complete angling closure on both Craigflower and Colquitz creeks in the Greater Victoria area from April 1 to May 31 . . . A spawning closure is now in affect.

Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association will hold its monthly meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in the Strawberry Vale Hall, 11 High Street . . . On the agenda is a panel discussion on hiking techniques as well as a slide show that includes scenes on the West-Coast Trail.

DEAL EASLER TO BUCS

Bosox Get Dwyer

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, beating baseball's inter-league trading deadline, sent first baseman-outfielder Mike Easler to Pittsburgh Pirates and acquired outfielder Jim Dwyer from San Francisco Giants on Thursday night in two minor deals.

Easler, purchased from the Pittsburgh organization last October after leading the International League in batting with a .330 average for Columbus, was traded to the Pirates for two players and cash.

The two players were outfielder George Hill, 25, who played with Salem in the Carolina League last season, and right-handed pitcher Martine Rivas of the Dominican Republic. Both were assigned to Pawtucket of the International League.

Dwyer, a left-handed outfielder with a .235 average in 364 games with Montreal, New York Mets, St. Louis Cardinals and Giants, was acquired from San Francisco for a player to be named later.

Commenting on the deals, Boston Manager Don Zimmer said:

"Easler can hit, but he hasn't shown he can do the job defensively. In Dwyer, we are getting a player I know can do the job in centre field in case anything happens to Fred Lynn."

In other news, the Cincinnati Reds announced the signing of pitcher Manny Sarmiento to a one-year contract.

Add Tapie to List Of Changed Men

MIAMI (AP) — It was at the Doral Open golf tournament a year ago that Alan Tapie made a decision.

"It was a change in attitude," said Tapie. "I decided I just had to start believing in myself more, not get down on myself. I decided that if I was gonna hit it in the water, well, I'd hit it in the water, but I'd do it with authority.

And Tapie's change in approach was evident Thursday as he celebrated his return to the site of the change with a six-under-par 66 that staked him to the first-round lead in the $250,000 tournament.

"It's a mental thing out here on the tour. It's easy to get down on yourself. And if you do, instead of going from shot to shot, you go from crises to crises. Who can you turn to? You have to keep reaching down within yourself. And that's tough to do day after day."

"It's been a slow road for me," added the 29-year-old Tapie, who has yet to win in five years of tour activity.

His major area of improvement in this event was his putting. He one-putted his first six holes, once saving par from off the green, and finished the day with only 25 putts.

Two Share Lead In LPGA Tourney

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Vivian Brownlee and Nayoko Yoshikawa carded four-under-par 68s Thursday to share the first-round lead in the $150,000 Rancho Bernardo Golf Classic.

Brownlee, of Dunedin, Fla., was in the first group off the tee in the Ladies Professional Golf Association event on the 6,212-yard, par-72 Rancho Bernardo Inn and Country Club course and her 68 stood up until Yoshikawa, of Kyoto, Japan, matched her.

Second at 69 in the 72-hole event which ends Sunday were Barbara Moxness and Amy Alcott. Two strokes off the pace after 18 holes were Susie McAllister, Louise Bruce, Sandra Spuzich and Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont.

Brownlee began her round with her only bogey, then settled down to record 12 pars and five birdies.

Yoshikawa also bogeyed her first hole. She finished with six birdies and two bogeys, and had to one-putt four times to save par.

Russian Takes Skate Title

VIENNA (CP) — It was the Soviet Union's turn to celebrate at the world figure skating championships Thursday, while the Americans took a back seat and more and more Canadians wore long faces.

The Americans, who just got over cheering for the pairs victory of Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner on Wednesday, saw Charles Tickner of Littleton, Colo., not only lose his men's title but finish out of the medals.

Vladimir Kovalev of the Soviet Union, the 1977 champion, finished fourth in Thursday night's free-skating final, but his margin after the first half of competition — the figures and short program — was enough to keep him in front for the gold medal.

Robin Cousins of Britain won the free skating and moved up from fourth spot to take the silver medal, with Jan Hoffman of East Germany, the 1974 title winner, finishing third and Tickner fourth.

Canadian mens champion Brian Pockar of Calgary fell twice during his free-skating final, but still managed to pull up one place to 13th, while Vern Taylor of Toronto moved up to 15th from 17th spot.

Pockar was 10th in his second world appearance at Ottawa last year, while Taylor finished 12th. showing.

Elsewhere Thursday, Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., remained sixth in the dance competition after the third compulsory and the set pattern dance.

Janet Morrissey of Ottawa, in her first world championship, was 17th after the women's compulsory figures.

Defending champion Anett Poetzsch of East Germany had the lead after the womens figures, followed by Dagmar Lurz of West Germany and 1977 champion Linda Fratianne.

Natalia Linichuk and Gennadi Karpnosov, the defending champions from the Soviet Union, continued to hold a strong lead in the dance competition over Krisztina Regoeczy and Andras Sallay of Hungary.

Canada's second dance entry, Patricia Fletcher and Michael de la Penotiere of Toronto, remained in 15th place.

The men's final provided an exciting finish with first Tickner, then Hoffman and Cousins skating flawless performances. But Cousins impressed the judges most and slipped into second place from fourth, pushing Hoffman and Tickner down one place each.

Pockar fell twice while attempting triple jumps.

"I guess everyone is entitled to one bad night and this was mine," said Pockar.

Taylor said he was looking forward to next year when the championships will be held in Munich. The 21-year-old Toronto skater said he had learned a lot here, mainly that there are so many more adjustments to make when competing in a foreign country, compared with competing in Ottawa as he did last year.

Meanwhile, Morrissey was pleased with her first taste of world competition. The 19-year-old Carleton University student's 17th placing put her near the middle of the 31-entry list with a chance to move up on the strength of her consistent free skating.

"I feel good about the way I'm going so far and I'm really looking forward to the rest of the competition."

The women skate their short program today and their free-skating final Saturday night.

Wolfe Acknowledges Horsemen's Problems

By BILL WALKER, Times Staff

The start of the thoroughbred racing season at Exhibition Park in Vancouver has been threatened by a boycott by horsemen, but the principals involved in the dispute are cognizant of the seriousness of the situation and responding to it.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Thursday he was aware of the economic problems facing horsemen and will be looking into a request by the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association for a reduction in the pari-mutuel tax and responding to it.

He indicated some relief was in sight but said it would not be as much as the horsemen sought. In a recent letter to the HPBA he said the government had a study of the racing industry underway.

Wolfe was responding to a threat by the HBPA not to race this year at Exhibition Park unless the provincial government reduces the pari-mutuel tax.

The HBPA sent a sharply-worded letter to Wolfe stating the net 6½ per cent government take was excessive and that the government should have acted before now in reducing it.

"Our members are in desperate financial state in view of rising costs of racing thoroughbreds versus the negligible enhancement in purse money over the last few years," HBPA president Ken O'Connell said in the letter to the government.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Thoroughbred Breeders Society joined the HPBA in asking the government for a definite response.

"We are supporting them in their position," said president Ole Nielsen in a telegram to the government.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Jockey Club is going ahead with plans for the season's opening at Exhibition Park, April 9.

Merv Peters, director of racing at Exhibition Park, said the HBPA and BCTBS had taken this latest action on their own, but that it follows other racing industry briefs to the government asking for tax relief.

"We are fully behind the horsemen," said Peters.

"The threat not to race is real," Peters said, "but we are going ahead with plans for the opening of the 108-day season in the hope that the government will act on the request and that a satisfactory agreement can be negotiated."

Racing officials say that in 1972, when the overall mutuel tax was reduced from 21.6 per cent to 18.1 per cent (it now is 18 per cent), the increased play more than made up for the reduction and tipped an increased play that is still going on.

Every betting record was broken during the 92-day season that year, which was 16 days shorter than the previous year, and track operators and horsemen were unanimous at that time in crediting the success with the reduction of the tax.

The provincial government takeout of 6½ per cent of the net purse at Exhibition Park compares with 2.75 per cent at Alberta tracks and 4.5 per cent at Longacres in Seattle.

The Longacres takeout was recently reduced by one-half of one per cent.

Last year the government agreed to rebate half of one per cent of its share of the pari-mutuel tax to be used as breeding incentives in response to a brief presented jointly by the BCTBS, the HBPA and the Jockey Club.

Previously the government agreed to return one per cent to B.C. Breeders with horses finishing in the money.

Last year the picture for thoroughbred racing at Ex Park was not as rosy as appeared at first glance despite the fact that for the first time attendance passed the one-million mark and fans wagered a record $96,301,132.

Daily attendance average was down 0.5 per cent from 1977. The season handle was up $6,953,366, an increase of 7.7 per cent over 1977, while the daily average was $875,464.

The racing industry holds that the 18 per cent takeout is the highest of any major thoroughbred racing centre in Canada and perhaps in North America.

THE CANADIAN SCOTTISH REGIMENT (PRINCESS MARY'S)

"If you want a dull, routine job, we are not interested in you. However, if you like challenging, exciting work like firing automatic weapons, throwing grenades, helicopter training, rappeling, mountaineering and more, then you may be just who we are looking for. Join the Canadian Scottish Regiment, try the infantry, you'll like it.

If you are male, 17 or older and physically fit, we want you. Come and ask some questions about serving in Canada's citizen army — The Militia. The work is part time, with some opportunity for full time employment. We're at the Bay Street Armoury on Thursday and Tuesday evenings from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. Ask for the Canadian Scottish Regiment."

Before The Judge

Judge Blake Allan ordered the detention of a 29-year-old Saanich man for his own good and for the public's safety following a bail hearing Thursday in provincial court.

William David Lockhart, 259 Obed, is charged with causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure, pointing a firearm and possession of a dangerous weapon.

He was denied bail and ordered remanded until next Thursday for election of his trial method.

Saanich police responded to a call Tuesday night in the 200-block Obed and saw a man stumble out of a house. A struggle ensued when police tried to assist and a shot was fired, leading to an arrest. The man was taken to Eric Martin Institute for overnight observation.

After rejecting the bail application, Allan told duty legal aid lawyer Brian MacKenzie there might be reconsideration given to Lockhart's judicial interim release in a week or so.

A 22-year-old Campbell River man appeared to be in shock after being sentenced to 21 days in jail.

Gerald Thomas Holland pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension and was sentenced by Allan.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Holland was involved in an accident Feb. 22 at Douglas and Saanich. Police discovered Holland had been suspended because of his driving record.

Mulligan said Holland was fined $300 for driving under suspension June 27, 1978, at Parksville and $600 for impaired driving Dec. 20, 1978, also in Parksville.

Allan struck out a guilty plea and disqualified himself from a case because he knew a 19-year-old's father.

Kerry Arthur Price, 3643 Revelstoke Place, pleaded guilty to driving under suspension and Mulligan was advising Allan of the facts when the judge asked Mulligan to repeat Price's address.

After Mulligan repeated it, Allan said he was acquainted with the man's father and struck the plea.

In the afternoon, Price entered the guilty plea before Judge Harold Alder.

Crown counsel Ken Salt said Price was stopped in Mt. Douglas Park after Saanich police spotted his truck travelling east on Cordova Bay Road on Feb. 26.

Salt said Price told police he left his driver's licence at home but a subsequent check indicated his licence was suspended Jan. 18, 1978.

Salt said Price continued to deny he was under suspension but later admitted it.

Alder fined Price $200, placed him on six months' probation and ordered him to perform 50 hours of community service work.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were Ronald Philip Blandford, 51, of 2765 Spencer, $400; James William Lauritzen, 18, of 2704 Peat, $300; June Marie Bruce, 40, of 628 Raynor, $50, and Ronald Hartford Kerr, 50, of 2802 Sooke Lake, $500.

Raped by Rhodes - Crown Witness

A surprise last-minute witness called by the prosecution Thursday told an assize court jury Sidney Blair Rhodes raped her last August.

The assertion was denied by Rhodes who also said he had never been arrested or charged in that connection.

Rhodes, 22, is charged with first-degree murder in the stabbing Oct. 12 of Susan Marie Calve, 17. The prosecution has alleged that he was attempting to sexually assault Calve at the time and that he did have sex with her.

The Crown called the witness, a Victoria mother of two, in rebuttal evidence after Vancouver psychiatrist Dr. James Tyhurst testified the day before that his investigations did not show Rhodes has a predisposition or tendency to sexual assault.

Tyhurst, recalled by the defence to counter the rebuttal evidence, said what he heard in court Thursday did not change his opinion that Rhodes doesn't have a predisposition to engage in rape, attempted rape or indecent assault.

He said he knew there had been a police investigation into an alleged rape and Rhodes wasn't arrested or charged, that there had been an investigation by a parole officer and his parole had not been revoked and that Crown counsel decided not to proceed with a charge.

Told to assume the woman's assertion was true, and asked if in that case his opinion would change, he said it would but it was not his evidence that that would then mean Rhodes does have a predisposition to sexual assault.

The direction and degree of his change of opinion would depend on the facts, he said, but he agreed it would reduce his evidence of no predisposition to sexual assault.

The woman told the jury that Rhodes phoned her about 1:30 a.m. Aug. 25 and came to her house uninvited and ordered her to have sexual intercourse with him against her will.

She agreed she had known Rhodes earlier and there had been a sexual relationship but said it ended earlier.

She also said Tyhurst had tried to interview her but she told him to give her a call when he came to Victoria.

The woman denied that she pursued a complaint of rape with the police because of animosity towards Rhodes as a result of an argument during which he slapped her.

A volunteer with Rape Relief, Lynne Trace, said she received a phone call from the woman about 5:15 a.m. Aug. 25. The woman was almost hysterical relating an incident of rape and it took 1½ hours to calm her. She went to her house between 7 and 7:30 a.m. and took her to hospital and the police station.

She agreed what happened is a pattern in rape calls and it often takes three hours on the phone to calm a woman.

Rhodes said there had been a sexual relationship with the woman and he phoned her just after midnight Aug. 25 to suggest he babysit her two children so she could visit friends on her birthday later in the month and she invited him over.

He said what began as a goodnight kiss became consential intercourse and she did not object and did not struggle. He woke up about 4 or 4:30 a.m. and decided to leave and an argument developed when she said he couldn't handle babysitting both children during which he slapped her and left.

The prosecution also produced another rebuttal witness, Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Kenneth McLeod, who said while it was possible it was not likely that the capacity to form an intent on the part of Rhodes would be suspended for the brief period during which the stabbing occurred.

From the description of events given the court, he said it was probable Rhodes was capable of forming an intent up to the time he opened the knife while walking with Calve through a wood beside the golf course, and when the victim was on the ground and Rhodes put his hand on her neck to stop the bleeding he was capable of forming an intent.

Mr. Justice D.E. Andrews was to address the jury this morning, after which the nine men and three women will retire to consider their verdict.

Late Reports Irritate WCB

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Workers' Compensation Board is cracking down on British Columbia companies which take their time in reporting accidents.

The board said Thursday it has told 140 companies by letter that they will be responsible for wage loss and medical claims for any compensation case not reported to the board within seven days of the accident.

The law says a company must tell the board within three days if a worker has had a disabling injury or disease apparently resulting from industrial conditions. The employer must tell the board immediately about a fatality on the job.

Board spokesman Liz Wright said the 140 companies receiving the letters are the worst offenders for slow reporting of accidents.

His Clothes Cost Plenty But Sell

By BERNADINE MORRIS

Andre Laug is a Frenchman from Alsace who works in Italy and sells a lot of his clothes in the United States. He looks like an accountant or a banker, not a fashion designer, and is given to sensible statements, such as "a dress is not a jail — it's like a home and you must feel comfortable in it."

He comes across the Atlantic with his clothes eight times a year, visiting 12 cities. Next season he will add Montreal and Toronto to his itinerary.

The interesting thing about his clothes is that, from New York to Beverly Hills, they sell.

"I sold $158,000 worth of dresses in Neiman-Marcus in Texas in five days," he said. "And $123,000 in four days in Martha's in Palm Beach."

At his prices, that doesn't exactly mean carloads of clothes. A suit in his ready-to-wear collection costs at least $1,800. A suit from his couture collection runs around $4,500.

"Women who can afford it are willing to pay the price because the quality is phenomenal," said Vincent Knoll, the buyer who handles the Laug collection at Bergdorf Goodman, where it was given a formal presentation this week. "It has to be," Knoll added.

The customers generally fall into two categories, the buyer explained. They are either women who are pretty high up in the business world or they are women whose husbands are pretty high up in the business world.

That is why the most popular styles in the spring collection are the suits, especially those with the modified bellhop jacket, Knoll thought.

"People went right over and put them on," Knoll reported. "They felt very comfortable in them."

They also were relatively slim suits, which indicated to Knoll that "people are ready for narrower clothes."

"We expected to sell them in sizes 4 to 10," he said, "but we actually sold quite a few in 12, 14 and 16."

Laug has an explanation for that, too.

"Fifteen years ago, the narrow clothes were very stiff," he said. "Now they're so supple, you can fold them up and put them in a bag. Women of any size can wear them."

The 47-year-old Laug was 29 when he started in the fashion business. He had worked as a teacher, among other things, before he joined Nina Ricci briefly and then Andre Courreges in Paris, after which he was, for five years, designer for Antonelli in Rome. Ten years ago, he set up his own business, and did ready-to-wear as well as couture clothes.

The difference between the two is a matter of convenience, he said. "The ready-to-wear you can put on and wear immediately — the couture you have to wait for fittings."

There are some variations in the way the clothes are put together and the quality of the linings, but he insists on excellence in each category.

"I have the workrooms to do it," he said.

Besides North America, he sells to stores in Switzerland and Japan. In Italy, he sells only made-to-order styles in his Rome salon.

Nuts-Bolts Latest Decor

TORONTO (CP) — Filing cabinets as bedside tables, warehouse skids as coffee tables and laboratory beakers as vases.

That, according to architects and interior designers, is high-tech — the latest trend in home decorating.

The term high-tech is a play on the words high-style and technology.

It's a "nuts-and-bolts-and-exposed-pipes technological look," say Joan Kron and Suzanne Slesin of New York, who have written a book on it.

High-tech is all the rage in interior design in New York and now is catching on in Toronto. The use of industrial and commercial equipment is seen as functional and therefore beautiful.

Commercial and industrial items turning up in homes today were produced strictly for their functionality.

They were "engineered rather than designed for esthetic reasons," Kron and Slesin say.

One of the reasons industrial chic is popular is because it offers a cheap alternative to high-cost, custom-crafted products.

While some high-tech items are expensive — $1,000 for a large console desk made of stove ducts with glass top — most are reasonably priced.

The trend also is a logical follow-up to the anti-materialism of the 1960s and the do-it-yourself and back-to-nature movements.

One Toronto convert to high-tech is Edna Sternbach, 26, an actress who lived in New York and recently returned to Canada.

"The great thing about high-tech is that you can mix it with other things like my antique rocking chair and 1930s items like my Betty Boop mirror," she says.

"The atmosphere is relaxing because there's no clutter to distract me and I can find everything."

In one corner of Ms. Sternbach's apartment is a dining area equipped with an old card table painted white with a wired glass top, two restaurant bar stools, an iron tractor stool and an old factory light made of steel and glass.

The table centrepiece is 10 feet of the white, flexible tubing used for clothes dryer exhausts.

It's been twisted and knotted to resemble a piece of modern sculpture.

A portable television set rests on three grey, plastic milk crates. The 36-inch coffee table is made of industrial pallets.

Some high-tech devotees use these to make shelves and dividers.

Platforms are a big item in high-tech. Ms. Sternbach's double-bed mattress sits on a 14-inch-high platform.

Windows are covered by glass-fibre panels standing on the floor, 26 inches wide and eight feet high.

Three clamp-on spotlights in various parts of the room provide lighting.

Toronto's first store to specialize in high-tech opened recently. On display are a console desk-side table made of stove ducts with glass top; warehouse skids that can be used for coffee tables; platforms for beds and seating; chemist's stools for kitchens and bathrooms; hospital water containers that can be used for fruit juice or flowers and laboratory glass beakers used as vases and measuring cups for metric recipes.

Straw Hats Tops

NEW YORK (CP) — Wide-brimmed, pillbox or nautical — whatever the size or silhouette — any hat in straw is selling strongly for spring and summer, retailers and manufacturers report. "The early spring business is fabulous, especially the bright lacquered straws in the new special shapes," says Martin Hackel of Neiman-Marcus.

Seeing Red? Redecorate!

TORONTO (CP) — Feeling nervous and restless? Maybe you're seeing too much red.

Bonnie Bender, manager of color marketing for Pittsburgh Paints and an international authority on color says "reaction to color depends greatly on the mood you're in but colors can affect your mood."

She said research shows that red accelerates the pulse and raises blood pressure.

Objective (conscious) impressions of red are passionate, exciting, fervid and active.

Subjective (unconscious) impressions, are intensity, rage and fierceness.

Red tends to distract and increase restlessness and nervous tension, Mrs. Bender said.

Orange has the same properties as red but to a lesser degree. It is strong and should be used with discretion in accent areas, she said.

Objective impressions of yellow are jovial, lively, energetic, forceful; subjective impressions are hilarity, exuberance, gratification and satiety.

"People are stimulated to greater production and efficiency with the proper use of yellow," Mrs. Bender said. "Under the influence of yellow we tend to get more things done more accurately and faster."

She said that green provides an ideal environment for sedentary tasks, concentration and meditation.

It expresses firmness, resistance to change and peacefulness.

"Green traditionally finds its way into offices where opinions prevail and immutable principles for the basis of order.

"The emphasis today on the strong, bright greens indicates a desire for the bright, clean landscape that our young people love."

Mrs. Bender said that research shows that blue creates a calm, orderly environment and reinforces serene, passive and tranquil feelings.

Purple is a color of identification, she said. It was a favorite of the hippies in the '60s who rebelled against the establishment, giving off the message, "I want to be me."

Mrs. Bender said that white, grey and black are capable of inducing moods that are neither strong nor as definite as those produced by other colors.

"They are employed most effectively as foils for other colors. Amounts of black and white added to other hues give us our value of the color and make it pleasing or unpleasant."

She said "we're currently in a trend of neutral-color conservatism that reflects a worldwide concern for the economy."

Lowdown on Travel in Europe

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

Getting to Europe is one thing. Finding out how to get around once you're there is another. Airlines are forbidden to advertise or sell European youth fares in Canada, but it's easy to understand the rules before arriving.

Youth fares, restricted to travellers between 18 and 24, are available at a 25 per cent reduction. That reduction, however, is applied to fares which are more expensive than we are used to. So what may appear as a way of seeing Europe on the cheap may in fact be an expensive alternative.

One way to find out costs is to call a local airline, get a price on a regular European fare and deduct 25 per cent. Keep in mind that fares are sold on a one-way basis and you can reserve a seat five days in advance.

If adventure and good deals are your concern, look to places like the Middle East.

El Al's London-Tel Aviv run can be purchased for $119 in Canada. It's a substantial saving from the regular fare of $484, and the airlines have a generous outlook towards youth — anyone under 26. It's best to check with the different airlines regarding rules and rates as they change from company to company.

Transatlantic youth fares are a different story. They're easy to take advantage of but far less liberal about age requirements — you're out of luck if you're 22 or over.

On the positive side, you can return almost whenever you want within one year of buying the ticket, except during peak holiday periods. When the rush is on, you can be bumped if you don't have a confirmed seat, and left to try again the next day.

If you're not travelling during a peak period your standby status is better than it sounds. Chances are the airline will be able to confirm a seat five days before you want to travel.

If the flight you chose is full, there are other carriers, and IATA guarantees reciprocity between the different airline companies.

You don't have to return from the same foreign point where you arrived. You can fly to London, for instance, and return from Madrid. This involves paying half the difference between the two fares. So if the return youth fare to London was $439 and return to Madrid $472, it would cost you $455.50.

Happiness Lies Ahead

BRADFORD, England (CP) — Babies born today will have longer and much happier lives than their parents, according to a research team at Bradford, Yorkshire, University.

Today's babies will be 21 in the year 2000. With luck and good management, they will live in an "unprecedented era of peace in which major wars are as outdated as slavery."

Their working week will be cut by half because only about 10 per cent of the country's work force will be needed to produce the country's wealth.

The team found that an excessive love of privacy might be considered "unhealthy" but such persons would be treated as tolerantly as people today are treated when they suffer a nervous breakdown, or are driven into seclusion by a violent emotional shock.

On a note of caution, the team says:

"If we do not solve unemployment problems caused by changes in technology, and if we do not help the Third World to become productive, then the people of the early 21st century may be very miserable.

"But if we solve these problems, as seems likely, life will be immeasurably happier than it is today.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Saul Levine, psychiatrist; Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am 11-years-old and at the tomboy stage. I am often mistaken for a boy, I do everything like a boy. I used to be well liked by both boys and girls. I swear often and people look at me funny when I do. I like all sports and all things boys do.

Everyone (especially boys) tease me about it. I've tried to act like a girl but people already have my reputation as a tomboy. My breasts have not grown big enough for anyone to notice and I am also teased about that. What can I do?

ANSWER: One thing you can do is stop swearing. Whether you are a tomboy or not, using foul language doesn't do much for you.

Otherwise it is quite natural for many girls around 11 to go through a tomboy stage.

I would suggest that you try to be comfortable just the way you are. Ease up on the swearing and people may find it easier to be your friend. As you grow older you will probably find you are developing into the kind of person that you will respect and continue to be proud of.

DEAR DR. COTTER: My best friend and I are both 16. Until recently we had a third best friend the same age. But she recently found a boyfriend (we already had boyfriends) and now she completely ignores us. Both she and her boyfriend appear to be very insecure. Could you please help us to understand her sudden coldness to us?

ANSWER: It is significant that you both had boyfriends and she did not, and that now she has one her attitude has changed. She fitted in quite comfortably with you before because boyfriends were secondary to your friendship.

Now she finds having a boyfriend wholly occupying and hasn't time for the kind of relationship she had with the two of you.

This is quite a natural development. When two people find themselves in a strongly binding relationship for the first time, they often are insecure about old relationships. They turn towards each other and away from others. In due course if their love really matures, they should once again turn outwards to other people.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I have been warned against shaving my legs. I have heard the hair grows back thicker and faster and very hard like a man's whiskers. The hair under my arms also grows very fast.

Could you suggest a cream that would work without having the bother of razors and longer, thicker, coarser hair?

ANSWER: Most women try both shaving and using a cream, and choose the method they find best for them.

The things you have heard about hair growing back thicker and more wiry are not true. The illusion of coarseness occurs because as the hair begins to grow it is very short like a bristle or stubble.

If you set up a routine of shaving your under arms whenever you shower or bathe, it becomes as easy as any other part of your toilet or body care.

If you prefer, try one of the depilatory creams available at your pharmacy. But you will have the same problem with coarse hair appearing as it begins to grow back in.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am a 17-year-old girl in love with a 19-year-old boy. I have been going out with him for two years and he loves me. But I have just found out that I am pregnant and I know for a fact that the father is my boyfriend's closest friend.

My boyfriend thinks he is the father and is very proud. Because of the pregnancy we want to get married and the real father is pressuring me to keep my mouth shut.

ANSWER: I am very reluctant to advise you to marry because of preganancy. It would be unfortunate if by the time you are 27 and he is 29 and the baby is 9, you as parents discover that you are not suited to each other, that your commitment was premature. It would be equally hard on the person you have created.

I think you should either raise the child alone or put it up for adoption through a Children's Aid Society. Second, you should tell your boyfriend the truth, whatever the results. If you lose him, that is sad but it will prove to have been a relationship that ought to end. If he can come through this, there is a better chance of your making a permanent couple in due course.

By KATE MacQUEEN

Another reason for filling out the warranty cards that come with new appliances, recorders, radios: How else will the manufacturer know how to contact you if there's a safety defect recall? Many stores keep a record only of the purchase amount, not the brand name and serial number of your purchases.

* * *

A good room-cleaning was expensive for an eager mother who moved her son's stereo equipment so she could clean behind it.

The sensitive arm on his record player flopped enough to need repairs. You should always tape down the arm and the turntable if you're going to move the unit.

New doesn't have to indicate a product was made this year or even last year. A buyer learned that fact when he bought a bargain-priced television set then discovered at home the set was made in 1976. He didn't read the manufacturer's label; the salesclerk didn't offer the information. If the make-year's important to you (for any improvements in a unit or styling you've seen advertised), ask when any such purchase was made and see that the year is on the sales slip, in case you need that information later.

Better double-bag all those syrupy fruits you're freezing. If the outer bag is punctured as you hunt for other frozen foods in the freezer, the inner bag will then prevent syrup from seeping out and cold dry air from spoiling the flavor of the fruit.

Three quarts of frozen yogurt costs less when you make it in your ice cream freezer. A young home economist shares her recipe: Mix well 3 eggs, ¼ tsp. salt, ½ c. sugar, 4 c. plain cultured yogurt, 1 T. vanilla and 1 qt. sweetened, mashed berries or fruit. Chill thoroughly before filling your ice cream maker.

A plastic runner rolled out to protect carpeting from tracked-in snow and mud shouldn't be left down for days, warns a carpeting expert. The plastic packs down carpet fibres, preventing moisture from escaping, and grinds dirt deeper into the carpet. Use a soft-backed throw rug to protect carpeting or use the plastic runner only when necessary.

Anything . . . For a Price

TORONTO (CP) — Pick-your-prank services have blossomed from housewife-organized party services to 30-city franchise operations that — for a fee — will do anything to make people happy.

Television personality Lyn Harvey says she got nervous at the thought of throwing a party on her 22nd birthday last month.

"I wanted people to come and get really involved," Miss Harvey said in an interview at her home in nearby Mississauga. "I've been to so many parties that were really boring that I wanted to enjoy myself for once."

She decided it would be fun to pretend she was 10 years old again — to have a party complete with hats and horns, peanut butter sandwiches, chocolate milk in cartons with colored straws and games like pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey and musical chairs.

Enter Rent-An-Event Inc., a service started last spring by three Toronto housewives — Dale Biason, Anne Belvedere and Barbara Delduco. For $185, they arranged a kiddies' party for Miss Harvey and 15 friends.

"It was my party, but I didn't have to sweat about it. It was great."

Mrs. Biason said people "are really tired of the predictable gift — they're looking for something unusual."

"That's where we come in. We let our imaginations run wild. The only other thing that runs wild is your pocket book. In other words, we can do just about anything, providing you can afford it."

Myths of Aging Fought by OLD

elizabeth forbes

You're retired. You've tried to settle in to the game-playing and time-killing programs that are so popular at senior citizen centres, but somehow you don't seem quite ready for that as yet.

In other words, you're one of a new breed of older people who have been aptly described as the young-old.

Who are these young-olds?

I've been told they are men and women who have reached retirement with all their faculties as sharp as in their peak years.

They are aggressive, involved, intelligent and determined to remain part of the Canadian mainstream.

If you qualify in that category then you will be interested in a new organization dedicated to fighting the many negative myths and stereotypes about the old which have taken root in our culture.

It was formed by a small group of active, concerned, local seniors augmented by a few dedicated younger people.

Local writer James Duffie, a leader in the movement, explains that the name of the new group — Options for Life Development (OLD) was deliberately chosen to indicate that the members feel being OLD is not something to be frightened or ashamed of, but that the final years can be the most rewarding of all the life span.

He also tells you that believing an aimless, generalized approach would be fruitless, the group has decided to concentrate its attention on ageism.

What is ageism, you ask?

Duffie describes it as discrimination against persons solely on the basis of their chronological age.

He says: "Our preoccupation in recent years with racism and sexism has diverted our attention from another evil that is every bit as devasting and destructive — ageism."

The equating of ageism with racism is not at all far fetched, he believes.

"Both are built-in responses to persons and groups considered to be inferior; both deprive older people of status and of control over their lives; both result in a tremendous loss to society by making it impossible to use the experience and knowledge of useful, capable people and both contribute to the terrible soul-destroying loneliness and despair of so many of the elderly."

The media, both print and electronic, are geared to exploiting the youth market, he points out.

Television, both in commercials and in program content, is often cruel and heartless in the image of the elderly that it projects to the viewer.

Newspapers do not do much better, he suggests.

"True, they will run stories about 70-year-old joggers, cutsey items about old people getting married or interviews with oldtimers about the good old days, but they rarely feature old people still actively and quietly doing useful jobs and contributing to the welfare of their communities."

Those are a few of the reasons why OLD was formed and why it is hoped it will expand and develop in many directions.

In the meantime the group has decided to start with a well defined objective — to create a slide-montage titled Ageism in Canada.

In this way it hopes to show there is such a thing as ageism, that it exists in Canada, the harm that it is doing, and to suggest ways in which it may be combated.

First move was to apply to New Horizons for funds to create the slide-tape story.

New Horizons was impressed with the idea and granted the request in full.

Now, as Duffie puts it, the group needs all kinds of help.

"A retired photographer who could produce our slides for us would certainly be welcome," he says.

"We could also use anyone interested in such necessary duties as filing, typing, organizing a library, helping to research and produce the scripts for the tape show — and so on."

OLD welcomes people of all ages into its membership, he points out, because it is felt that a mix of ages will do much to avoid the ghetto-like segregation of the elderly that characterizes so many senior groups.

"Besides which, every one of us will grow old one day," he reminds us, "and the kind of world today's young will retire to is being formed now."

An office has been opened in Room 414, 620 View Street.

No telephone has been installed as yet but interested persons may obtain information by calling 383-1081.

It is also planned to hold an informaton meeting and open house on Thursday, March 22, from noon until 3 p.m. at Fernwood Autumn Glow, 1325 Pembroke Street, not far from the Belfry Theatre.

If you are one of that new breed of young-old people and you're eager to remain part of the Canadian mainstream — be sure and attend.

dear abby

DEAR READERS: If you have never had the privacy of your home violated by burglars, skip this column.

If you have . . . welcome to the club.

I want to share a particularly timely and enormously moving piece I recently read. I welcome your reactions.

AN OPEN LETTER TO BURGLARS
By Fay Cohen

Dear Burglars:

Having spent my childhood in a clean but poorly furnished home, I set out in marriage to make up for this by decorating our abode in an attractive and cheerful manner. My furniture is comfortable and tastefully co-ordinated; the wall hangings are equally eye-appealing. My housework and leisure time are made pleasant by up-to-the-minute appliances.

If you want all this, boys, you'd better bring a moving van. Pull it right up to my apartment door next time. No one will notice or question you — or will they?

You already have taken what could be carried away in a sack.

How much did you get for my string of pearls, given to me by mother more than 30 years ago? Did the love that permated them enhance their value?

My late husband's watch was cold metal when you snatched it. He often laid it on his nightstand, and I'd feel the warmth of his body still on it, giving it momentary life.

And that gold wedding band with the Hebrew lettering — King Solomon's lovely: 'I am my beloved's and my beloved is mine.' How much did that net you?

After the police dusted for your prints, I was left alone, by choice, to try to put myself together. I scrubbed your presence away with soap and water, angry but not afraid.

You did frighten me two years ago when you broke in and took my son's photography equipment and my color television set. It wasn't so much what you took — how can one become sentimental over things that are so easily replaced? What upset me so much was that my secure home was intruded upon. It took me a long time to return to normal and lose the fear that you might return.

And return you did, last week. This time my reaction is not one of fear, but livid anger. I'm mad at the world, at my vulnerability, at a society where even things under lock and key are not safe — and I'm very angry with you.

Did I say I'm not afraid? Yes, I am — not of you, but of myself and the way I shouted to the police — "If you were to find them now and bring them here, I'd kill them!"

Do you know what disturbs me about that threat? I really meant it. For one insane moment I was capable of comitting a crime. If I'd had a gun, I might have used it, thereby stooping to your gutter level. No, no guns in my house, thank you.

You took my precious possessions and you stole onething more; my former self, the non-violent, secure, trusting person I used to be.

New Checkouts: Scan or Scam?

What's in Store
Joan Watson

Three developments in supermarket shopping have the potential of short-changing the consumer. They are the new automated front-end checkout systems with the cash register linked to a computer, the change-over to the metric system of weights and measures, and generic brands of staple food products and household supplies.

If I point out how each system can work to your disadvantage, you'll be prepared for two things. First of all, you can protect yourself, and save money by blowing the whistle when you find an error, and secondly, you can be part of a group of consumer watchdogs who will share their findings and so help other shoppers.

Case No. 1: The electronic checkout system. A scanner at the cash register reads a code on each package you purchase and tallies up your bill. At the same time the electronic equipment is keeping a record of how fast that item is selling, what inventory is on hand, and when it should be re-ordered. Great for the storekeeper. His bookkeeping is spewed out by one miracle machine. It's supposed to be great for the consumer, too. In theory, you're supposed to be able to check out faster. (In actual fact there are often fewer checkout stations because of the high costs and while you do move faster when you get to the register, the lines are longer.)

Because of the cost of this electronic checkout, only major centres in Canada have them so far. But because of their obvious advantages to the stores, you'll find one in your chain store soon. So what's the problem? The price marked on the package (if it's on the package at all), is not necessarily the same price that's in the computer. You might pick up a can that's marked 57 cents. An increase might have been programmed into the computer and you're actually charged 61 cents at the checkout. You'd have to have six eyes to unpack your basket and watch the prices being rung up.

Another complication. On every package is something called the universal product code. That's the little square of lines you've noticed on the label. The scanner reads this code, identifies the product and prints out the price that's in the system. The price is often not on the product at all. It might be on the shelf. And if you have a good memory, you might recall the price on each item you've picked up. But I doubt it. Proponents of the system say an error seldom happens. The price on the shelf is the price you pay except in a rare case of error. Federal inspectors for the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs say this is not always true. They have identified stores that have a suspicious number of errors. (The prices are usually higher.)

So when electronic checkouts make their debut in your town, go shopping with a marker pencil or pen and write the shelf price on every product you buy. You'd have to have superior eyes to catch an error at the checkout. But you will get an improved itemized bill that you can check at leisure at home. The name of the item as well as the price is on the print-out. Checking your slip could save you money.

The next booby trap is metric. It takes a little work to keep a record of the price and size of food and household items which you buy frequently, but if you do, you'll be able to spot unexplained price increases when a product goes metric. On my desk are two packages of powdered milk. The price went up by 17 per cent at the time of metric conversion. You can spot these unwarranted price hikes if you keep a handy metric guide in your kitchen until you become familiar with the equivalent weights and measures.

The third check you can make to rate as a Class A shopper is to keep a notebook of prices on the new and popular generic products. If you write down both the price for the generic or no-name products and the prices for competing house brands, I predict that the price advantage the generic products offer today will narrow until they're only marginally cheaper than house brands. You might find fewer house brands on the shelves as they lose their market share to the generics, but it would be an interesting comparison to make for a while.

Problems Rising

TOKYO (CP) — The number of minors taken into police custody for juvenile delinquency hit a post-Second-World-War record in 1978, a recent government report shows. Michael Clark, UNICEF representative, has encouraged the government to look into the problem this year, the International Year of the Child.

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I have been suffering from repeated attacks of cystitis. The attacks come on without any reason. Is there any way to prevent them? — Mrs. C.S.D.

Dear Mrs. D.:

Urinary tract infections are some of the most common bacterial conditions in the human body. They occur about 10 times more frequently in females than they do in males.

Cystitis is an infection of the urinary bladder. Many cases of cystitis are thought to be due to an ascending infection from the vagina. Germs extend through it to the urethra and then, into the bladder. Germs easily multiply in the urine. Sometimes, sexual relations precipitate attacks of cystitis.

My father had a very difficult abdominal operation, performed by a very competent surgeon. When I was allowed to see my father in the intensive care unit, I was shocked to find that they had made an opening in his neck and had inserted a tube there. What could this have to do with an abdominal operation? — Miss J.M.

Dear Miss M.:

A "tracheotomy" is a lifesaving procedure. An artificial opening is made in the neck, below the level of the voice box (Larynx) in order to insure the free flow of oxygen in to the lung.

Many years ago, this operation was done only on an emergency basis. During the terrible period when diphtheria was still a threatening disease, a tracheotomy awas absolutely essential to prevent suffocation when there was any obstruction to the airway.

Today, the operation has been converted from an emergency procedure to an elective one. This means that it is done almost routinely when mucous "plugs" interfere with the free flow of air into the lungs.

These Cosmetics Used by Grandma

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

...it tells you how

If you use cosmetics regularly and want to avoid the expensive chemical-laden types, try making your own. It's healthier! Mother Earth reader Shirley Sipp tells how:

For centuries, herbs were the main source of beauty aids, until large cosmetic companies began to manufacture them, often using unhealthy chemicals. Lately, however, as we rediscover organic recipes, herbs, fruits and vegetables have found their way back onto makeup tables.

Here's a list of beauty tips that my grandma once wrote out for her daughters.

IN THE MORNING: Mix a handful of oatmeal with enough water to make a paste, and put this on your face and neck. When it dries, rinse the paste off with whey, then with water, and dry your skin with a soft rag.

AT NIGHT: Rub a mixture of honey and glycerin onto your face, then wipe it off gently, after a while, with a soft cloth.

ONCE A WEEK: Add a teaspoon of honey to one mashed apple, mix them together, and put this "cream" on your face and neck. Leave it in place for ½ hour, and then rinse with whey or cold milk.

TO SMOOTH WRINKLES: Apply barley water and a few drops of balm of Gilead to your wrinkles every day.

TO BLEACH YOUR SKIN: Rub cucumber slices on your face.

FOR SOFT HAND: Shake ½ cup glycerin, ½ cup rose water and ¼ cup witch hazel in a jar. Apply this to your hands after they've been in water.

TO HEAL CHAPPED HANDS: Rub them with a damp table salt.

FOR BRIGHT HAIR: Add vinegar to the rinse water after washing your hair, or make a rinse of mullein, nettle, sage or burdock tea.

TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR: Boil 1 ounce of chamomile or sage in 1 quart of water for 20 minutes. Rinse your hair with this brew and use a hairbrush dipped in strong chamomile or sage tea.

TO PREVENT DANDRUFF: Rub a tea made from the leaves and bark of willow into your scalp. Rinse the area with marsh mallow tea.

FOR A RELAXING BATH: Hang a bag of dried comfrey or rosemary in the bath water.

FOR PERFUME: Fill a jar with pressed rose petals or other sweet-scented flowers, add as much glycerin as the container will hold and cover it tightly. After three weeks, you can pour the perfume off into a bottle.

TO MAKE A SACHET: Combine 1 ounce each of powdered cloves, caraway seed, nutmeg, mace and cinnamon with 6 ounces of powdered orrisroot. Put the mixture in fancy bags and place them in closets and dresser drawers.

Some of these ingredients may not be familiar to you. For example, "balm of Gilead" is plain old balsam. And "marsh mallow tea" may sound like a sticky mess, but Grandma wasn't talking about the soft, white candy. She was referring to the root of the marsh mallow PLANT. "Orrisroot," another name that may puzzle you, is the dried, powdered root of various European iris plants.

Grandma foraged or grew most of her ingredients, but often you can find them in health food stores, supermarkets and pharmacies, or even growing wild along the roadside.

However, a word of caution: You should test these natural cosmetics for allergies. To do this, place a small amount on the tender skin of your inner arm and cover the area with an adhesive bandage. Wait 24 hours and look. If the patch shows any reaction, such as redness or other irritation, don't use that particular ingredient.

My grandmother often said she didn't feel a bit older at 80 than she did at 16, and she didn't LOOK her age either. Could her organic beauty rituals account for her natural glow and glamour? Well, let's just say that, after a few weeks of using some of Grandma's "secrets," I've begun to believe that they did and can for you, too!

NOT QUITE AN ORANGE

TORONTO (CP) — It is not an orange and not a tangerine. But the ortanique arriving from Jamaica this month is a cross between the two fruits. It is flattened on the bottom and when ripe, is a deep reddish orange with rind that generally is smooth. Ortaniques will be available in Canadian supermarkets until mid-May.

Britain's Inflation Climbing Again

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's inflation rate increased to 9.6 per cent in February from a January figure of 9.3 per cent, the government announced today.

It is widely expected that the annual inflation rate will climb to double figures this year.

The February figure is the worst for 13 months. In January, 1978, the annual inflation rate fell to single figures for the first time since October 1973, reaching 9.9 per cent.

It was brought down during the year to a low of 7.4 per cent in the summer but has been creeping up ever since.

The government has been attempting to fight inflation by calling for pay restraint.

Ayatollah Checks Executions

TEHRAN (UPI) — Ayatollah Khomeini today banned summary trials by Iran's revolutionary court and ordered provincial courts not to execute any convicts without prior approval of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's government.

One of those saved by Khomeini's order was former Premeir Amir Abbas Hoveyda, 59, who is now on trial in Tehran. Hoveyda was one of the closest aides to exiled Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and was expected to be sentenced to death.

Khomeini issued the order after meeting with Bazargan in the Ayatollah's retreat in the holy city of Qom, south of Tehran. Bazargan has complained of the summary executions by the revolutionary courts acting without his consent.

Khomeini said the Revolutionary Islamic Council, headed by himself and including Bazargan, would set up new regulations for trials.

"Until the regulations are framed, trials by Tehran's Central Revolutionary Court will remain suspended," the bearded religious leader ruled. "Provincial courts may continue trials but sentences passed by them will be subject to approval by the Revolutionary Council and the new regulations being framed."

In another move, Iran's prosecutor-general warned agents of the disbanded SAVAK secret police and the shahs "immortal" guards they would be "executed as spies" if they tried to infiltrate the ranks of the revolutionary guards. He also ordered them to turn in their weapons before March 21.

Bazargan has urged the religious leader to reprieve shah aides not accused of criminal participation in the past year's killings of protestors.

On Thursday, revolutionary authorities allowed Iranian journalists to attend the trial of Hoveyda, 56, charged with 17 counts of espionage, drug peddling and collaboration with the shah's regime.

Among charges laid against Hoveyda is that he waged war on God and God-loving people and promoted corruption on Earth — two crimes the Koran specifies as the most serious.

The director of the school of nursing at Royal Jubilee Hospital has been appointed acting director of the University of Victoria school of nursing.

Mary Richmond received her bachelor of nursing degree from McGill University, and a masters degree from Columbia University.

She has been active in the nursing school since 1974.

Japan-Iran Pact for Oil

TOKYO (WP) — Japan's quick manoeuvring to keep its foreign oil supplies flowing paid off Thursday as four large trading companies were reported to have signed long-term contracts for Iranian oil.

The contracts, amounting to about 500,000 barrels a day, are believed to be the first long-term agreements reached with Iran since the new government took control of oil production.

At the same time, the Japanese government announced a new energy-conservation plan estimated to make possible a 5 percent reduction in oil consumption this year.

It calls for less heating and air conditioning of government offices but relies primarily on voluntary cuts in oil use and is not as severe as the controls employed during the 1973 oil shock that plunged Japan into a recession.

Idi Asks UN to Fight 'Plot'

NAIROBI (AP) — President Idi Amin on Thursday accused "American and British imperialists in collaboration with Zionist Israel" of engineering a plot against him.

Uganda radio said Amin appealed to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to bring "this wicked plan," which he said was to be carried out today and Saturday, to the attention of "all peace-loving nations."

The broadcast gave no indication of what the alleged plan entailed. It said only that Uganda is aware of it.

Amin, in a letter to Waldheim, said the fact that American and British citizens have been urged by their governments to leave Uganda "is a clear indication that the imperialists are engaged in a plot against my country," the broadcast said.

He also said the United States, Britain and Israel are supplying the military hardware being used by "Tanzanian forces, mercenaries and traitors."

Last October, the Uganda president tried to annex 1,820 square kilometres (700 square miles) of Tanzanian territory. Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere sent his army against the invaders, driving them out of Tanzania and pushing the offensive deep into Uganda.

Informed sources in Nairobi say there are at least 2,000 Ugandan exiles fighting beside the Tanzanians.

Don't forget to file your Universal Pharmacare claim form before March 31st.

If you are eligible to file a Pharmacare Claim Form this year, now is the time to do it. All claims must be mailed before March 31, 1979.

Who is eligible for Universal Pharmacare protection?

All individuals or families registered with the Medical Services Plan of British Columbia (except as listed below) may claim an 80% refund on any amount over $100 spent on eligible prescription items between January 1, 1978 and December 31, 1978.

This means that if your drug costs during the year were, say, $300, Pharmacare will refund 80% of $200, or $160.

What are "eligible prescription drug items"?

Most drugs prescribed by your doctor, dentist or podiatrist can be included in your total. However, items such as patent medicines, bandages, artificial sweeteners, vitamin combinations, antacids, laxatives and other over-the-counter drugs cannot be included. If in doubt, ask your pharmacist.

How about other medical essentials?

Yes, expenses for items such as ostomy supplies, designated permanent prosthetic appliances, and syringes for diabetics are benefits, and receipts for these should be included on the Claim Form in the space provided.

Who is not eligible to claim?

Generally, three groups cannot, or need not, claim a Pharmacare benefit:

1. Those who already receive fully-paid benefits. This group includes citizens aged 65 or over; those in licensed long-term care facilities; and holders of a valid Human Resources Medical Benefits Program "W" card. In these cases, benefits are already fully paid and Pharmacare pays your pharmacist direct.

2. Tourists, transients and visitors to British Columbia cannot claim benefits.

3. Also ineligible are people receiving fully paid drug benefits from a union - or employer-sponsored plan, or from D.V.A., D.I.A., Workers' Compensation, or Home Care. This group will continue to be protected by their own plans.

How can I claim?

It's simple. During the year, your pharmacist will have given you an official Pharmacare receipt for any eligible item you purchased. Total these up - include as well any receipts for those other medical benefits listed above; if they come to more than $100 for you and your dependents, ask your pharmacist for a Claim Form, attach the receipts in the spaces provided (no duplicate receipts will be issued), fill in the rest of the form, affix sufficient postage and mail the form. It is already addressed.

What if I have any questions?

Simply ask at your pharmacy. They know all the details about Pharmacare.

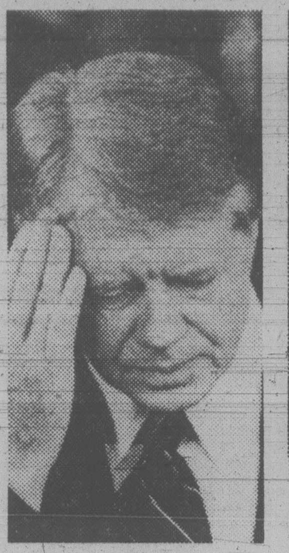
Mideast Peace: Miracle or Trick?

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter



CARTER

. . .hard work or PR coup?

POWELL

. . . engineer or fall guy?

WASHINGTON — Did U.S. President Jimmy Carter pull off a last-minute miracle of peace between Arab and Jew?

Or was the defeat-turned-victory a public relations coup?

Some reporters who traveled with Carter believe White House Press Secretary Jody Powell painted an unnecessarily bleak picture during negotiations — either out of caution or so that Carter might reap greater political benefit from a surprise agreement.

Powell denies it.

But Israeli officials also say he was overly gloomy as late as Monday — the night before the dramatic agreement between Egypt's President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin was announced.

Begin himself said during a television interview Tuesday that White House spokesmen should "beg the forgiveness of the American people, whom they misled."

"There was no foundation whatsoever to present the situation Monday night in the way it was done — in the gloomiest, bleakest way as if it were the end of the road, failure," said Begin's spokesman, Dan Pattir.

Assailed by reporters on the plane trip home, Powell denied he had tried to manage the news.

He insisted he gave a fair and truthful assessment of Israel's reaction to U.S. peace proposals.

"In the thrust of my briefings, both on the record and otherwise, I pointed out that while it did not look good, there was some possibility of success," he told UPI.

"And I think some people who wrote stories like that came out all right — and those who wrote the mission was a failure, did not."

Powell said that when he held the briefing Monday night he had not received word on the results of a successful meeting that same night between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

Begin, meanwhile, told reporters Monday night there had been "great progress — real progress" between him and Carter.

Powell in his "deep background" (not for attribution) news briefing, said the door seemed all but closed on the negotiations between Israel and Egypt.

"To say that the negotiations are hanging by a thread would be to exaggerate the situation," he said.

Under persistent questioning, he conceded the door was slightly ajar — there was a slim chance Carter could yet pull off an agreement.

Most stories Monday night all but wrote off the president's peace mission as a failure.

In fairness to Powell, U.S. officials claim the real breakthrough did not come until that Vance-Dayan meeting and confirmed Powell did not get the word before holding his last briefing with reporters.

Nevertheless, Powell did depict a Begin-Carter farewell breakfast meeting Tuesday as basically a courtesy call. It turned out to the negotiating session at which the compromise was struck.

Powell also noted the "Israelis and the United States viewed the situation differently. They viewed the fact that two or three issues were settled as a satisfactory outcome. We did not."

Carter felt "a treaty is a treaty" — and short of that, he would have failed.

Israeli spokesmen maintained real progress had been made and the White House was being unnecessarily pessimistic so if there were future problems, the Israelis would be blamed.

It must be understood both Egypt and Israel are understandably chary about the public perception of the negotiations — wanting to dodge responsibility and blame if the peace efforts failed.

Reporters criticizing Powell and other White House officials note that the same aura of gloom and doom emerged from the Carter-Begin-Sadat talks at Camp David last fall.

Until the final hour.

Capri Recall On Steering

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has announced recalls of nearly 16,000 1979 Ford Mustang and Mercury Capri cars in the United States and Canada which might have a steering problem, and of 900 1979 trucks and buses so air brake tubing can be replaced.

The cars involved are equipped with power steering, Ford said.

"Fewer than one per cent of these vehicles may have been produced with an incorrect steering-gear coupling flange," said Grant Chave, service programs manager for Ford's parts and service division. "If the part should fail, a reduction or loss of steering control would result."

"Mommy says fighting doesn't 'complish a thing. You should talk it out."

Contract Bridge ♠♡♢♣ B. Jay Becker

You are South and the bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1♡	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♡	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠AJ94 ♡KQ2 ♢875 ♣963
2. ♠KQ73 ♡96 ♢AJ83 ♣Q84
3. ♠AK8752 ♡Q763 ♢92 ♣10
4. ♠AK64 ♡854 ♢Q76 ♣852
5. ♠AK932 ♡QJ ♢J942 ♣A5

1. Three hearts. Even though partner's two heart bid indicates basically a minimum opening bid, there is still a chance for game. True, you have less than an opening bid and partner seems to have minimum values — and it usually takes the equivalent of two opening bids to make a game — still your K-Q of trumps are worth a point or two more than their face value and therefore suggest a possibility of game.

2. Two notrump. There is a reasonable chance for game here also, despite North's signoff. However, the best you can do is invite partner to go on. If you had the jack of clubs instead of the four, you wouldn't ask partner to bid three notrump; you'd bid it yourself.

3. Four hearts. Here you have only 9 high-card points, but the chance for game is better than in either of the preceding hands. You have lots of playing tricks, and these are usually more important than high-card point count.

It's not easy to visualize a hand that partner could have where he'd lose four tricks. This criterion is often substituted for point count in distributional hands.

4. Pass. Here there is almost no hope for game opposite and opening bid of the minimum class, and the wisest thing to do is pass. Although your spade response might have been based on a weaker hand — let's say 6 points instead of 9 — that is not a good argument for bidding again to show those unexpressed values. Partner will see them as soon as your hand comes down as dummy.

5. Four hearts. It is surely unusual to jump-raise with only two trumps, but they're of excellent quality and should be treated as fully adequate support for a suit that partner has bid twice. Besides, you want to be sure to get to game with your 15 high-card points, and there's simply no better bid available.

A jump to three notrump, which is a possible alternative, should be avoided because you have rather inadequate strength in the unbid suits. Hands containing primary strength (aces and kings) usually lend themselves much better to suit play than notrump play.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological forecast for Saturday, March 17
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Dig beneath surface indications — you are due to arrive at "true story." Cancer, Scorpio, Capricorn persons figure prominently. You're being pulled in two directions — simultaneously. Key is to take path leading to security — emotional and financial. Yes, you'll know!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on experimentation, checking giving full rein to intellectual curiosity. Have fun, avoid direct confrontation, permit partner or spouse to "have a say." Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Steady pace means progress. If you push too hard, you are forced to retrace steps. Know it and act accordingly. Dependent wants more than a fair share. Now is time to put foot down. Adhere to principles, build on solid structure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with creativity, children, speculation, emotional responses. Welcome change, writing opportunities, movement, reports, serious romantic interests. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on home, basic structure, parent of opposite sex, remodeling, harmonizing family relationships. You make advance in career and you could obtain art object which had been elusive. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure in scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take lead, perfect techniques, be confident in knowing that elements of timing and luck are on your side. Accent on message, short trip which could involve close relative. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Spotlight on production, results of business endeavor, resumption of cash flow. Capricorn, Cancer persons could play important role. Emphasis on payments, collections, locating lost articles. Recent loss will be recovered.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Obtain hint from Virgo message. Lead rather than follow — judgment, intuition are on target. Expand horizons, find ways to improve distribution and display. You sense public need and should capitalize on it. Original methods succeed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Areas previously dark will receive benefit of greater light. Period of confinement proves temporary. You could be asked to represent special club, group, organization. Theatrical production could figure in scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Social activities increase. You can meet people who make you laugh and provide reasons for greater optimism. Accent on publishing, advertising and special promotion. Remember recent diet, health resolutions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Communicate with superiors. Shake off lethargy. Make room for yourself at top. Study Taurus message. One in authority will "pull strings" for you. Recent contact, made at social affair, could open door of opportunity. Enter!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with journey, education, communication, ability to break free from restrictions. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio individuals figure prominently. One who aided you in past is ready to do so again — if you so request.

IF MARCH 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are on verge of an adventure — creative juices will flow, you will make new starts in new directions and love is very much in picture. July could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring greater independence of thought and action. You are rid of a burden and free now to make your own decisions. Be creatively selfish! Capricorn, Cancer persons play key roles in your life.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"That's right, it was a regular six-figure number," Martin declared. "I've got a note of it somewhere."

Eddie shook his head. "Don't bother, maybe I can figure it out myself," he said.

"You did tell me you'd noticed it was exactly nine times the square of its last three digits."

You try.

Thanks for idea to P.C. Mehta, Toronto.

I'M FOR SALE

My 90-year-old owner has to leave. She has looked after me for 17 years. I'm in super shape. I have 2 bedrooms, huge kitchen with laundry off. My L.R. is highlighted by a bigger than average F.P. with thermo glass doors. I'm warm too (6" insulation under my floor, 8" in the ceiling and storm windows all around). My yard is immaculate. Oak trees in front, fruit trees in back, beautiful roses and a fish pond with fish. My owner says the stove and fridge stay. All I need now is someone new to look after me. I'm priced at only $49,500 and I'm exclusively listed with Gardner Realty.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE
2 or 3-bedroom home with 25 ft. of leased beach with private dock. An excellent older building with large living room, porch and patio. A bit of wooded land with trails. Asking $49,500. This is good for starter and retirement.

High class Strata Title development with superior residential qualities. Nice lots of approximately ⅓ acre, about 200 ft. of sunny common beach, safe for small children. Common tennis court and recreational area. Community water hookup. Sewage drain fields installed. Ready to commence building a home from 1,000 sq. ft. upward. Located near the new elementary school. Prices from $18,500 to $25,500. About half the price of a private waterfront lot. This is an opportunity that only comes once.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE
Perfect seclusion on a high spot on the south end of the lake with unequalled view along the length of the lake. About three-quarters of an acre. 154 feet of leased waterfront with private foreshore, older family home with large living and dining rooms, spacious bedrooms and a fine den. Lake view from all these rooms. The basement has been developed into a 2-bedroom apartment for in-laws or for rental purposes. This property was appraised in 1975 for $66,000 for mortgage purposes. It is now for sale for $69,000 due to pressing circumstances. A very good buy indeed.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Alexander L. Irwin (Sandy) would like to express their sincere thanks to all their friends, relatives, neighbours and business associates for the beautiful flowers, cards, expressions of sympathy and donations to the Cancer Clinic. Special thanks to the pallbearers, Dr. H. W. Kerby for his words of inspiration, Sands Mortuary for their devoted attention, Mr. John Bray for his lovely solo.

Extra special thanks to Dr. J. Strumwind and his staff for their wonderful care and kindness shown to Sandy. — God Bless You All. Edna, Shirley, Barrie, Darlene, Sandra and families.

MRS. ANNIE BIRD AND FAMILY wish to greatfully thank their relatives and friends for the kind thoughtful expressions of sympathy and floral offerings, along with the beautiful sympathy cards, for the recent loss of mother, daughter and grandmother, Mrs. Catherine Emily Yakimovich. Thanks to the ladies auxillary of the Pro-Patricia Branch Canadian Legion for their kindness and expressions of sympathy. Also Rev. George Struthers for his service and comforting words. God Bless you all.
Annie Bird and family.

WE WISH TO EXTEND OUR heartfelt thanks to neighbors and friends who, over the years, were so kind and helpful to our beloved sister, the late Mrs. Olive May Fletcher. Also, many thanks to Doctors and staff of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, Richmond Pavilion, and Glengarry Private Hospital for their care and attention. - Mr. A. E. Read and Miss Jessie Read.

Heavy are our hearts today, Memory brings you back once more,
To the time when you were with us,
To the happy days of yore.

309 IN MEMORIAM

I TRUST GRANDPA AND Everett will be waiting and watching peacefully just inside the gate for each of our family to arrive. We shall dwell in the house of the Lord for eternity. Our sorrow shall melt away in the love we share. Ruthie.

LORNE — In memory of a dear sister and aunt, Anne Lorne, whom God called home March 16, 1978.

Today recalls the memory
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And those that think of her today
Are those that loved her best.

—Sadly missed and remembered by Mernie, Sam, Wayne and Janene.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

Endive: A Superb Salad Green

A superb salad green for balcony and sundeck gardeners to start indoors during the coming week is Curled Endive.

It is superb in many ways, beginning with the fact that 10 or 12 seeds sown indoors now may well supply a family of four with enough endive for one day of each week for nearly three months. Other days there will be lettuce, corn-salad, celtuce, early green cabbage and other salad greens.

Endive (known also as Escarolle) of the type grown most easily has long narrow curled leaves. On a plant nearing full size they grow tightly at the centre so they become creamy yellow and even more delicious.

When six to eight inches in diameter, endive is at perfection. There is no waste other than a couple of the lowest leaves.

Later sowings outdoors in tubs or open garden provide more plants, for endive is both heat-hardy and cold-hardy. We have found that if plants are cut off at the base, leaving two or three lowest leaves with roots, most will sprout new growth. But for full value in fall, let endive grow to mature size.

Seed of white turnip can be sown outdoors this weekend where a piece of ground can be worked in, not primarily for the roots but for abundant vitamins and minerals in the young tender leaves.

During April and May the need for these nutrient values becomes acute. By sowing a few seeds we shall ensure having plentiful vitamin A and C as well as a daily supply of iron and calcium in combination and even a little extra protein. Before green peas or green beans are ready for picking, these are fine values from a tiny seed.

Turnip seed germinates within 14 days in cool weather. Try to space the small seeds to give space for growing. Barely cover with fine soil and press gently to make contact between seed and soil.

In dry spells of more than two days, sprinkle soil surface with water to prevent drying of the sprouting seeds. When four well-spread leaves are developed, begin thinning and use thinnings for salad or steamed on top of a pan of other vegetables.

Later, as plants get bigger, young leaves can be cut off for cooking leaving the plants to continue producing more. Most of the goodness is in the leaves, though the roots when small can also be added for more goodness and flavor. This allows more space in the row.

Last year we grew collard greens for the first time. They were not productive because of lack of humus, but now we are cutting small side shoots to go with kale shoots which are abundant.

Together they make a fine dish. it can be used as a filling for omelettes or between soyburger pancakes, where the bright green color is attractive. And when you remember the high nutrition coupled with the flavor you realize how lucky we are to be able to grow such luxuries so easily. There is no cabbage odor, nor cabbage flavor.

Steam or otherwise cook briefly for no more than five minutes maximum and use all the juices in the same dish as gravy or sauce.

Collard seed should be sown where the plants are to grow, being thinned to 10 inches apart from development.

The abundant growths will be ready for use as weather cools in early fall. Whatever gardening is possible, include greens.

Port Angeles Oil Port Fishing Threat: Union

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Canadian fishermen said Thursday that a plan to build an oil port and pipeline at this community could endanger marine resources in Canada.

Arnie Thomlinson of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union in Vancouver said he was concerned about effects of an oil spill if the proposal by Northern Tier Pipeline Company goes ahead.

The company proposes to build an oil port here to pump Alaskan oil 2,400 kilometres to Minnesota and the Midwest.

The complaints of the Canadians were similar to those voiced by residents of the Olympia peninsula. About 50 persons spoke in seven hours of testimony before a committee examining the plan and only six were in favor.

Thomlinson said a Northern Tier environmental impact statement only mentioned killer whales.

"No shellfish, no salmon," said Thomlinson. "Evidently we have nothing else up there."

Northern Tier's Northwest co-ordinator, Bill Sage, defended the impact statement, saying it cost the company $3.5 million.

Cycling Boom Gets Attention

MELBOURNE(CP) — The government of Victoria has agreed to spend $1.6 million on improving cycling conditions in this state where bicycle sales have increased 600 per cent in the last decade.

The government says it plans bicycle paths and other improvements but a key element of the program will be an educational program to make motorists and cyclists more tolerant of one another.

Jailed IRA Terrorists Wallow in Human Filth

By LEONARD DOWNIE

BELFAST (WP) — Excrement covers the concrete walls of the prison cell like an uneven coat of thick dark brown paint. Cold air pours in through the smashed-out window, moderating the stench.

On the floor are two bare foam mattreses with clumps of dark woollen blankets on them. In one corner is a pile of more excrement, shredded toilet paper, broken egg shells and other garbage. In another is an open plastic chamber pot full of urine.

Besides two orange plastic mugs and a white plastic water pitcher on the window ledge, the only other object in the cell is a black-beaded rosary, somehow immaculate and shiny, hanging from the light switch against the matted excrement on the wall.

This is how 363 convicted Irish Republican Army terrorists have chosen to live for the past year, naked with only the woollen blankets to wrap around them, in the recently built H-shaped cellblocks of Northern Ireland's sprawling Maze prison near here.

The prisoners, mostly young Roman Catholic men who have been convicted of crimes ranging from assault and terrorist conspiracy to robbery and murder, are refusing to dress, use toilet facilities or clean their cells, in protest of the refusal of the British government, which rules Northern Ireland to classify them as political rather than criminal prisoners.

The conditions in which they live, though self-inflicted, have becme a nagging problem for the British government in its ongoing propaganda war with the IRA in Northern Ireland. The European Commission on Human Rights is conducting a formal inquiry into the treatment of "H-block" prisoners in the Maze.

The IRA has successfully used its version of "the dirty protest" in the H-blocks to raise new money and political support in recent months in the Irish community in the United States.

Thursday, to present their side of the story, the Northern Ireland authorities allowed newsmen into the Maze prison for the first time since its construction was started in the early 1970s on an old air field to house the overflow of the waves of Catholic and Protestant demonstrators and terrorists arrested for sectarian violence in Northern Ireland.

The dozen reporters, photographers and television cameramen representing the media of Britain, Ireland and the United States were taken throughout the prison and allowed to tour H-block buildings and cells selected at random by the newsmen.,

"We have been accused of taking people to parts of the prison we want them to see," the newsmen were told by the prison governor, who, like the other Maze officials, asked that his name not be used for protection of himself and his family. "We want you (to select the cellblocks and cells to visit) to dispel this. We can hold our heads high and assert we had no skeletons in our cupboard."

We went through one of the H-blocks occupied by "dirty protest" prisoners and inspected excrement-covered cells from which the prisoners had been temporarily removed minutes before our arrival. We were not given the opportunity to interview these or any other protesting prisoners.

We saw one wing of H-block cells receiving its periodic cleaning, done every five to ten days, according to prison officers, while the prisoners are shifted to other cells. Workmen in head-to-toe green plastic sanitation suits used high-pressure steam cleaners and garden hoses to take the excrement off the walls and wash the urine off the floors. "IRA provisionals — fight on" and other graffiti were etched into metal heating pipes and the metal doors.

We also toured other H-block cells where more than 600 additional Maze prisoners, including other IRA members and sympathizers, have accepted criminal status and are co-operating with prison authorities. Their neat, clean cells are furnished with beds, shelves, lockers and bulletin boards with pictures and posters on them.

These co-operating prisoners have access to large playing fields, a new gymnasium and well-equipped vocational training and prison industry facilities in which they learn construction, welding and auto and electrical appliance repair skills.

The one complaint these prisoners made to the visiting reporters was their lack of physical freedom in the H-blocks. To move from their 8-by-10 foot cells to the rest of the prison, they have to be accompanied by guards through a series of locked doors. They are driven from activity to activity on buses through more gates and barbed-wire barriers.

Spark Plug of EEC, Jean Monnet Dies

MONNET
"a broker of ideas"

PARIS (AP) — Jean Monnet, the foremost advocate of European unity and the inspiration and driving force behind the European Economic Community (EEC), died today at his home near Montfort l'Amaury, sources at the headquarters of the EEC reported. He was 91.

Monnet, a self-described political economist, was the key figure in the drive to bind Western European states economically and politically, but during his long career he constantly shunned the limelight.

His first major step toward European unity was a six-state pool of coal and steel resources, formally presented in 1950. Seven years later it became known as the European Economic Community.

Monnet was never a member of a government, but was, as U.S. political writer Theodore White called him, "a broker of ideas." He brought statesmen together by demonstrating how his ideas were in the interest of those concerned, persisting where leaders resisted or hesitated.

Monnet, described by the late President Kennedy as a "statesman of the world," never had a university education. Owner of a prosperous cognac business, he was independently wealthy and took on a job only as long as he felt he was doing something useful to mankind.

He rarely took direct political action, but he developed to the point of genius the art of making friends and influencing people. For five decades he counted leaders of the Western world among his close personal friends.

U.S. Presidents Franklin Roosevelt, Eisenhower and Kennedy, British prime ministers from Winston Churchill to Edward Heath, and French leaders from Charles de Gaulle to Valery Giscard d'Estaing turned to him for advice.

Monnet was born in the town of Cognac on Nov. 9, 1888, the son of a distinguished French distiller. He abandoned the idea of a university education and instead went to Canada to sell his father's cognac, a period he has described as invaluable background for bargaining.

"I can wait a long time for the right moment," he once remarked. "In Cognac, they are good at waiting. It is the only way to make a good brandy."

In 1919 he became deputy secretary general of the League of Nations. He gradually expanded his experiences and contacts, reorganizing the Chinese railways, floating international loans and handling legal entanglements. As a broker on Wall Street, he made a fortune and then lost it in the 1929 crash.

Cancer Finding Disputed

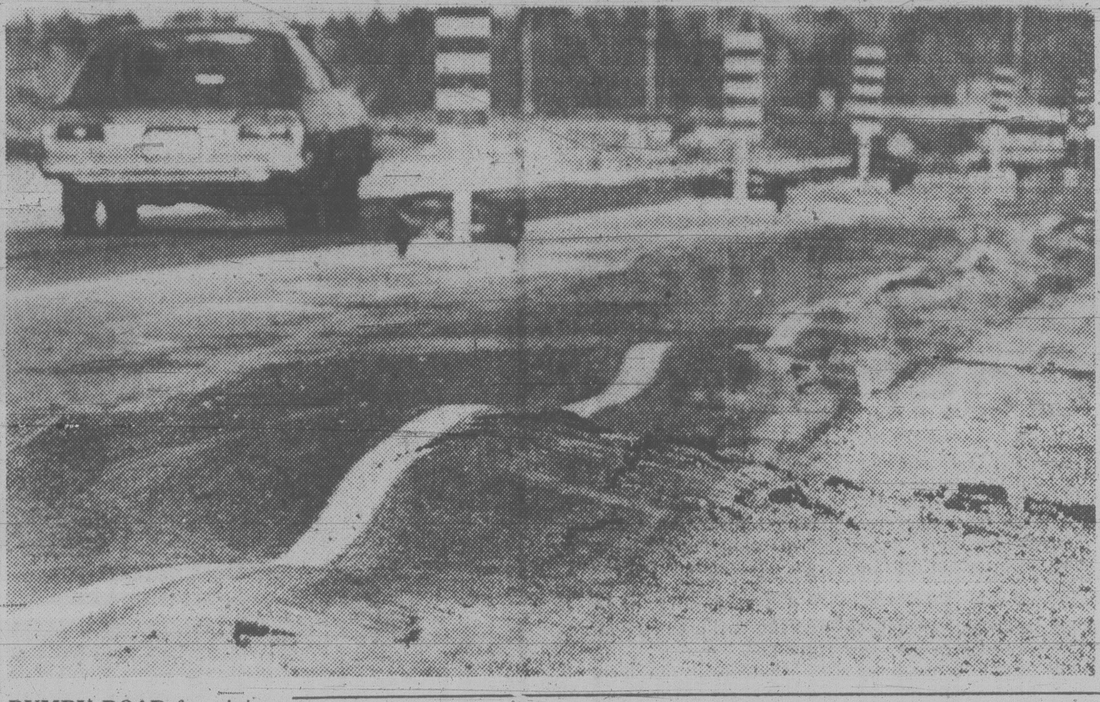
WASHINGTON (AP) — The manufacturer of one of the world's largest-selling insecticides says it is safe under normal conditions despite a finding by the U.S. National Cancer Institute that it causes cancer in animals.

The institute said Thursday that toxaphene, one of the most widely used agricultural pesticides, causes cancer in mice and possibly in rats, as indicated previously in preliminary studies.

In a report on long-term high-dose feeding studies with rats and mice, the institute said the chemical should be considered a potential hazard to humans.

In Ottawa, the Canadian agriculture department said use of toxaphene is restricted in Canada and is currently under intensive evaluation.

Hercules Inc., of Wilmington, Del., the only U.S. toxaphene producer, said the test results have little significance for human health because of the high doses used. It said the chemical, which has been used for 30 years, should be tested at the normal levels used by people.



BUMPY ROAD for civic officials in Ottawa lies in contemplating cause of frost heaves in $13 Million extension to city's cross-town expressway the Queensway which was opened last November and is now closed again for reasons that are obvious in the picture. Highway was constructed using new form of road base that was supposed to prevent frost heaves.

'FRISCO CABLE CARS OUT FOR 6 MONTHS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco's cable cars, a century-old symbol of the city, will vanish from the streets for six months next year while machinery is repaired.

"We're trying to close the system at the end of the tourist season," said Robert Rockwell, public service director of the Municipal Railway that runs the cars.

More than 10 million tourists a year ride the hill-climbing dinkeys, although some city dwellers want to replace them with cheaper buses.

The system is scheduled to be shut down from October 1980 through May 1981 when cable-winding machinery is replaced, transit improvement manager Rino Bei said Thursday.

Oil Prices In Turmoil?

NEW YORK (AP) — If Nigeria acts on its announced desire to raise crude oil prices by 17 per cent on April 1 it might lead to similar action by other oil producers, analysts say.

The Nigerian increase would be far larger than the 3.9-per-cent boost originally scheduled for April 1 by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). Moreover, it would nearly double price boosts already announced by OPEC states reacting to tightened supplies caused by Iran's problems.

The only other OPEC member to suggest such a big price rise is Algeria, which is threatening a 25-per-cent increase.

OPEC had scheduled a total increase of 14.5 per cent this year in the basic price of crude oil. The first increase, of five per cent, raised the price to $13.35 Jan. 1. Other increases were scheduled quarterly.

Speculation abounded that OPEC members would decide March 26 to set base prices at a level reflecting nine-per-cent increases announced by most countries recently.

But Nigeria's warning that it wants to raise the price by $2.50 a barrel — to $17.30 from $14.80 — no matter what OPEC does, may alter other OPEC members' thinking, analysts said.

"We had figured the African nations would want an increase of about $2 (a barrel)," said one analyst in New York who did not want to be identified. "But it seems that was a little conservative."

Meanwhile, a group of Japanese trading companies announced in Tokyo Thursday that the National Iranian Oil Co. agreed to sell them about 500,000 barrels of crude oil a day under a long-term contract. The Japanese, didn't say how much they were paying for it.

It was believed to be the first long-term contract signed by the revolutionary regime, which renewed oil exports March 5 after a shutdown since December due to strikes against the shah.

Legalize Pot, U.S. Urged By Colombian

BOGOTA (UPI) — A leading Colombian financier wants Bogota and Washington to legalize marijuana so his country can make in taxes what it loses in vainly trying to stop the spread of an ever more popular drug.

"What is the sense of repressing, with a high social cost as we have been doing until now, a market that is permanently stimulated by a spread of tolerance and ... demand" in America, Ernesto Samper said Thursday.

Samper, one of Colombia's brightest thinkers and head of the powerful National Association of Financial Institutions, made his pitch for legalizing marijuana at a drug symposium of American and Colombian officials.

U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio, who followed Samper to the podium, said he was "not convinced by the argument that the only way to wipe out the evils of this business is to legalize its merchandising."

In any case, Asencio said, the United States is unlikely to legalize pot "within the next few decades," and if Bogota does so unilaterally it will become "a pirate nation ostracized by international society."

Samper said the enforcement campaign was costing the Colombian government $146 million a year and producing few results — except to raise the price of marijuana and increase the profits of U.S. drug traffickers.

He said the government could have collected nearly $146 million last year, instead of spending it, if marijuana had been legalized and taxed in various ways.

U.S. Turns Cost Screw

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter administration tightened its voluntary price standards Thursday in an effort to forestall a "serious surge of prices in April and May."

Instead of taking half their allowed annual increase as soon as they wish in the second six months of a year, many companies can now take only one-quarter of the annual amount in the first three months of that six-month period.

"It now appears that many companies may be planning to raise their prices by the full allowable amount at the beginning of the second six months period," said Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability in announcing the change.

"This could lead to a serious surge of prices in April and May," Kahn said. April marks the beginning of the second six months of the program, which began last October.

Aluminum Company of America, which had just announced an average 4.5 percent price increase on primary aluminum and a wide range of fabricated products effective April 2, immediately said it would roll back the increase because of the change in the standard.

Companies generally can raise their prices by no more than the average by which their prices went up in 1976 and 1977. The allowable increase for Alcoa apparently is about 9 1-2 percent, or 4 3-4 percent for six months.

Now that must be cut in half under the new standard, which states increases cannot exceed three-fourths of the allowable annual increase during the first nine months of the program. The wage and price council, however, said companies with special seasonal pricing practices might be excepted.

For weeks, Kahn has been complaining, as he did earlier this week before the Chicago Economic Club, that some companies were regarding the standards "as not just ceilings but floors" and that they were taking "their permitted increases at the earliest possible moment."

Thursday Kahn declared, "It is . . . not in keeping with the spirit of the program for firms to speed up the timing of their price increases. This would be not only inflationary but also inequitable in relation to the treatment of wages, since the standards do not contemplate acceleration in the timing of wage increases."

Administration economists had been seeking for some time to provide labor unions with some evidence that the administration was trying to crack down as hard on business as on labor.

The officials are deeply concerned that the recent surge in producer and consumer prices to double-digit levels may mean an end to union compliance with the 7 percent wage increase standard.

Consumer prices rose at an 11.4 per cent annual rate in January and probably just as fast in February. The producer price index has risen at 1 percent or more in each of the last two months.

Also Thursday, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal told the Washington Press Club that the increase in the rate of inflation in recent months does not mean the anti-inflation program has failed.

Blumenthal said the program is still too new to have an effect on the current rate of inflation, and that the rapid increases in food and fuel prices will moderate in coming months.

In another development, the Commerce Department said manufacturing and trade inventories increased $5.4 billion in January to a level of $384.8 billion. That compared with a $2.8 billion rise in December.

Some businesses have been reported to be losing sales because of low inventories, and some of the recent price increases have been attributed to buyers scrambling to build up their stocks to hold sales and beat future shortages and price increases.

Love Canal Dump Suit Names Army

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Claims totalling $106 million in damages have been filed against the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, charging that some of the corps' chemical wastes were dumped at the Love Canal.

David Feldman, a Buffalo lawyer, sent the 24 claims to the Pentagon in Washington this week on behalf of persons who formerly lived on streets adjacent to the old chemical dump site here.

Feldman said the claims charge "personal injuries suffered by the people in the area." They contend the corps dumped refuse material harmful to the residents.

Feldman has filed similar claims against the City of Niagara Falls, the school board and Niagara County in behalf of many of the same residents.

The Hooker Chemicals and Plastics Corp. used the Love Canal as a chemical dump site for a 10-year period. The dump site later was covered and the property turned over to the city and school board.

A school was built on the site and homes were erected on streets bordering the canal. The state declared a health emergency in the neighborhood last summer after chemicals from the dump began oozing to the surface.

Bad Drivers Need Prison, Fines: Report

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A task force which is studying B.C. driving laws has recommended that people who drive while under suspension be jailed.

In an interim report, the provincial government's Motor Vehicle Task Force also urges that the demerit point system be scrapped and that traffic violators be fined.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom, who set up the task force last July, says he is impressed with its findings.

"I really like this one," he said.

But because the task force still has a lot of work to do before presenting its final report, it is unlikely any of its interim recommendations will be implemented in legislation at the next session of the legislature which starts March 22.

Police in Greater Victoria generally welcomed the proposals.

Saanich police chief Bob Peterson said a return to the fine system is quite desirable and added mandatory jail sentences are a reasonably positive approach.

"There are so many drivers who just aren't paying attention to the penalties," he said.

"By handing out a jail term, particularly if it is mandatory, there will be fewer people driving while under suspension."

Victoria deputy police chief Jim Smith said the fine system used now seems to be largely meaningless.

"Police have been concerned for some time that there have to be heavier penalties . . . the current method is not successful.

"Jail may be the answer. I don't know. We should consider, however, what's it going to do to the jail system. Where are we going to put them all?"

The report recommends a penalty spread for driving offences ranging from mandatory jail terms to eliminating court appearances in some cases.

It says people convicted of driving while under suspension should be jailed and also recommends that drivers who have accumulated numerous points for traffic violations be fined and jailed if they don't pay up.

In urging fines instead of demerit points, it says the existing cumbersome and ineffective procedure for processing traffic offences is totally inappropriate for violators who show a flagrant disrespect for the law.

ICBC's point system adds

It All Began With Illegal U-Turn. . .

The following driving history was cited by the Motor Vehicle Task Force as a reason for recommending jail for people who drive under suspension.

It belongs to a 22-year-old Fort St. John man who accumulated 128 penalty points in a two-year stretch beginning with two points for making an illegal U-turn on April 19, 1976.

The man, whose name was not released, was never jailed and went on to earn another 126 points in various B.C. communities over the next 28 months, paying in the process, about $1,500 in fines.

Towards the end of his driving spree, the man was convicted of driving while his licence was suspended no fewer than six times for which he was assessed 60 penalty points.

But each time he disregarded the suspension and popped behind the wheel once more.

Along the way he racked up 24 penalty points for six convictions of driving without due care and attention, 15 points for five speeding convictions, 18 points for seven convictions of making excessive noise (he received no points for the first offence) including five convictions in less than two months in three separate communities.

Four times he was picked up for driving with bald tires and fined a total of $140. No points were assessed.

Driving through a stop sign, without insurance, on the wrong side of the road and failure to produce a driver's licence added more fines and points to his record.

'71 $ Now Worth 54 Cents

OTTAWA (CP) — The 1971 dollar now is worth 54 cents following February cost-of-living increases made public today.

Higher prices for beef and other food helped push the annual rate of inflation to 9.2 per cent in February, up from 8.9 per cent in January, Statistics Canada reported.

The reported Vancouver cost-of-living increase last month was 0.8 per cent or 8.1 per cent on a yearly basis. This compared with Edmonton's price jump of 1.3 per cent and annual inflation rate of 9.2 per cent.

StatsCan said its consumer price index showed a sharp rise of nine tenths of one per cent in the month with food prices accounting for about half that increase.

The federal agency said a basket of food cost 2.5 per cent more in February than it did in January and that same basket of food cost 16.1 per cent more than a year earlier.

The change in its consumer price index, which includes food and other goods and services bought by the average shopper, means it cost $184.40 in February to buy items it cost $182.70 to buy in January.

It would have cost $168.90 to buy the same goods and services a year ago.

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, said Canadians are feeling "the impact of the cheap dollar on prices, of imported items," particularly food. The lower value of the dollar means goods bought abroad cost more.

He said he also doubts last November's reduction in the federal sales tax to nine per cent from 12 per cent is being passed on to consumers. The tax is applied at the manufacturing level.

"How can you get this inflation if that sales tax reduction is being passed on?" he said.

He predicted the higher-than-expected inflation will worsen the government spending deficit this year — estimated to be a record $12.1 billion — because of higher payments for such things as family allowances and old age security pen-

Ottawa Junking Postal Austerity

OTTAWA (CP) — With an election looming, the government has decided to extend door-to-door mail delivery to 160,000 new households across the country, Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said today.

Lamontagne acknowledged the cabinet decision was influenced by the pending federal election.

"But the question of 160,000 having service door-to-door, election or not, is a good thing," Lamontagne said at a news conference.

The government froze expansion of door-to-door delivery to new subdivisions in 1975 as an austerity move.

Lamontagne said he has been pushing for expanded door-to-door service since his appointment as postmaster-general a year ago and the cabinet finally lifted the freeze.

Was the election a big factor?

"Well, let's be honest, it didn't harm," said Lamontagne.

The government has reallocated $15 million and 800 additional person-years to the post office to expand delivery service.

The post office first must conduct surveys and consult the Letter Carriers Union of Canada about new routes, Lamontagne said.

Door-to-door delivery in new areas could begin as soon as a month from now in smaller subdivisions.

New suburbs around major centres will be the main targets for door-to-door delivery.

Lamontagne said the post office has reduced its deficit from $717 million fours years ago to a projected $370.9 million in 1979-80 fiscal year.

The expansion of door-to-door delivery is possible in part because of the improved financial picture, Lamontagne said.

When reporters asked about the political reasons, Lamontagne replied sarcastically: "Well, you know well that whatever we do these days is because of the election."

Lamontagne said members of opposition parties, particularly those from Western Canada, have been pressing in the Commons for door-to-door delivery.

"With these new initiatives, the post office will remain a force of unity in our country and an essential link between 23 million Canadians."

The decision, described by one Liberal as "a highly political move" would end a chronic complaint by constituents in newly-constructed residential areas.

Laden Tanker Splits off N.S.

HALIFAX (CP) — Environment department officials will decide later today whether to have the oil-laden stern and bow sections of the British tanker Kurdistan in the Cabot Strait pumped out or sunk.

Reg Towers, a spokesman for the transport ministry, said tugs were securing lines on the dismembered vessel about 46 nautical miles northeast of Sydney, N.S., in the Cabot Strait.

Towers said a decision would be made by early afternoon on whether to tow the sections to a sheltered area and pump out the estimated 29,662 tons of bunker C oil or sink them in deep water.

No oil was leaking from the sections today, he said.

The Coast Guard vessel Sir William Alexander rescued the 40 crew members of the stricken tanker, and they were to be taken ashore at Sydney later today.

Scientists from the environment department were to scout the area by air later today.

The tanker reported trouble Thursday afternoon, while on a trip from Port Hawkesbury, N.S., to Sept Isles, Que.

U.S. Law After Father

Extradition proceedings have been initiated against a man who police say fled to the United States with his two children in defiance of a B.C. Supreme Court custody order, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday.

A warrant for the arrest of Peter Ericksen has been out since last July 1, Gardom added.

He said U.S. authorities were asked earlier to find and deport the three because they had entered the country illegally but no extradition proceedings were started then.

The government has said it is reconsidering its policy against extraditing one parent who flees Canada with children in the legal custody of the other parent — a policy it has defended as being in the best interests of the children.

The issue arose after it was disclosed that Lee McFayden of Cawston, had not heard from her two sons Carl, 10, and Craig, 9, for eight months.

RCMP in Cawston charged Ericksen with criminal abduction.

Provincial Park Rates Boosted

Overnight fees charged in provincial parks will go up this summer, the Times has learned.

Parks with top facilities now charge campers $4 per night and this will rise to $5. There are 29 parks in that catagory throughout B.C.

Rougher parks, with gravel roads and no running water, will increase their fee from $2 to $3 a night. There are 54 such parks in the province.

Parks officials today refused to confirm the fee hikes.

"We have made some recommendations to the minister, but they went in a confidential memo, so he'd have to be the one to confirm it," said the representative.

Parks Minister Jim Chabot was unavailable for comment.

BCRIC Shares Pushed in Schools

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY

An aggressive campaign by some Greater Victoria financial institutions to have students buy B.C. Resources Investment Corp. shares has been condemned as exploitation by local school districts.

The lucrative share-signing business — financial institutions receive $5 a head for processing BCRIC share applications — has invaded the public school system and administrators are hopping mad.

Soliciting on school property is prohibited and so are deals between banks, credit unions or other financial institutions and students councils, two district superintendents said today.

An order to principals not to let their schools be exploited as distribution outlets for financial institutions was issued by Greater Victoria schools superintendent Allan Stables.

"It's absolutely against board policy. I wouldn't call it immoral, but it's definitely interfering with education," Stables said.

And school board chairman Carol Pickup said today any deals made are without school board knowledge or consent.

Saanich superintendent Don Smyth said he will launch immediate investigations to determine if any under-the-counter agreements are being made in schools.

Smyth said one bank branch in Sidney asked permission to set up a booth in a school, but was turned down. He said he knows of no deals with student councils.

"But these under-the-counter deals won't be obvious to us until its all over," Smyth said.

A Westcoast Savings Credit Union spokesman said today its drive to collect applications includes Greater Victoria, Saanich and Sooke school districts.

So far the credit union has made a deal with at least one Victoria high school and the student council of Camosun College.

Soliciting on school property is illegal but Grant Hilliard said it's easy to get around the problem by having student councils refer students to them.

Hilliard said Westcoast is not the most aggressive financial institution and that others have ventured into shopping malls, large corporations and the public school system.

"It's very hectic. People are out in the marketplace promoting this share issue," Hilliard said.

Westcoast offers a flat rate for each student referral. The student council will get a lump sum donation after the June 15 share sale deadline.

Hilliard said Westcoast was the first financial institution to offer school student councils donations but the idea was copied by many other firms.

But he added Westcoast

Hope for the Heart from Rib Cage of a Calf

City Researchers Work on New Valve

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A gossamer wisp of animal tissue is the latest hope for heart surgeons seeking the perfect implant valve.

And a trio of Victoria researchers are doing the original work of proving the artificial valve before it can be used as a human transplant.

Heart specialist Dr. Richard Brownlee, chief of cardiac surgery at Royal Jubilee Hospital, is the medical expert working with two young men from University of Victoria — physics PhD David Walker and physics research assistant Larry Scotten, an electronics specialist who has done shock wave research with UVic's Dr. John Dewey.

It became a project when Brownlee proposed a new heart valve design. Dewey heard of it and suggested using Scotten and the university's fast research camera.

Scotten and Walker had no previous medical or biological experience. Their background is fluid dynamics, which of course is an important factor in circulation of the blood.

In a small research lab at Jubilee, Scotten and Walker built an artificial heart-pump. Through its optically clear plastic parts they can follow a saline solution representing blood flowing back and forth through an orifice where the action of their valve may be observed.

Using the ultra-fast movie camera the researchers can film this action and project it later at slow-motion speed.

The result is like watching the movement of a jellyfish pulsing through the water, its fragile membrane contracting and expanding rhythmically.

But instead of substanceless jelly, Scotten has used a fragment of pericardium from the rib cage of a calf. Cured by a process much like tanning leather, the soft, thin tissue was cut into two hemispherical pieces and stitched into a stiffened dacron ring which in turn may be sewn surgically into a blood vessel.

To demonstrate the valve, the pump pulses fluid in one direction so that the two slightly overlapping edges of pericardium open like the lips of a goldfish, allowing a clear flow. When the pulse ends and direction is reversed, the two pieces come quickly together and block the flow.

The slow-motion film shows the edges of pericardium flap away from and then toward each other from two opposite hinge points on the ring.

When the valve is open, the free edges wave like bedsheets in the wind. But when they snap together, the seal between them is tight as a zipper.

"It's a marvel that it even operates," Scotten said in describing the valve as a veil of tissue draped inside a ring. "You would wonder how it would ever close, but it does."

Brownlee can hardly wait for animal research to begin, when working valves can be implanted in living creatures to prove the first step toward extending human lives by transplant.

It is expected three or four more years of making and monitoring the new valve will be necessary before it can be considered for human use.

Brownlee described the development last month at a meeting in Brazil of the International Congress on Artificial Organs, where surgeons and researchers from the world over received the news with interest.

He said the great advances in this kind of medical technology have occurred in the past decade, and that from here on "refinement of procedures already available is the likely direction."

Brownlee cited the use of heart valves from domestic pigs in successful human transplant operations. A pig valve has three sections, compared with the two he and his colleagues came up with.

So part of the work being done at the Jubilee lab is testing existing artificial heart valves, for which the apparatus set up by Scotten and Walker was designed. They are evaluating valves on behalf of several U.S. labs, comparing them with each other and with their own models, rewarded by the gift of valves that would otherwise cost about $1,000 each.

The trio has spent $35,000-$40,000 in four years, a relatively small investment for the value of research obtained, or compared with the cost of nuclear medicine.

Most financing is by the B.C. Heart Foundation, with Jubilee providing accommodation and services and the university providing some equipment and computer time.

Brownlee said researchers in the heart field are usually aware of work being done elsewhere and what advances are being made, a result of professional ties and research publications. Abstracts of Scotten's and Walker's work have been presented to organizations like the cardiovascular society, congress of applied mechanics and the society for artificial organs.

At the Brazil meeting Brownlee met for the first time members of a New York group he knew had been working along similar lines.

"It's surprising how close we are," he said of an evaluation of three commercially-made valves. "It reinforces our work."

"It's comforting, too," Walker added.

Artificial valves were first implanted 20 years ago and perhaps 50 different models designed and used to prolong and save lives. But the search for the better valve continues because none does the exact job of the natural valve.

"We tend to be overly critical of them. That's our job," Walker said.

It is also a stimulating challenge, Scotten finds:

"What's interesting is how excited people are who are working in this area."

Will Victoria developer Hans Hartwig really scrap his plans for a $5.5 million building on Wharf Street at the foot of Yates?

Hartwig says he will, because of the red tape he's snarled in at city hall, but one observer there says the cancellation threat is really just a bluff.

"He loves a fight," said the observer. "I'll bet he's already got his tank in second gear."

That was 4½ years ago, and he had nearly forgotten until last month when he got a letter from the Times, enclosing the quarter which had been found in the printers' coffee fund.

Elliot said he scratched the lettering on with an electric stylus, thinking it would be interesting to see if the quarter came back and where it had been.

"Until I received your letter I had almost completely forgotten about it. I wonder how many others came across it before it came into your hands?"

He said he'd take it with him on holiday to Jamaica, spend it and wait for it to turn up again.

Meanwhile, we're still waiting for the "small reward."

The changeover may take some getting used to. Imagine asking someone how many kliks he gets to the gallon. And what about the Mile-Zero sign at Beacon Hill Park. Klik . . . zero. You must admit it has a ring to it though.

Brochure Dies After Bad Spell

The Visitors Information Centre has yanked the last 1,000 of its 15,000 tourist brochures because of a number of spelling errors.

About 14,000 of the brochures, called Greater Victoria and Southern Vancouver Island, have already been distributed widely in the U.S.

Errors include spelling of place names such as Bentwood for Brentwood and Juna de Fuca for Juan de Fuca.

The errors arose when the brochure was put out in a rush against the pressure of deadlines and in a dispute with the firm hired to do the job, Littleton Lawson and Associates.

VIC marketing director Lorraine Cooper said she would have to take responsiblity for the errors in the brochure despite the fact the VIC paid Littleton Lawson to edit it.

She said copy prepared by the advertising firm was not suitable and much of it had to be rewritten against a deadline. There was little time left for proofreading, although she assumed Littleton Lawson would be doing an editing job.

A company spokesman, Peter Lawson, said his firm became exasperated after several rewrites and just sent the material through as presented.

He said neither his company nor the VIC could have been pleased with the final result.

In any case, new brochures prepared with the help of the Department of Tourism will be out within two months and, hopefully, both Brentwood and Juan de Fuca will be restored to their proper spellings.

ARRESTINGLY ELEGANT pair of Saanich police officers, Sgt. Carl Bolger and Constable Claudia Winter, model the new dress uniform which has just been issued to officers on the force. Four years' research went into the design of the new uniform, which will make its debut at tonight's Saanich Police Ball at the University of Victoria. Uniforms' cost of about $150 each is partially offset by policemen agreeing to forego their regular clothing issue this year. Plainclothes officers who receive an annual allowance for clothes purchases will pay a nominal $35 toward the dress rig.

No Cheers For Senior Mortgages

A new mortgage idea giving retired people an annual income, but an increasing debt, likely won't catch on because older people hate to owe money, Silver Threads executive director Pauline Barker said today.

She said debts and health are the two main worries of the senior citizens she counsels.

"Health is the main reason for selling the family home, not money. People move to an apartment when they are no longer strong enough to look after the house or garden. This mortgage plan will not help them at all."

The proposal, put forward by Metropolitan Trust, and expected to be offered by a number of trust companies, offers annual payments for 10 years.

At the end of the 10 years the payments stop and the couple owe for the cash, plus interest, in the form of a first mortgage on the house.

Metroplitan gave this example. A couple with clear title to a house worth $80,000 would be entitled to a first mortgage of $59,100. The couple would get annual payments of $3,000 for 10 years, for a total of $30,000. But they would owe $59,100 because of the interest charges.

Behind the plan is the idea that the couple should spend the value of their home, rather than have the money spent by the children.

If the couple died at the end of the 10-year period, the children would have to deduct $59,100 from the selling price because of the mortgage, rather than getting the full amount.

Mrs. Barker said this idea is contrary to the nature of most retired people.

"They save all their life for their children and they want the money to go to them. The last thing they want to leave behind is a debt."

The mounting debt would be a worry to them at a time when they no longer want to have concerns of that kind.

"I don't want to sound so negative but this plan does not seem to fit the thinking of most of the people I counsel."

By the time they are retired, most people have paid for their home and they want the security of knowing there are no debts.

They want to stay in their homes as long as possible and they leave only when they are no longer able to tend the garden and do the repairs.

"Some people can't even change a lightbulb for themselves and when it gets that bad they have to think about moving to an apartment where these things are done for them.

"Moving from the family home is a real trauma and I counsel people to stay in their home as long as they can manage. Moving into an apartment is one more sign for them that they are getting old."

But it is health, not money, that is the deciding factor here.

Money is a problem only when it comes to paying for repairs for things they used to be able to do for themselves when younger.

Rather than having an annual mortgage payment in the form of cash (and the debt that goes with it) what senior citizens need is low-priced help around the house.

"There used to be some good services under the Opportunities for Youth program. What we need are more services for older people rather than special mortgage programs."

CREDIT UNION CAUGHT 'BIT OFF GUARD'

Day One: Good Action on Free Shares

The response Thursday to the first day of the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. free share offer was more than one financial house bargained for.

"We were astonished at the initial response," said chief executive officer Rodger Lutz of West Coast Savings Credit Union. "It caught us a bit off guard."

Other institutions reported moderate to strong client reaction.

Between 10 a.m. and noon, West Coast branches took in more than 700 applications, but the system was running well, Lutz said.

Most of the action was at the Hillside and Blanshard branch with Sooke branch the next busiest.

West Coast hired extra staff using federal employment grants for the two-month application period, and will rehire staff for the actual share distribution in September.

Harry Steele, manager of the Bank of B.C. main branch, said the response was as strong as expected with about 200 applications.

"What surprised me was that there were people buying shares," Steele said.

He hadn't expected sales, at a pre-market price of $6, to begin until the free distribution was taken up or at least well advanced.

Canada Trust said they had some sales and that the free share applications were going well.

"There was no great rush," said regional manager Roger Hemeon of the Royal Bank of Canada.

He said the bank may have outside sales through shopping mall booths staffed by bank personnel but this decision has not been made.

At the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce there was good volume handled today and Thursday as a lot of people passed through the main branch.

Some additional sales were made but manager Ken Travers does not expect demand to develop until later in the campaign.

A Bank of Nova Scotia teller said hardly anyone asked for shares Thursday.

"People probably stayed home to avoid opening day rush."

Ask the Times

Q. I understand there is a method of calculating the outside temperature by which one counts the number of times a cricket chirps per minute, then using an arithmetical formula. If such is the case, do you know the formula? E.L.M.

A. We are informed by an entomologist that such is the case and the research to explain why and how this is known would be available in scientific papers somewhere. He did not know the formula and suggests you try to locate a library with an index of academic journals that might lead to the subject. It might be pointed out that crickets exist in many varieties, only about two of which are common to Canada. The one on which the chirp research was done is thought to have been from a warmer climate where temperatures are unlikely to be extreme. It is believed that temperature is a factor in mating, to which the chirps relate.

Bad Drivers Need Prison, Fines: Report

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A task force which is studying B.C. driving laws has recommended that people who drive while under suspension be jailed.

In an interim report, the provincial government's Motor Vehicle Task Force also urges that the demerit point system be scrapped and that traffic violators be fined.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom, who set up the task force last July, says he is impressed with its findings.

"I really like this one," he said.

But because the task force still has a lot of work to do before presenting its final report, it is unlikely any of its interim recommendations will be implemented in legislation at the next session of the legislature which starts March 22.

Police in Greater Victoria generally welcomed the proposals.

Saanich police chief Bob Peterson said a return to the fine system is quite desirable and added mandatory jail sentences are a reasonably positive approach.

"There are so many drivers who just aren't paying attention to the penalties," he said.

"By handing out a jail term, particularly if it is mandatory, there will be fewer people driving while under suspension."

Victoria deputy police chief Jim Smith said the fine system used now seems to be largely meaningless.

"Police have been concerned for some time that there have to be heavier penalties . . . the current method is not successful.

"Jail may be the answer. I don't know. We should consider, however, what's it going to do to the jail system. Where are we going to put them all?"

The report recommends a penalty spread for driving offences ranging from mandatory jail terms to eliminating court appearances in some cases.

It says people convicted of driving while under suspension should be jailed and also recommends that drivers who have accumulated numerous points for traffic violations be fined and jailed if they don't pay up.

In urging fines instead of demerit points, it says the existing cumbersome and ineffective procedure for processing traffic offences is totally inappropriate for violators who show a flagrant disrespect for the law.

It All Began With Illegal U-Turn. . .

The following driving history was cited by the Motor Vehicle Task Force as a reason for recommending jail for people who drive under suspension.

It belongs to a 22-year-old Fort St. John man who accumulated 128 penalty points in a two-year stretch beginning with two points for making an illegal U-turn on April 19, 1976.

The man, whose name was not released, was never jailed and went on to earn another 126 points in various B.C. communities over the next 28 months, paying in the process, about $1,500 in fines.

Towards the end of his driving spree, the man was convicted of driving while his licence was suspended no fewer than six times for which he was assessed 60 penalty points.

But each time he disregarded the suspension and popped behind the wheel once more.

Along the way he racked up 24 penalty points for six convictions of driving without due care and attention, 15 points for five speeding convictions, 18 points for seven convictions of making excessive noise (he received no points for the first offence) including five convictions in less than two months in three separate communities.

Four times he was picked up for driving with bald tires and fined a total of $140. No points were assessed.

Driving through a stop sign, without insurance, on the wrong side of the road and failure to produce a driver's licence added more fines and points to his record.

'71 Dollar Now Worth 54¢

OTTAWA (CP) — The 1971 dollar now is worth 54 cents following February cost-of-living increases made public today.

Higher prices for beef and other food helped push the annual rate of inflation to 9.2 per cent in February, up from 8.9 per cent in January, Statistics Canada reported.

The reported Vancouver cost-of-living increase last month was 0.8 per cent or 8.1 per cent on a yearly basis. This compared with Edmonton's price jump of 1.3 per cent and annual inflation rate of 9.2 per cent.

StatsCan said its consumer price index showed a sharp rise of nine tenths of one per cent in the month with food prices accounting for about half that increase.

The federal agency said a basket of food cost 2.5 per cent more in February than it did in January and that same basket of food cost 16.1 per cent more than a year earlier.

The change in its consumer price index, which includes food and other goods and services bought by the average shopper, means it cost $184.40 in February to buy items it cost $182.70 to buy in January.

It would have cost $168.90 to buy the same goods and services a year ago.

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, said Canadians are feeling "the impact of the cheap dollar on prices of imported items," particularly food. The lower value of the dollar means goods bought abroad cost more.

He said he also doubts last November's reduction in the federal sales tax to nine per cent from 12 per cent is being passed on to consumers. The tax is applied at the manufacturing level.

"How can you get this inflation if that sales tax reduction is being passed on?" he said.

He predicted the higher-than-expected inflation will worsen the government spending deficit this year — estimated to be a record $12.1 billion — because of higher payments for such things as family allowances and old age security pen-

Ottawa Junking Postal Austerity

OTTAWA (CP) — With an election looming, the government has decided to extend door-to-door mail delivery to 160,000 new households across the country, Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said today.

Lamontagne acknowledged the cabinet decision was influenced by the pending federal election.

"But the question of 160,000 having service door-to-door, election or not, is a good thing," Lamontagne said at a news conference.

The government froze expansion of door-to-door delivery to new subdivisions in 1975 as an austerity move.

Lamontagne said he has been pushing for expanded door-to-door service since his appointment as postmaster-general a year ago and the cabinet finally lifted the freeze.

Was the election a big factor?

"Well, let's be honest, it didn't harm," said Lamontagne.

The government has reallocated $15 million and 800 additional person-years to the post office to expand delivery service.

The post office first must conduct surveys and consult the Letter Carriers Union of Canada about new routes, Lamontagne said.

Door-to-door delivery in new areas could begin as soon as a month from now in smaller subdivisions.

New suburbs around major centres will be the main targets for door-to-door delivery.

Lamontagne said the post office has reduced its deficit from $717 million fours years ago to a projected $370.9 million in 1979-80 fiscal year.

The expansion of door-to-door delivery is possible in part because of the improved financial picture, Lamontagne said.

When reporters asked about the political reasons, Lamontagne replied sarcastically: "Well, you know well that whatever we do these days is because of the election."

Lamontagne said members of opposition parties, particularly those from Western Canada, have been pressing in the Commons for door-to-door delivery.

"With these new initiatives, the post office will remain a force of unity in our country and an essential link between 23 million Canadians."

The decision, described by one Liberal as "a highly political move" would end a chronic complaint by constituents in newly-constructed residential areas.

Laden Tanker Splits off N.S.

HALIFAX (CP) — Environment department officials estimated today that about a third of the 29,662 tons of heavy Bunker C oil has leaked from the British tanker Kurdistan which broke in two Thursday night during a storm in the Cabot Strait.

Officials said the bow and stern sections of the broken ship were drifting slowly southeastward.

"No one knows where the spilled oil is . . . but is not seen as a threat," a federal information officer said.

Officials believe the ship, carrying the heavy oil from Port Hawkesbury, N.S., to Sept-Isles, Que., hit a submerged iceberg.

The vessel is owned by Nile Shipping Co. Ltd. of Newcastle, Eng., and under charter to Ultramar.

The Kurdistan's 40 crew members were rescued from two lifeboats Thursday night and the ship's first officer, Capt. Ronnie Bell of Blyth, Eng., trapped on the stern section overnight, was picked up by a Canadian Forces helicopter this morning.

U.S. Law After Father

Extradition proceedings have been initiated against a man who police say fled to the United States with his two children in defiance of a B.C. Supreme Court custody order, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday.

A warrant for the arrest of Peter Ericksen has been out since last July 11, Gardom added.

He said U.S. authorities were asked earlier to find and deport the three because they had entered the country illegally but no extradition proceedings were started then.

The government has said it is reconsidering its policy against extraditing one parent who flees Canada with children in the legal custody of the other parent — a policy it has defended as being in the best interests of the children.

The issue arose after it was disclosed that Lee McFayden of Cawston, had not heard from her two sons Carl, 10, and Craig, 9, for eight months.

RCMP in Cawston charged Ericksen with criminal abduction.

BCRIC Shares Pushed in Schools

A Westcoast Savings Credit Union spokesman said today its drive to collect applications includes Greater Victoria, Saanich and Sooke school districts.

So far the credit union has made a deal with at least one Victoria high school and the student council of Camosun College.

Soliciting on school property is illegal but Grant Hilliard said it's easy to get around the problem by having student councils refer students to them.

Hilliard said Westcoast is not the most aggressive financial institution and that others have ventured into shopping malls, large corporations and the public school system.

"It's very hectic. People are out in the marketplace promoting this share issue," Hilliard said.

Westcoast offers a flat rate for each student referral. The student council will get a lump sum donation after the June 15 share sale deadline.

Hilliard said Westcoast was the first financial institution to offer school student councils donations but the idea was copied by many other firms.

But he added Westcoast,

Hope for the Heart from Rib Cage of a Calf

City Researchers Work on New Valve

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A gossamer wisp of animal tissue is the latest hope for heart surgeons seeking the perfect implant valve.

And a trio of Victoria researchers are doing the original work of proving the artificial valve before it can be used as a human transplant.

Heart specialist Dr. Richard Brownlee, chief of cardiac surgery at Royal Jubilee Hospital, is the medical expert working with two young men from University of Victoria — physics PhD David Walker and physics research assistant Larry Scotten, an electronics specialist who has done shock wave research with UVic's Dr. John Dewey.

It became a project when Brownlee proposed a new heart valve design. Dewey heard of it and suggested using Scotten and the university's fast research camera.

Scotten and Walker had no previous medical or biological experience. Their background is fluid dynamics, which of course is an important factor in circulation of the blood.

In a small research lab at Jubilee, Scotten and Walker built an artificial heart-pump. Through its optically clear plastic parts they can follow a saline solution representing blood flowing back and forth through an orifice where the action of their valve may be observed.

Using the ultra-fast movie camera the researchers can film this action and project it later at slow-motion speed.

The result is like watching the movement of a jellyfish pulsing through the water, its fragile membrane contracting and expanding rhythmically.

But instead of substanceless jelly, Scotten has used a fragment of pericardium from the rib cage of a calf. Cured by a process much like tanning leather, the soft, thin tissue was cut into two hemispherical pieces and stitched into a stiffened dacron ring which in turn may be sewn surgically into a blood vessel.

To demonstrate the valve, the pump pulses fluid in one direction so that the two slightly overlapping edges of pericardium open like the lips of a goldfish, allowing a clear flow. When the pulse ends and direction is reversed, the two pieces come quickly together and block the flow.

The slow-motion film shows the edges of pericardium flap away from and then toward each other from two opposite hinge points on the ring.

When the valve is open, the free edges wave like bedsheets in the wind. But when they snap together, the seal between them is tight as a zipper.

"It's a marvel that it even operates," Scotten said in describing the valve as a veil of tissue draped inside a ring. "You would wonder how it would ever close, but it does."

Brownlee can hardly wait for animal research to begin, when working valves can be implanted in living creatures to prove the first step toward extending human lives by transplant.

It is expected three or four more years of making and monitoring the new valve will be necessary before it can be considered for human use.

Brownlee described the development last month at a meeting in Brazil of the International Congress on Artificial Organs, where surgeons and researchers from the world over received the news with interest.

He said the great advances in this kind of medical technology have occurred in the past decade, and that from here on "refinement of procedures already available is the likely direction."

Brownlee cited the use of heart valves from domestic pigs in successful human transplant operations. A pig valve has three sections, compared with the two he and his colleagues came up with.

So part of the work being done at the Jubilee lab is testing existing artificial heart valves, for which the apparatus set up by Scotten and Walker was designed. They are evaluating valves on behalf of several U.S. labs, comparing them with each other and with their own models, rewarded by the gift of valves that would otherwise cost about $1,000 each.

The trio has spent $35,000-$40,000 in four years, a relatively small investment for the value of research obtained, or compared with the cost of nuclear medicine.

Most financing is by the B.C. Heart Foundation, with Jubilee providing accommodation and services and the university providing some equipment and computer time.

Brownlee said researchers in the heart field are usually aware of work being done elsewhere and what advances are being made, a result of professional ties and research publications. Abstracts of Scotten's and Walker's work have been presented to organizations like the cardiovascular society, congress of applied mechanics and the society for artificial organs.

At the Brazil meeting Brownlee met for the first time members of a New York group he knew had been working along similar lines.

"It's surprising how close we are," he said of an evaluation of three commercially-made valves. "It reinforces our work."

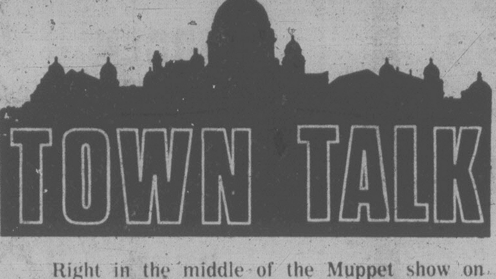
"It's comforting, too," Walker added.

Artificial valves were first implanted 20 years ago and perhaps 50 different models designed and used to prolong and save lives. But the search for the better valve continues because none does the exact job of the natural valve.

"We tend to be overly critical of them. That's our job," Walker said.

It is also a stimulating challenge, Scotten finds:

"What's interesting is how excited people are who are working in this area."



Right in the middle of the Muppet show on Channel 2 Wednesday night that ominous notice flashes on screen: CBC News Bulletin.

What was coming — war in the Middle East? A nuclear disaster?

Nice-looking lady comes on. Her lips are moving but there's no sound. And then ". . . . heed's Conservatives have taken 35 seats and are leading in 31."

Sign flashes on again: This has been a CBC News Bulletin.

And lady's voice over: "Sorry, I really screwed that up didn't I?"

Oh well, back to the Muppets.

HARTWIG

Will Victoria developer Hans Hartwig really scrap his plans for a $5.5 million building on Wharf Street at the foot of Yates?

Hartwig says he will, because of the red tape he's snarled in at city hall, but one observer there says the cancellation threat is really just a bluff.

"He loves a fight," said the observer. "I'll bet he's already got his tank in second gear."

Curiosity led Doug Elliot of Vanderhoof to inscribe a 1971 Canadian 25-cent piece with this cryptic message:

Small reward.

And on the reverse:

Send to Box 396 Vanderhoof V0J 3M0.

That was 4½ years ago, and he had nearly forgotten until last month when he got a letter from the Times, enclosing the quarter which had been found in the printers' coffee fund.

Elliot said he scratched the lettering on with an electric stylus, thinking it would be interesting to see if the quarter came back and where it had been.

"Until I received your letter I had almost completely forgotten about it. I wonder how many others came across it before it came into your hands?"

He said he'd take it with him on holiday to Jamaica, spend it and wait for it to turn up again.

Meanwhile, we're still waiting for the "small reward."

Former Victorian Margaret "Robbie" Robinson reports to Town Talk from Cashmere, Wash., she has been swamped with mail from friends here since people learned she had been named Citizen of the Year by the Cashmere Chamber of Commerce.

Robbie, a registered nurse who was educated in Kamloops, North Vancouver and Victoria and was a supervisor at Glengarry Hospital from 1967 to 1969, exchanged her 41-year nursing career for a job with the Cashmere Valley Record as a columnist eight years ago.

She says "thanks" to all the old friends who have written her.

Saanich alderman Geoff Vantreight and the artificial daffodils he wears in his lapel and hands out to promote his farming activities are a familiar sight.

Now he's getting a little competition from the Mayor Mel Couvelier.

The mayor now sports a large button on his jacket when he does his political rounds.

The button, however, does not promote the clothing stores he owns but bears the Saanich crest.

Originally purchased for use by municipal employees, Couvelier considers them good public relations.

The Metric Commission's choice of metrage to replace mileage is an unlikely word to catch on with the public, says reader Doris Godfrey.

Her choice is much simpler — kliks.

She says she's not the originator of the expression. Her son-in-law said that when he was serving in Vietnam the word was in vogue.

The changeover may take some getting used to. Imagine asking someone how many kliks he gets to the gallon. And what about the Mile-Zero sign at Beacon Hill Park. Klik . . . zero. You must admit it has a ring to it though.

Brochure Dies After Bad Spell

The Visitors Information Centre has yanked the last 1,000 of its 15,000 tourist brochures because of a number of spelling errors.

About 14,000 of the brochures, called Greater Victoria and Southern Vancouver Island, have already been distributed widely in the U.S.

Errors include spelling of place names such as Bentwood for Brentwood and Juna de Fuca for Juan de Fuca.

The errors arose when the brochure was put out in a rush against the pressure of deadlines and in a dispute with the firm hired to do the job, Littleton Lawson and Associates.

VIC marketing director Lorraine Cooper said she would have to take responsiblity for the errors in the brochure despite the fact the VIC paid Littleton Lawson to edit it.

She said copy prepared by the advertising firm was not suitable and much of it had to be rewritten against a deadline. There was little time left for proofreading, although she assumed Littleton Lawson would be doing an editing job.

A company spokesman, Peter Lawson, said his firm became exasperated after several rewrites and just sent the material through as presented.

He said neither his company nor the VIC could have been pleased with the final result.

In any case, new brochures prepared with the help of the Department of Tourism will be out within two months and, hopefully, both Brentwood and Juan de Fuca will be restored to their proper spellings.

ARRESTINGLY ELEGANT pair of Saanich police officers, Sgt. Carl Bolger and Constable Claudia Winter, model the new dress uniform which has just been issued to officers on the force. Four years' research went into the design of the new uniform, which will make its debut at tonight's Saanich Police Ball at the University of Victoria. Uniforms' cost of about $150 each is partially offset by policemen agreeing to forego their regular clothing issue this year. Plainclothes officers who receive an annual allowance for clothes purchases will pay a nominal $35 toward the dress rig.

No Cheers For Senior Mortgages

A new mortgage idea giving retired people an annual income, but an increasing debt, likely won't catch on because older people hate to owe money, Silver Threads executive director Pauline Barker said today.

She said debts and health are the two main worries of the senior citizens she counsels.

"Health is the main reason for selling the family home, not money. People move to an apartment when they are no longer strong enough to look after the house or garden. This mortgage plan will not help them at all."

The proposal, put forward by Metropolitan Trust, and expected to be offered by a number of trust companies, offers annual payments for 10 years.

At the end of the 10 years the payments stop and the couple owe for the cash, plus interest, in the form of a first mortgage on the house.

Metroplitan gave this example. A couple with clear title to a house worth $80,000 would be entitled to a first mortgage of $59,100. The couple would get annual payments of $3,000 for 10 years, for a total of $30,000. But they would owe $59,100 because of the interest charges.

Behind the plan is the idea that the couple should spend the value of their home, rather than have the money spent by the children.

If the couple died at the end of the 10-year period, the children would have to deduct $59,100 from the selling price because of the mortgage, rather than getting the full amount.

Mrs. Barker said this idea is contrary to the nature of most retired people.

"They save all their life for their children and they want the money to go to them. The last thing they want to leave behind is a debt."

The mounting debt would be a worry to them at a time when they no longer want to have concerns of that kind.

"I don't want to sound so negative but this plan does not seem to fit the thinking of most of the people I counsel."

By the time they are retired, most people have paid for their home and they want the security of knowing there are no debts.

They want to stay in their homes as long as possible and they leave only when they are no longer able to tend the garden and do the repairs.

"Some people can't even change a lightbulb for themselves and when it gets that bad they have to think about moving to an apartment where these things are done for them.

"Moving from the family home is a real trauma and I counsel people to stay in their home as long as they can manage. Moving into an apartment is one more sign for them that they are getting old."

But it is health, not money, that is the deciding factor here.

Money is a problem only when it comes to paying for repairs for things they used to be able to do for themselves when younger.

Rather than having an annual mortgage payment in the form of cash (and the debt that goes with it) what senior citizens need is low-priced help around the house.

"There used to be some good services under the Opportunities for Youth program. What we need are more services for older people rather than special mortgage programs."

CREDIT UNION CAUGHT 'BIT OFF GUARD'

Day One: Good Action on Free Shares

The response Thursday to the first day of the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. free share offer was more than one financial house bargained for.

"We were astonished at the initial response," said chief executive officer Rodger Lutz of West Coast Savings Credit Union. "It caught us a bit off guard."

Other institutions reported moderate to strong client reaction.

Between 10 a.m. and noon, West Coast branches took in more than 700 applications, but the system was running well, Lutz said.

Most of the action was at the Hillside and Blanshard branch with Sooke branch the next busiest.

West Coast hired extra staff using federal employment grants for the two-month application period, and will rehire staff for the actual share distribution in September.

Harry Steele, manager of the Bank of B.C. main branch, said the response was as strong as expected with about 200 applications.

"What surprised me was that there were people buying shares," Steele said.

He hadn't expected sales, at a pre-market price of $6, to begin until the free distribution was taken up or at least well advanced.

Canada Trust said they had some sales and that the free share applications were going well.

"There was no great rush," said regional manager Roger Hemeon of the Royal Bank of Canada.

He said the bank may have outside sales through shopping mall booths staffed by bank personnel but this decision has not been made.

At the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce there was good volume handled today and Thursday as a lot of people passed through the main branch.

Some additional sales were made but manager Ken Travers does not expect demand to develop until later in the campaign.

A Bank of Nova Scotia teller said hardly anyone asked for shares Thursday.

"People probably stayed home to avoid opening day rush."

Ask the Times

Q. I understand there is a method of calculating the outside temperature by which one counts the number of times a cricket chirps per minute, then using an arithmetical formula. If such is the case, do you know the formula? E.L.M.

A. We are informed by an entomologist that such is the case and the research to explain why and how this is known would be available in scientific papers somewhere. He did not know the formula and suggests you try to locate a library with an index of academic journals that might lead to the subject. It might be pointed out that crickets exist in many varieties, only about two of which are common to Canada. The one on which the chirp research was done is thought to have been from a warmer climate where temperatures are unlikely to be extreme. It is believed that temperature is a factor in mating, to which the chirps relate.

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I have been suffering from repeated attacks of cystitis. The attacks come on without any reason. Is there any way to prevent them? — Mrs. C.S.D.

Dear Mrs. D.:

Urinary tract infections are some of the most common bacterial conditions in the human body. They occur about 10 times more frequently in females than they do in males.

Cystitis is an infection of the urinary bladder. Many cases of cystitis are thought to be due to an ascending infection from the vagina. Germs extend through it to the urethra and then, into the bladder. Germs easily multiply in the urine. Sometimes, sexual relations precipitate attacks of cystitis.

My father had a very difficult abdominal operation, performed by a very competent surgeon. When I was allowed to see my father in the intensive care unit, I was shocked to find that they had made an opening in his neck and had inserted a tube there. What could this have to do with an abdominal operation? — Miss J.M.

Dear Miss M.:

A "tracheotomy" is a lifesaving procedure. An artificial opening is made in the neck, below the level of the voice box (Larynx) in order to insure the free flow of oxygen in to the lung.

Many years ago, this operation was done only on an emergency basis. During the terrible period when diphtheria was still a threatening disease, a tracheotomy awas absolutely essential to prevent suffocation when there was any obstruction to the airway.

Today, the operation has been converted from an emergency procedure to an elective one. This means that it is done almost routinely when mucous "plugs" interfere with the free flow of air into the lungs.

These Cosmetics Used by Grandma

FINAL

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

...it tells you how

If you use cosmetics regularly and want to avoid the expensive chemical-laden types, try making your own. It's healthier! Mother Earth reader Shirley Sipp tells how:

For centuries, herbs were the main source of beauty aids, until large cosmetic companies began to manufacture them, often using unhealthy chemicals. Lately, however, as we rediscover organic recipes, herbs, fruits and vegetables have found their way back onto makeup tables.

Here's a list of beauty tips that my grandma once wrote out, for her daughters.

IN THE MORNING: Mix a handful of oatmeal with enough water to make a paste, and put this on your face and neck. When it dries, rinse the paste off with whey, then with water, and dry your skin with a soft rag.

AT NIGHT: Rub a mixture of honey and glycerin onto your face, then wipe it off gently, after a while, with a soft cloth.

ONCE A WEEK: Add a teaspoon of honey to one mashed apple, mix them together, and put this "cream" on your face and neck. Leave it in place for ½ hour, and then rinse with whey or cold milk.

TO SMOOTH WRINKLES: Apply barley water and a few drops of balm of Gilead to your wrinkles every day.

TO BLEACH YOUR SKIN: Rub cucumber slices on your face.

FOR SOFT HAND: Shake ½ cup glycerin, ½ cup rose water and ¼ cup witch hazel in a jar. Apply this to your hands after they've been in water.

TO HEAL CHAPPED HANDS: Rub them with a damp table salt.

FOR BRIGHT HAIR: Add vinegar to the rinse water after washing your hair, or make a rinse of mullein, nettle, sage or burdock tea.

TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR: Boil 1 ounce of chamomile or sage in 1 quart of water for 20 minutes. Rinse your hair with this brew and use a hairbrush dipped in strong chamomile or sage tea.

TO PREVENT DANDRUFF: Rub a tea made from the leaves and bark of willow into your scalp. Rinse the area with marsh mallow tea.

FOR A RELAXING BATH: Hang a bag of dried comfrey or rosemary in the bath water.

FOR PERFUME: Fill a jar with pressed rose petals or other sweet-scented flowers, add as much glycerin as the container will hold and cover it tightly. After three weeks, you can pour the perfume off into a bottle.

TO MAKE A SACHET: Combine 1 ounce each of powdered cloves, caraway seed, nutmeg, mace and cinnamon with 6 ounces of powdered orrisroot. Put the mixture in fancy bags and place them in closets and dresser drawers.

Some of these ingredients may not be familiar to you. For example, "balm of Gilead" is plain old balsam. And "marsh mallow tea" may sound like a sticky mess, but Grandma wasn't talking about the soft, white candy. She was referring to the root of the marsh mallow PLANT. "Orrisroot," another name that may puzzle you, is the dried, powdered root of various European iris plants.

Grandma foraged or grew most of her ingredients, but often you can find them in health food stores, supermarkets and pharmacies, or even growing wild along the roadside.

However, a word of caution: You should test these natural cosmetics for allergies. To do this, place a small amount on the tender skin of your inner arm and cover the area with an adhesive bandage. Wait 24 hours and look. If the patch shows any reaction, such as redness or other irritation, don't use that particular ingredient.

My grandmother often said she didn't feel a bit older at 80 than she did at 16, and she didn't LOOK her age either. Could her organic beauty rituals account for her natural glow and glamour? Well, let's just say that, after a few weeks of using some of Grandma's "secrets," I've begun to believe that they did and can for you, too!

NOT QUITE AN ORANGE

TORONTO (CP) — It is not an orange and not a tangerine. But the ortanique arriving from Jamaica this month is a cross between the two fruits. It is flattened on the bottom and when ripe, is a deep reddish orange with rind that generally is smooth. Ortaniques will be available in Canadian supermarkets until mid-May.

SHARING A GOOD LAUGH with an old friend is just part of the fun when Eileen Brennan, right, and Marcia Rodd star as two of the tenants in a garden apartment in Queens, New York, in the ABC Television Network's new limited run comedy series, 13 Queens Blvd., which premieres Tuesday, March 20 at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 4.

Changes Hit TV Schedules

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's spring-cleaning time on the television schedule with eight shows going off the air — one before it even got on.

ABC has cancelled "Makin' It" and "Welcome Back, Kotter", and moved "Family" to Friday nights. The network also introduced a new drama series, "Doctors' Private Lives," on Thursday. It's about the personal and professional lives of two heart surgeons.

Over at CBS, "Mr. Dugan" was cancelled before it began because the production company, Norman Lear's TAT Communications, received very bad vibes from the Black Caucus in Congress.

The show dealt with a black first-term congressman in a format originally designed for Bea Arthur in "Maude," then for John Amos in a show that was to be called "Onward and Upward." Both Arthur and Amos withdrew.

NBC, the network with the biggest ratings problems, also has the most rejuggling. The network already has cancelled "Little Women." It also has announced new programing that means the shelving a four other shows, at least temporarily. Betting is most of these will never make it back on the air.

"Brothers and Sisters" goes off the schedule after its March 28 episode, "Mrs. Columbo" has her last scheduled air date March 29, "Turnabout" and "Sweepstakes" make their final appearances March 30.

In addition, "Supertrain" gets derailed for repairs but is scheduled to return to the air April 7.

The new NBC shows include:

"Harris and Company," a four-part hour-long series running weekly beginning March 15 about a black family recently moved from Detroit to Los Angeles.

"The Duke," starring Robert Conrad as an ex-prize fighter turned detective, opens as a movie April 5, then follows on Fridays April 13 through May 4.

"Real People" is an hour series produced by "Laugh-In" guru George Schlatter in which reporters and television personalities talk to ordinary and extraordinary people around the country. Air dates run from April 11 through May 2.

"Whodunit?", a half-hour show in which guest stars are asked to solve mysteries based on clues presented in a series of vignettes. Ed McMahon acts as host.

"Highcliffe Manor," six comedy half-hours starting April 12 in a spoof of gothic drama. The widow of Highcliffe Manor must contend with the greedy officers of her late husband's company, her "enthusiastically evil" secretary and, according to NBC, "a strange woman is building a person out of spare parts in the manor's basement."

Susan Anton is the latest to attempt to bring back the variety show with her own hour running weekly April 26 through May 17.

Chinatown

Victoria's Chinese community will be featured, in a 30-minute documentary Tuesday, March 20, on Channel 6.

CHEK-Television says that during the program "reporter Pat Murphy explores the legends of opium dens and brothels that grew out of Fan Tan Alley— the narrowest street in Canada".

Great Reunion

There is a small band of American artists who have nurtured and loved and cared for the art form that has become traditional popular music. They mostly grew out of the Big Band era and created styles of their own, borrowing bits and pieces from many of the greats, but always putting the pieces together in a unique and stylish way.

Many of the members of this elite band will gather together for an evening of extraordinary music on American Pop: The Great Singers, airing Saturday, March 17, at 8 p.m., on Channel 9, with Tony Bennett as host.

More Skating From Vienna

Coverage of the 1979 World Figure Skating Championships continues as entrants from nearly 20 countries compete in Vienna. Johnny Esaw, Otto Jelinek and Debbie Wilkes Darroch are the reporters.

Saturday, 10 p.m.: Ladies' free event. Competitors include defending world champion Anett Poetzsch (East Germany); Janet Morissey (Canada); Linda Fratianne (U.S.); Susanna Driano (Italy); and Denise Biellmann (Switzerland).

Sunday, 7 p.m.: Highlights of the week's events, featuring men's, women's, pairs and dance champions, plus the runners-up in each category and selected Canadian performances.

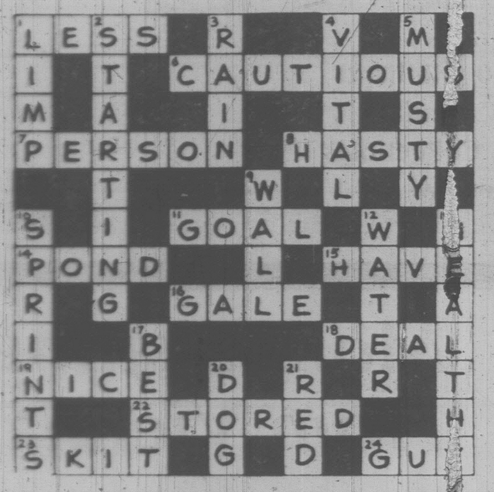
Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

6. CAUTIOUS not captious. Ideally, one should not be "too" CAUTIOUS or at all captious.

7. PERSON not parson. The clue applies aptly to a PERSON, whether a parson or not.

8. HASTY not nasty. Aptly, a "placid" person is just the type not to be headstrong or HASTY. "Nasty" tends to lack point in the context given, since these are more or less unpleasant anyway.

11. GOAL not goat. Why regard a goat in a field as having a fixed or definite location "at the end"?

14. POND not pony. the pony itself is hardly more attractive seasonally; it is rather that the idea of having a pony to ride (say) may be more attractive in the summer.

15. HAVE not save. One would hardly wish specifically to save as an end in itself. HAVE is more to the point.

16. GALE not male or sale. It is in the case of something remarkable, such as a GALE, rather, that there is "always" a basis for exaggeration. A male or a sale (or a tale) may be very ordinary and discussed in an unexcited or belittling fashion.

18. DEAL not heal. It's a question of DEALing with them, or of treating people with them (the actual fact of successful healing being slightly beside the point).

19. NICE not nine. Since even two lively youngsters may well have too much energy for grandfather, there is no call to specify nine. He isn't likely to have occasion to play with nine at once, anyway.

22. STORED not shored. Aptly, storage is a general sort of facility to which some things are more suitable than others. The clue's broad nature is less suited to shored, since, in general, one doesn't want to shore things up.

23. SKIT not suit. As implied, an actor likes his material (i.e., SKIT) to be good. He has no professional interest in the quality of a suit worn for a role.

CLUES DOWN

1. LIMP not lisp. Lisp is the weaker answer, since very many people do not listen critically to their own diction. One may not agree that a lisp is a bad thing, anyway.

2. STARTING not starring. "STARTING" links up more aptly with the "time" element with which the clue is concerned.

3. RAIN not pain. Since even brief pain can be very distressing, the clue's moderate tone suits RAIN better.

5. MUSTY not rusty. A food container being at all MUSTY is bound to put one off, but a can may be slightly rusty on the outside without bothering you.

9. WALL not fall. When the word "sheer" is put in front of it, "drop" takes the sense of vertical or near-vertical surface of some kind, rather than a simple fall.

13. HEALTHY not wealthy. As implied, he will suffer if he loses his HEALTH. His material needs may not require actual wealth or riches.

Soap Opera Scene

Another World Sets Trend

BY JOHN GOUDAS

The popular Another World is now six times longer than soaps were when they began on TV. They were only 15-minute entries back in the early '50s.

"We felt we had enough story to tell and the people to tell it interestingly," says executive producer Paul Rauch, when asked to explain Another World's expansion from 60 to 90 minutes.

Rauch said that there would be many more storylines as well as the addition of eight new actors. The new characters, however, all relate to the existing ones, rather than coming on cold. "The show will be like 20th century multi-character novels," he said.

How much more work does this mean for present cast members? Victoria Wyndham (Rachel Cory) believes it's a good deal more work. Besides having to learn more lines, she said the cast also has to get used to the new schedule and two new large studios.

Douglas Watson (Mack Cory), the veteran stage actor who portrays Rachel's husband, however, thinks the 90-minute format will not cause any real change in the workload. He said the new actors will more than take up the slack of the additional 30 minutes.

Still, another cast member, Irene Dailey (Liz Matthews), more than supports the sentiments of Victoria Wyndham. Irene feels extra pressure because the show is taped without regard to sequence.

"With no chronological order, an actor must employ total concentration in every scene," says Irene. Due to the new format, the cast no longer works as an ensemble, and no one any longer carries the show completely.

The seven and a half hours of programming a week has been reported to have put most of the pressure on the writers. Not so, according to Harding Lemay, Another World's outspoken head writer, who is ecstatic about the expansion to 90 minutes. "I've always been high on writing longer forms,"

Victoria Wyndham

Lemay said. He must be since he writes four shows a week by himself and even rewrites the fifth: Lemay doesn't think that a writer can write through committee and finds that more often than not a long-term outline is irrelevant.

Whether or not the expansion of "Another World" will set a pattern for the other network soaps remains to be seen. Right now, the other networks are letting "Another World" take the risk.

Lemay and the cast are proud that Another World has been a trend-setter. It became the first one-hour daytime serial on Jan. 6, 1975, and just initiated the 90-minute format on March 5.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Actor Jerry ver Dorn has been cast in his first daytime serial role on Guiding Light as lawyer Ross Marler, Justin's brother. Most recently Jerry played the prosecutor in the off-Broadway production of Are You Now Or Have You Ever Been, and he just finished stepping in for George Grizzard during the matinee performance of Man and Superman on Broadway.

Jed Allan, who plays lawyer Don Craig in Days of Our Lives, can be seen in an NBC prime time movie titled Fast Friends, airing on March 19. Jed plays Bernie Roman, the estranged husband of the new talent co-ordinator in the movie about the backstage workings of a hit TV talk show.

Don Stewart, who also plays a lawyer, Mike Bauer, on Guiding Light, will be returning to the stage for a short run. The popular TV star will appear in a production of Our Town in Lancaster, Pa., from March 27 through April 7. Fans in the area will certainly want to catch their favorite "in person" ... Attention soap fans in Dallas, Texas! There'll be a Soap Opera Festival at the Red Bird Mall, scheduled for March 23 and 24. Joyce Becker, emcee for all the festivals, joins the major soap opera stars selected from the 11 different daytime serials, and guides audiences in a lively question and answer period.

Jerry ver Dorn

With all the milestones being reached by various TV soaps these days, Guiding Light has a special claim to fame — counting the 15 years it was on radio before debuting on TV in 1952, the soap now celebrates more than 40 years in broadcasting. Charita Bauer, in her original role as Bert Bauer, joined the radio version in 1950 and has been with the soap since its debut on TV.

A trivia note: Among the stars who appeared in the soap through the years have been Barnard Hughes, Chris Sarandon, Sandy Dennis, Jan Sterling, Ruth Warrick, Cicely Tyson, James Earl Jones, Billy Dee Williams, Ruby Dee, Nancy Malone, Blythe Danner, and current Oscar nominee Christopher Walken ... Some fans have been asking about Holly's recent dilemma in Guiding Light — she was physically assaulted by her husband Roger and can't decide whether or not to prosecute. If you want your opinions to count, why not write the Guiding Light, in care of CBS TV, 51 West 52nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10019.

PLOT PORTENTS. Watch out for skirmishes between Trish and Stephanie on Days of Our Lives. At this point, poor Trish seems incapable of handling wily Stephanie. Maggie and Mickey have patched up their differences with Mickey vowing to get Janice back — a tall order indeed. With Amanda on the loose again, Neil is about to make a new conquest. After all, his affair with Linda has cooled down.

Thanks to Brock's care, Casey Reed may solve her sexual hangups on The Young and the Restless. Sister Nikki certainly has no problems in that department.

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE IS $250.00
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week!
THIS CROSSWORD is not a draw: It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a work list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

11. Prevue reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.

12. Puzzle clues may be abbreviated and such words as AN, THE and A omitted.

TV MAILBAG

AD GAME — I'm sure I've seen both Joel Higgins and Trish Stewart, from "Salvage I," in TV commercials recently. He in Geritol and she for a beer commercial with James Coburn. Am I correct? Also, how is the series doing in the ratings? — Karen Glitchburn, Bellamy, Va.

Your eyes are not deceiving you. Both Higgins and Stewart have made pin money doing commercials while waiting for acting jobs. He indeed looks on approvingly at his Geritol-gulping spouse, as she shares a brew with James Coburn in another commercial. As for "Salvage I," the two stars may find themselves out of steady work again soon, if the show's ratings don't pick up. They haven't been exactly sky-high, despite the rocket ship.

FAMILY FARE — Will "All in the Family" be back on the air next year? It's long been one of my favorites. — Mrs. Alice Eisenman, Fargo, N.D.

The status of "All in the Family" is still unsettled at the moment. But odds are if it returns at all it will be as a series of hour-long specials to air off and on.

JEREMIAH JR. — Can you tell me who played the boy in "Jeremiah Johnson"? Is he really unable to speak? — Tina Akardin, Stamford, Conn.

Josh Albee played Caleb, Johnson's adopted son. The young actor is perfectly capable of speaking his lines in other roles.

SHORT SHORTS — Everyone is always making a big deal about Gary Coleman being short. Well what about Todd Bridges? He doesn't seem very tall either. Can you tell me how tall and how old he is? — Timmy Mitchell, Grand Forks, B.C.

The story of Todd Bridges is another short one. He stands 5 feet tall and is 13 years old. He'll be 14 in May.

LORDED OVER — You answered a question a while back about Jared Martin who was on "How the West Was Won" as Frank Grayson. I realize he's not under contract, so when are we likely to see him again? — Catherine Carmichael, Castleton, Vt.

Jared Martin's wandering days are over. Jack Lord, who will stop chasing criminals after this season of "Hawaii Five-O," has signed Martin to play the lead in a series Lord is developing for CBS. It's another police-type drama, and will, of course, be filmed in Hawaii. Just stay tuned until the fall.

FRANK ANSWER — I would like to know if William Kirby Cullen ("How the West Was Won") is the same person who played the Creature in "Frankenstein: The True Story"? My mom says he is, but I say he's too young. — Barbara Hayes, Vader, Wash.

Mom flunks her monster and movie star quiz this week. Michael Sarrazin was the creature in that 1973 TV version of the Mary Shelley classic. Cullen would have been a teenager when it was filmed.

STUNTED — I used to be a big fan of pole vaulter Bob Seagren when he was an amateur athlete, then a pro. I followed him through the Superstars meets and on to "Soap." But now he's nowhere to be seen. Where, oh where, is Bob? — Cassie Fraser, Buffalo, N.Y.

Try Key Biscayne, Fla. Seagren is back before the cameras playing a stunt man in a CBS TV-movie "Stunt 7." Elke Sommer is his romantic interest in it.

Q. My family and I would like to know why "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" hasn't been shown on television? My father says it hasn't been on in 10 years. Is there something wrong with it. What's the reason? — T.M.F. New Windsor, N.Y.

A. The war movie has been shown on television countless times, usually on non-network stations which depend heavily on old movies. It will surface again and you should watch your local listings for it.

Jeffrey Byron plays secret agent

Omega Connection

Luther Starling (Jeffrey Byron) would be your normal, everyday, all-American 20-year-old, but for one thing: he's a secret agent for the CIA, in The Omega Connection to be aired on the World of Disney Sunday, at 8 p.m., Channel 5.

Seeking respite from the coak-and-dagger intrigue of his profession, Luther trips off to London to visit his friend Roger Pike (Larry Cedar). But Luther no sooner touches down at Heathrow Airport than he and his buddy witness a kidnapping. The victim, a defecting scientist, has discovered an energy source that will make nuclear power obsolete.

Want to Change the TV dial? DON'T GET UP!

Just relax in your favorite chair on one side of the TV room here →

← and watch TV over there without getting up. It's really that easy!

All you need is a TV converter — it's a tuner expander — and any Victoria Cablevision subscriber can push buttons to get any of the 12 stations on the basic dial and the six stations in Midband, in the order you want. The six in Midband are news and weather, public affairs, stocks, House of Commons, KCPQ Tacoma and citizen messages. Get a look at them and get a free in-home converter demonstration by calling Victoria Cablevision at 477-1884 weekdays — then let your fingers do the tuning.

Ideal Design for a Narrow Lot

Here's a very sophisticated split entry design with three bedrooms and an interesting loft which provides all of the modern conveniences in an eye-appealing package, yet which is perfectly suited to the narrow frontage urban lot. The family with young children will find this design especially appealing, as it provides well for privacy when entertaining with its unfinished basement, loft and excellent separation between the bedroom and entertaining areas.

The exterior decor resembles a mountain ski chalet, with its fieldstone veneer, stone chimney, heavy shake roof and sky-lit entrance. The double-doored entry leads into a compact reception foyer, from whence either down to the unfinished grade level or up to the main living area of the home. The main landing faces both the guest closet and a two-piece vanity bath behind a pocket door. To the right is the large rectangular living room, which features a wide-hearth back-to-back fireplace, which is shared with the family room, and full length windows for excellent natural lighting and view.

The formal dining room has sliding glass doors to a front-facing balcony, convenient for summer breezes while dining. A space-saving pocket door gives easy access to, or provides privacy from, the kitchen. The linked U-shape kitchen-nook combination, family room and spiral staircase to the loft forms one band across the home, dividing the entertaining and bedroom areas of the home. The family room has sliding glass doors to a side balcony. The spiralling staircase will delight both children and parents. The loft space could be developed as a luxurious and interesting sloped-ceilinged hideaway for romantics or as an additional bedroom, or playroom lounge for the children.

All three bedrooms are positioned around the central bath and linen storage closet, and all have ample closet storage and excellent view and natural lighting.

The master bedroom has a three-piece ensuite with tub.

On the lower level may be developed a second family room or recreation room/wet bar combination, a second bathroom or additional bedrooms; still leaving abundant storage facilities.

Plans for design No. 78-1540 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A fiveset plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eightset package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $4 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 5% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Magazine, Series 38, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus 350 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.50 ($2 plus 50¢ postage and handling).

John Hearn's Collectibles

I probably receive more letters about old 78 records than any other subject. Regrettably most of them are from individuals who have heard that they ae valuable and ask for prices and possible buyers, neither of which I can provide. I say regrettably because old 78s can be the most rewarding of collectibles in their own right — rather than for their possible cash value. In practise, value is only created by those who are genuinely interested, therefore the more people who are interested, the higher those values will become.

What should be clear is that very few people collect RECORDS — who in their right minds would pay good money for black discs which could not even be used as frisbees? What they collect are RECORDINGS, music, voice, instrumentalist, speaker, comedian. They want fine recordings in the best possible condition, not just to own them but to play them.To expect a record collector to pay for a badly worn disc is like expecting a book collector to pay for a volume with half the pages missing. No wonder rare specimens in good condition trade for $100 or more.

I was reading recently about someone paying just that, $100 for a Jimmy Rogers recording in mint condition. Think of it this way: if someone offered to pay you $100 to find a Jimmy Rogers record in mint condition for them, how would you go about it? It could easily cost you $1,000 to track one down.

Jimmy Rogers was one of the great country and Western recording stars of the late 1920s. For the benefit of younger readers a brief history if C&W music will help explain why today those old 78s are among the very hottest of collectibles.

Contemporary C&W means Nashville and country singers from as far away as Hong Kong all singing in Nashville accent. It means Dolly Parton and Crystal Gayle and Linda Ronstadt. It means million record sales and super stars making fortunes. It is a gigantic industry.

Before World War Two it was nothing like that. Country and western was the authentic grass roots music of the Americas. It was made by authentic country people for their own pleasure and the pleasure of their neighbors. It never occurred to anyone that there could be any money in it. They scraped it out on fiddles and mountain dulcimers and banjos, ukuleles and mouth organs. They worked up their melodies from strangely inventive amalgams of Elizabethan folk music and the African based black blues. They added twists of their own like Jimmy Rogers yodelling. A yodelling cowboy? What is the connection between the Swiss Alps and the Great Plains of the Mid-West? And who cared? It worked. Their themes were of love and the pain of loss, of work and hardship and travel and poverty and trains and outlaws and poor wandering boys and the restless moving on in search of something else. No tin pan alley tycoon told them what would sell or packaged them for the mass market.

Enterprising phonograph companies might pay them as much as $50 to make a record. Rarely more. Few of them ever made a second record. Few of the recording companies survived more than a few pressings. Came the Depression with little in the way of spare cash and the rise of radio and the bottom fell out of what was left of the recording industry which did not revive until the advent of hi-fi and stereo.

Thus the great age of precommercial C&W — never to come again. Who knows what those records are worth? Who in their right mind would ever part up with one?

A Beautiful Book that's Good for the Soul

How to describe a masterpiece, when the whole is so much more than the sum of its parts? Reading something so nearly perfect as Gabrielle Roy's Children of My Heart is an exhilarating experience — one that's all too rare in the life of a reviewer.

Every once in a while, however, even reviewers get lucky. Like the first crocus in spring, Children of My Heart is good for the soul. (The more cynical and winter-weary the soul, the better.) Do read it, whether you're 12 or 90. There's no possible way you can be disappointed.

The novel is based on Gabrielle Roy's own experiences as a young schoolteacher in rural Manitoba during the 1930's. Poverty, ugliness and ignorance were plain to see in her surroundings, but so were love, generosity and goodness. In Children of My heart she has described and dramatized the good things against a background of the bad, infusing the whole with a sense of how infinitely precious and healing goodness can be.

It is her recognition of life's ugliness as well as its beauty that gives Roy's work its distinctiveness and authority. "From the school windows I could see the bleak railway station," she writes . . . "Everything was painted in that hateful ox-blood color that had no life or sparkle . . . It was a village of retired farmers, bitter or acrimonious, with barely enough to live on . . . There was nothing in the place to give you courage or confidence or hope in any tomorrow. But I only had to turn the other way, and everything changed: hope came back in giant waves; I seemed to be looking toward the future . . ."

Children of My Heart is divided into three sections.

GABRIELLE ROY . . . schoolteacher's memories

The first sets the scene with a description of opening day in a city school. The narrator's class is the youngest in the school and many of the children are immigrants who do not understand any English at all. Their difficulties are described with gentleness and humor. Next come three portraits of young pupils. One (Clair) is desolate because he has no Christmas present to give his teacher. Another (Nil) has a voice like a meadowlark and sings the songs of the Ukraine that his mother has taught him. The third ("my little Demetrioff") makes his brute of a father smile at him for the first time when he demonstrates his skill at printing on Parents' Day. Each sketch is touching and charming, saved from triviality by its author's insight into human motives and skill with words.

Part Two is a longer story about 10-year-old Andre Pasquier, who works so hard at home that "some days (he) came to school so tired that I'd have thought he had been drinking." Finally the boy confesses that he will have to quit school altogether. Months later when Andre still has not returned to school, the teacher skis across the prairie to his home. What she finds there is pathos, ennobled by courage and love.

The final section of the book is even better. it is a love story, told with the utmost tenderness and subtlety. With two pages to go before the end I found myself holding my breath for fear something might go wrong. But no, the ending is perfect.

Children of My Heart won the Governor-General's medal in its French edition in 1978; its English-speaking readers can be grateful for this speedy translation by Alan Brown.

Pondering Gabrielle Roy's creative achievement in this novel, I was reminded of this famous passage from Wordsworth's Preface to the Lyrical Ballads: "Humble and rustic life was generally chosen, because, in that condition, the essential passions of the heart find a better soil in which they can attain their maturity . . . and because in that condition the passions of men are incorporated with the beautiful and permanent forms of nature." His words provide an apt explanation for the extraordinary power and success of Children of My Heart.

The Man Who Would be Football Hero

By WALTER YOUNG

Reading reports of the Queen's return from her visit to the petroleum sheikdoms, laden with gifts of gold and jewels, one is led to ponder the essential sterility of wealth. The diseased illiterate in the back alleys of Riyadh remains untouched by his ruler's riches and is likely to remain so and his progeny after him. Making an Arab peasant a gift of the 20th century because one can afford it would cause as many problems as it solves, although they are likely to be problems the peasant would feel more positive about solving. But it remains true that without ideas, wealth is a kind of poverty.

However bizarre its politics, Alberta is not an Arab emirate and its citizens are as close to the 20th century as the citizens of Dallas or Houston are. Its wealth does raise some of the same kind of problems, however. With the Heritage Fund growing by millions daily, one would think Alberta would be well on the way to becoming a model province. All the problems that cannot be solved because we cannot afford to solve them should, in Alberta, be close to solution. But, curiously, they are not. The windfall that nature has bestowed on that province is being salted away in the Heritage Fund to earn money.

On the face of it, the Heritage Fund seems like a sound policy. Why should the citizens of today go on a beano with money from a diminishing resource giving no thought to the "generations yet unborn"? We can all say amen to that. It's the good old rainy day philosophy. But does all public sperding have only a short term benefit? Does not the eradication of slums, poverty, and disease today benefit those generations of tomorrow? And are there not all kinds of policies of that sort that would build a foundation that the next decade's children would find beneficial? Could it be that the Heritage Fund is a tacit admission of political and social bankruptcy?

Allan Hustak's biography of Peter Lougheed lends some credence to that view. The premier of Alberta really doesn't know what to do with all that money — or all that power either. The provincial election campaign gives further support to the notion. In essence Lougheed campaigned on the slogan "What would you like?" knowing that he can buy it if enough people want it. But he doesn't seem to have many ideas of his own. He obviously enjoys power, but for what purpose?

PETER LOUGHEED: A Biography*, by Allan Hustak. McClelland and Stewart. $14.95.

LOUGHEED . . . a chronicle of ambition

Although it's not likely that he intended it to be so, Hustak's biography portrays Lougheed as a man whose career has been fuelled by a compelling desire to be the football hero in everything he did. It is not a flattering portrait, for Lougheed emerges as ruthless and insensitive, a man who does not relish criticism and who cherishes sycophany and the other aspects of the panoply and perquisites of high office. The free flights of Air Canada are aspects of this side of his character. His total devotion to himself seems nicely illustrated by the fact that it wasn't until after 11 years of marriage that he asked his wife about her political beliefs — wisely, she said she was a Conservative.

When Lougheed started his move toward the party leadership, none of the people he involved in his campaign were "ideologists" as Hustak calls them. All were "practical business executives". Lougheed won the leadership because he was organized — "he had the convention in his pocket". He went on from there with a solid phalanx of such men about him. They had to be men for, characteristically, Lougheed is a thoroughly unenlightened male chauvinist. Hustak quotes one female supporter as saying, "I think he feels emasculated by aggressive women", and another that he viewed her as a mere appendage of her husband.

Once in power Lougheed set about ensuring that he stayed there. He agreed to televising debates in the provincial chamber but only if the cameras were mounted on the opposition side of the House, ensuring that viewers would be able to see government faces but only the backs of the heads of the opposition members. He assiduously cultivated and cossetted the press to the extent that "he enjoys the most uncritical press of any politician in Canada". Such a relationship was not the product of good government alone.

Hustak points out that negative reaction to Lougheed was not appreciated and hostile reporters had a difficult time of it. Moreover, the owners of the various media were, as "practical business executives", enthusiastic about Lougheed. At station CFRN there was an unwritten law that bona fide NDP news stories would be played down and relegated to the late news, "which doesn't have half as many viewers". Hustak suggests that reporting government failings is viewed by many as being anti-Albertan and often brings a personal rebuke from the premier.

In his activities on the federal-provincial front Lougheed has parlayed his province's wealth into a position of considerable power and influence. Although it seems that his national stature is more the result of nature's beneficence than Lougheed's skills. It would be difficult to deny that he has used the situation to his advantage, but equally difficult to deny that his position on the vexatious questions of our confederation has not been particularly positive or productive. Indeed, throughout the biography Hustak is hard pressed to find anything at all to say about Lougheed's ideas. It is largely a chronicle of ambition.

It all reflects the character of a man for whom staying in office is the sole objective. That is not a bad thing in a politician, but it would be pleasing to think that there was more going on than sheer self-aggrandizement. If that is the case, and if the Heritage Fund really is a substitute for a philosophy of government, then Alberta is closer to the Arab emirates than many of us thought.

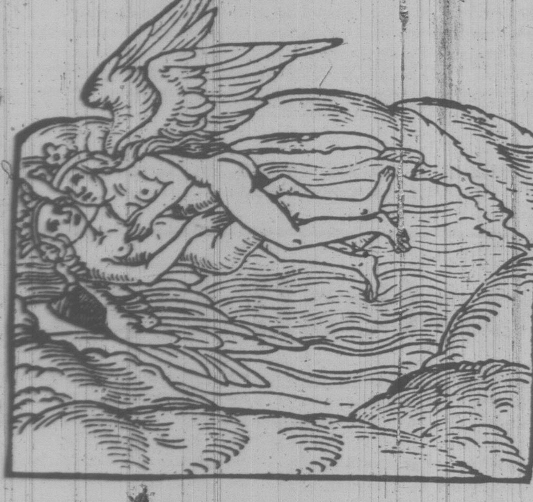
'Joyously Obscene' Work By an Audacious Poet

By DOUG BEARDSLEY

There are few poets in this country, or anywhere else for that matter, capable of making the imaginative leaps of Leonard Cohen. Death Of A Lady's Man, Cohen's latest work, is a multifariously brilliant book, successfully fusing a wide variety of forms such as journal entries, pieces of prose, prose poems, and poems, in an obscene, celebratory shout of life.

In a recent essay entitled "Looking For The Dragon Smoke," the American poet-critic Robert Bly describes the poetic leap as the movement of the mind from what is known to what is unknown and back to the known again. Leonard Cohen's best work follows some such arc of association. His links are not the private uncontrolled ones of the surrealist. Rather, his images correspond to the inner life of all of us. They are bound up in the human condition, bound to nature, and because of this we are able to associate and identify with his work and follow the path of his poems as they make their imaginative journey, a journey made magical because Cohen is one of the few writers in Canada who is both able and allowed to follow his own imagination.

The magnificent cover illustration of the spiritual union of the male and female principle, taken from a 16th century alchemical text, tips us as to the theme of Death Of A Lady's Man. The breakdown of marriage and of male-female relationships in our society is at the centre of this painful book. What we as readers bring from our own experience to each poem seems to me just as important as the poem itself in some cases. For Cohen, everything that rises must converge in the union of the two forms, for better or for worse, the emphasis decidedly on the latter in this book.



Cohen employs a unique literary device in Death Of A Lady's Man, a kind of running prose commentary from another mind that follows each piece, meditating on the original and repeating it with variations in a kind of TV replay with retrospective commentary and critical analysis. A curious resonance emerges from this juxtaposition that gives the book both its tension and a particular haunting quality.

Death Of A Lady's Man is a joyously obscene book, containing lyrical, incantatory and visionary epiphanies. Cohen has spent the greater part of his poetic life attempting to bring about the spiritual union of the saint and the sinner in each of us as he attempts to get down to the divine, and this book is no exception.

There are so many highlights, so many multi-textured layers. The poetic commentary on "Our Government-In-Exile" is an audacious, brilliant poem, a desecration of the two founding languages of Canada and of Montreal, which Cohen sees as a kind of separate Greek city-state. The poem is a scatological hymn, a profane prayer for "a sovereign state of common grace", and it is one of the most penetrating and imaginative poems ever written in and for our country. It's no secret that Cohen sees our current national crisis as a kind of lover's quarrel.

The title piece, "The Rose", and "Slowly I Married Her" will surely rank among Cohen's best songs. Although most of the pieces are impossible to quote out of context, the terrible beauty of "My Wife and I" is short enough to give in full:

> My wife and I made love this afternoon. We hid together from the light of our desire, forehead to forehead. Later she asked me, Did I taste sweet for your? Dear companion, you did. This evening I watched with pleasure as she undressed and put on her flannel pyjamas. I held her closely until she went to sleep. Then I closed the light and left the room carefully and I came down here to you.

COHEN . . . 'a celebratory shout of life'

Poems such as "The Unclear Start" and "The House" strike at the heart of conventional male-female relationships in the same way. How much hate can one hold? "There is no ceremony in this house. There is no woman being born. I cannot dignify your vigil by the window. Songs from the parchment infect my ear. We huff and we puff and we blow the house down."

There are no words to describe the truth of this book. In the end one can only echo the poet's own line from one of the earlier poems in the sequence: "There hasn't been a book like this in a long time." To quote Cohen, "It may become clear that I am the stylist of my era and the only honest man in town." Well, maybe.

I think he gets closer to the truth, however, in the piece "How To Speak Poetry" near the end of Death Of A Lady's Man: "Step aside and they will know what you know because they know it already." But we don't say it the way Cohen says it. That's what he finally gives us through his incredible poems, that and some small hope of ourselves contained in the last lines: "Long live the marriage of men and women. Long live the one heart." And the cover of the book is repeated on the last page.

DEATH OF A LADY'S MAN, by Leonard Cohen. McClelland and Stewart. $10.

Many Aspects of Love by Master Story-Teller

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

"Awful things," V.S. Pritchett begins his story 'The Skeleton', "happen to one every day: they come without warning and — this is the trouble, for who knows? — the next one may be the Great Awful Thing. Whatever that is."

For George Clark it's the enforced remembrance of the one great passion in his life, a painter named Flitestone who died young — his talent, according to Clark at least, blasted by his love for an unworthy woman. Clark himself has retreated into a snarling old age whose only pleasure is its museum of Flitestone paintings and its unceasing rejection of the rest of humanity.

Then one of Flitestone's former lovers arrives. She has a pile of Flitestone's letters she wants to sell. Still attractive, the woman herself is enough to upset Clark's senile equilibrium, but it's the letters he glances at that do the real damage: "They brought back to him the danger he had once lived in: his heart had been invaded, he had been exposed once to a situation in which the question of a victory or a defeat vanished."

SELECTED STORIES, by V.S. Pritchett. Clarke, Irwin. $20.95.

But after a night of hilarious skirmish Clark emerges victorious again. Or does he? His balance is re-established and his pathetic war with his fellows resumes.

Although its effect has very much to do with its brevity, one wished that 'The Skeleton'— so suggestive, so deftly characterized — was actually a novel. And so with others of these Selected Stories: one's interest in these characters and their lives begins on the first page and continues to the last — and, usually, beyond.

Perhaps what so intrigues about these tales is that Pritchett is writing of passions and hopes that animate us all, and don't simply end because a particular phase of the story has ended.

Love, of course, is the passion in life — there seems no escaping it — and all of the stories in this volume are concerned with aspects of love.

Sometimes — as in 'The Key To My Heart', 'Noisy Flushed The Birds', 'Noisy In The Doghouse' and 'When My Girl Comes Home' — Pritchett uses a first-person narrator to observe and comment on the characters and action. The first three stories mentioned are an inter-related account of Noisy Brackett, a ne'er-do-well gentleman racing-car driver, and his battles with his wife — battles which usually end in a hot night pursuit through the quiet countryside! But the narrator himself is caught up in the action of these stories, the intricately observed course of his attraction to the fiery Mrs. Brackett — and his continuing friendship with the husband — make these stories a novella than can be enjoyed more than once.

In 'When My Girl Comes Home' we are treated to an intense account of the setting-up and deterioration of a dream. Reality — in the form of a young woman returned after years as a prisoner of war — fails, of course, to correspond quite exactly to the dream:'

"Hilda had been our dream but now she was home she changed as fast as dreams change. She was . . . far more remote to us than she had been all the years when she was away. The idea was so far beyond us."

But reality is not, Pritchett inevitably concludes. And although it's far more prosaic than dreams, it yet demands the infusion of dream. Thus the primacy of that aspect of human life is brought clearly into focus in these stories and allows them to transcend the bounds their author — bowing to reality — has placed around them.

Of all the stories in this collection only three fail to attain the standards their author has set in his other works.

'The Fall' is an inconsequential tale whose main character fails to elicit either our sympathy or our interest because Pritchett has failed to raise him above the merely foolish; 'The Marvelous Girl' is an over-written attempt to describe a young man's successful lust, but fails again because he is rendered in terms that mitigate against our sympathy; and 'The Chain-Smoker' fails for the same reason. Selected Stories, one suspects, ought not to be chosen by their authors — who, though they're usually the best judges of their work, may sometimes be sentimentally attached to stuff better left in the drawer.

We can be thankful the others were not. They're here in this volume for anyone to read.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

The Canadian publisher:
Their greatest skill is crying for help

Once again we are being told that the Canadian publishing industry is in dire straits. Most firms are leading a hand-to-mouth existence and barely managing to survive, they tell us. What makes it all so pitiful is that these valiant, self-sacrificing, ulcer-ridden publishers are (I'm still quoting) hanging in there, working round the clock and practically denying food to their families, for patriotic motives. If it weren't for their selfless efforts, they keep telling us, we would have nothing but foreign reading material and Canada would lose the last vestige of its identity.

Well, well, well. What are we supposed to do about it? What can we do about it? The answer to both questions is nothing. The truth is that the incessant anguished howls emitted by these professional breast-beaters are directed towards the federal and provincial governments and the Canada Council. You can't blame them. They have perfected the art of howling and it has paid off in the form of tariffs and grants so, ipso facto, keep on hollering.

The alternative to screaming for handouts is so frightening it doesn't bear thinking about. It's the method employed in every other non-communist country in the world: executive ability, daring, and editorial flair. Given these assets, a publishing house stands at least a fifty-fifty chance, and with a little bit of luck it will prosper.

The fact is Canada has far too many publishing houses, and most of them don't deserve to survive. To justify its existence a house should have expertise in all departments and be on a sound financial footing. A reliance on no-strings-attached public grants is simply not good enough; it should be up to each firm whether it sinks or swims.

The point to note is that grants keep the publisher and the printer in business but rarely do anything to help authors. I refer specifically to so-called national publishers; regional publishers perform an essential function and deserve an occasional helping hand.

That's all very well but, the howlers, led by their leading whimperer, Jack McClelland, will protest, we can't survive without help and if we go under Canadian writers will be friendless and the Canadian reading public will be at the mercy of foreign firms feeding them non-Canadian material through branch plants or agents.

The solution, these cry-babies advance, is to impose high tariffs against imported books and provide grants to Canadian publishers so that the domestic product can be marketed for less than the import. In this way, they reason, Canadian talent can flourish and the danger of Canadians being imperilled by foreign literature will be minimized. This line, accepted for years by the grant-givers, has proved most profitable. It is, of course, arrant nonsense.

God knows, there are masses of Canadian books being published every year — but they are not being read. Seventy-two per cent of all books sold in Canada emanate from other countries. This has something to do with the amount of rubbishy, badly-written material published here (few book-buyers are chauvinists) but it has nothing to do with real talent: our best writers, like our best painters, singers, musicians, dancers and actors, are internationally respected and rewarded. The chief reason for the failure of Canadian publishers to capture the home market is distribution, or rather the lack of it.

MCCLELLAND . . . head cry-baby

I have been in at the birth of many a Canadian book and have witnessed the sweat and frustration of research and frequent re-writing, joined in the writer's joy at having the work accepted for publication — then had to explain why royalties were so meagre and why no foreign rights had been negotiated. And sometimes I have had to commiserate with a writer when he or she suffered the ignominy of having a book remaindered.

In every case the root cause was the publisher's failure to organize proper distribution. No matter how good a book is, or how much promotion and publicity it receives, it's doomed if it isn't displayed in a book store when an interested buyer walks in. And it is a sorry fact that the majority of Canadian publishers are deficient when it comes to marketing.

Admittedly, it's difficult. Only salesmen covering smaller communities within a radius of hundreds of miles from the larger cities really understand just how huge this country is, and because of this no Canadian publishing house can afford to keep a network of salesmen in the field handling only their books. So they market through agencies which represent several firms, domestic and foreign, and because of the obvious complications servicing outside the main cities is inefficient, irregular and is not infrequently carried out by mail.

If Canadian publishers had learned to walk before they jogged and reduced the size of their lists by being more selective in the books they published, and then spent the money saved on efficient distribution, perhaps today we would have a flourishing industry instead of a gang of comfortable mendicants crying the blues.

Nature abhors a vacuum; smart businessmen profit by it. So if experienced and astute American and British publishers saw a vacuum in Canada and moved in to fill it, who can blame them? Let me provide you with an example.

I have before me the Spring catalogue of the semi-autonomous Canadian subsidiary of an international publishing house. The head office of the so-called 'branch plant' is in Toronto and its own sales organization is distributed across the country. A Quebec-based team handles Quebec and Ottawa; a Halifax-based team handles the Atlantic provinces; others handle, respectively, eastern and northern Ontario, south-western Ontario, and Toronto and Manitoba. Alberta is handled from a Calgary office, and an impressively large Vancouver-based organization takes care of B.C., Saskatchewan, Yukon and the Northwest Territories.

I happen to know that book-store owners in even the remotest parts of the land are grateful to be visited and recognized as valued customers, and the large number of this firm's titles displayed on their shelves reflects their gratitude. No wonder this company is immensely successful and constantly expanding its operations.

Now the salient point is that this subsidiary (and it is not unique) is Canada-oriented. It not only supplies Canadians with some of the world's finest reading matter, but also publishes Canadian authors, and through its parent company and subsidiaries elsewhere is very often able to provide Canadian writers with international distribution. And it's all done without hand-wringing. And without grants.

We have a great deal of undiscovered talent in this country and it's a crying shame that Canadian publishers are doing such a lousy job. You'll note that I make no distinctions. Normally, generalizations are unfair, but in this instance I think it is warranted.

Canadian publishers are incessantly agitating for the federal government to place difficulties in the way of imports when the obvious solution is to put their own houses in order. Fortunately, their protests are being ignored. The 1-per-cent tariff on imported books was recently lifted, and I hope Ottawa continues to turn a deaf ear to the unjustified cries of woe.

I believe fervently that there should be no artificial international barriers for the written word and, as I pointed out earlier, 72 per cent of the Canadian reading public supports that view. I tell you frankly that were I to be deprived of imported books I would instantly give up reviewing and would import privately whatever I chose to read for my own pleasure and enlightenment.

Animal Tales: A Place in Sun for All Living Things

By LYN HANCOCK

Canada is often accused of not being original, of not having a distinctive identity. Yet there is one field in which she leads the world, and that is in the development of the realistic animal story — a literary genre which Ernest Thompson Seton and Sir Charles Roberts pioneered at the turn of the century and which has been carried on in the works of such writers as Roderick Haig-Brown, Cameron Langford and Fred Bodsworth.

The realistic animal story differs from earlier animal stories like Black Beauty and Wind in the Willows in that its realistic animal heroes speak by normal animal vocalizations and gestures, although these are interpreted by the author and reveal his biases in different degrees.

One of the main difficulties is the limited number of themes available. There is a limit to the ways an author can describe an animal being born, growing up, fighting to eat or avoid being eaten, and dying. Another difficulty is in describing animals factually with respect to their biology and reducing characteristics attributed to them which are human. The problem of anthropomorphism, however, becomes less as one discovers more the ability of animals to reason and remember, to feel and communicate, to reveal qualities like courage, devotion, determination, qualities that Homo Sapiens often attributes solely to itself alone.

Muriel Whitaker in Great Canadian Animal Stories has selected "Sixteen Stories by Sixteen Masters" which demonstrate some of the ways these problems are being attacked by writers of animal stories.

Not all her selections are intentionally realistic. The anthology opens with George Clutesi retelling an Indian legend, "How the Human People Got the First Fire," which also tells why the inside of all deer's knees are singed black. The book includes Christie Harris' version of "The One-Horned Mountain Goat," which describes how a young Indian obtained his goat totem. The interesting point made by the choice of these two legends is to show not only how primitive peoples treated animals with respect and gratitude but how the breakdown of old customs and beliefs occurred when Indians came into contact with Europeans.

Even if Homo sapiens' respect for other animals has diminished since primitive times, all the selections reveal the sympathy and respect felt on the part of their authors for their animal characters: Rich Hobson for "Nimpo, the Horse That Wouldn't Die"; Grey Owl for the beaver he called The Queen; Francis Dickie for Mike the sled dog. The stories show the heroism of animals without being unduly anthromorphic, even Ernest Thompson Seton's "The Springfield Fox", a sentimental story in which a mother fox brings food to her captive offspring, then finally gives it poison bait to end by sudden death "his wretched prisoner's life."

George Clutesi begins the book with a reminder that "there is a place in the sun for all living things." Fred Bodsworth ends it with the last of the curlews waiting for a mate that will never come. Eskimo curlews, once so numerous that flocks numbered many thousands, were decimated in 50 years by man's "mindless passion for killing." The choice is apt and ironic.
